RUSSIA SIGNS PEACE PLEDGE

NAVY PLANS 2 IMMENSE NEW DREADNAUGHTS

35,000 Tons, with 20 Mile Range.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—A new naval replacement program, providing for two giant battleships as well as aircraft carriers, submarines and destroyer leaders, is being prepared by the navy department for submission to congress next December, it was learned today.

In addition a number of cruisers may be added to the program to supplement the fifteen cruisers carried in the current naval bill, which President Coolidge is expected to sign Monday or Tuesday.

Tentative plans for the construction of the battleships—which are to be laid down as replacements under the terms of the Washington 5—5—3 ratio naval limitation treaty—disclose that these vessels should be the most powerful in the world. They will compare favorably in tonnage with the Rodney and Nelson, Great Britain's 35,000 ton dreadnaughts, and will be armed with 16 inch guns capable of firing a projectile approximately 20 miles.

Treaty Calls for Haste.

Just how many aircraft carriers, submarines and destroyers will be included will be determined by President Elect Hoover and his secretary of the navy. Naval officials hold, however, that under the terms of the Washington treaty, the bill providing for construction of the battleships will have to be passed by congress on schedule time or their construction abandoned. Under the terms laid down by the five powers when the naval treaty was signed the United States is permitted to lay down two battleships not to exceed 35,000 tons in 1931.

The platform under which President Elect Hoover was elected pledges the party "to round out and maintain the navy in all types of combatant ships to the full ratio provided for the United States by the Washington treaty." If this promise is carried out the next naval bill will provide for at least 55,200 tons of aircraft carriers, in addition to the battleships.

Destroyers Badly Needed.

At the present time the American navy is deficient in up to date battleships, cruisers and aircraft carriers. Its submarines and destroyer tonnage is also deteriorating rapidly and, according to the navy general board, arrangements should be made for beginning construction of these types in the near future. All American destroyers will be obsolete in 1936, according to figures submitted to congress by Admiral Charles F. Hughes, chief of naval operations.

Chairman Fred Britten [Rep., Ill.] of the house naval affairs committee, announced today that every effort will be made to bring America's aircraft carrier tonnage up to the limit prescribed by the Washington treaty as soon as practicable. He denied reports that the navy planned to replace its big carriers—the Lexington and Saratoga—because of their high operating costs. The Illinois representative also asserted that efforts of the house appropriations committee to have either the Lexington or Saratoga decommissioned to cut down expenses would be fought.

Better Than Battleships.

"The carriers we have are indispensable to the fleet," Mr. Britten said. "With from eighty to 100 planes operating from their decks, either the Lexington or Saratoga have more combatant value than any aviation field in the United States. I would not trade a plane carrier for our most formidable dreadnaught."

Mr. Britten pointed out that Great Britain has approximately twice the aircraft carrier tonnage as the United States, while Japan has about the same amount as this country.

Designs for the first five of the fifteen 10,000 ton cruisers provided in the cruiser bill now before the President have been completed. The new ships will be modeled largely on the last six of the eight Washington treaty cruisers now building. They will be lightly armored, will mount 9 eight inch guns and will be designed to make a speed of approximately thirty-four knots an hour.

The cruiser bill was the subject today of a conference between the President and Herbert M. Lord, director of the budget.

Naval activities occupied the senate today, the bill authorizing modernization of the battleships Arizona and Pennsylvania being enacted.

Admits Killing Buchholz Girl; Held in Indiana

A former employé of a Blue Island factory has confessed the slaying of Miss Laura Buchholz, 23 years old, who was clubbed to death the night of Jan. 23 as she walked from the Rock Island railroad station to her home at 327 Hansen avenue, Blue Island, it was learned last night. The man is now held for observation in the Northern Indiana hospital at Logansport. Since his confession, it was reported, he has become violent.

This information was obtained despite the apparent efforts of Blue Island police and Indiana authorities to suppress it. The confession was obtained last Monday by Sheriff Thomas B. McDonald of La Porte, Ind.

Former Wire Plant Worker.

Howard Coleman, 31 years old, until recently a worker in the American Wire Fabric plant at 136th street and Western avenue, Blue Island, is the man from whom Sheriff McDonald said he obtained the confession. Coleman's statement, according to the sheriff, tallies exactly with the circumstances of the crime.

Miss Buchholz was beaten to death in a vacant lot near 335 West 123d street, Blue Island. At that time, according to the sheriff, Coleman was working in the wire plant and boarding at a Blue Island rooming house.

A few days later Goleman left the suburb and reappeared at the home of his parents, living on the outskirts of La Porte. Last Monday, the sheriff said, Coleman's mother telephoned his office that her son had begun to act strangely.

Sheriff Hears Confession.

Two deputies went to the Coleman home and took the man to the county jail. Within an hour, the sheriff declared, Coleman had voluntarily confessed to the Buchholz slaying. The sheriff's first suspicion that Coleman may have been the slayer was provoked, he said, when the man cried:

"I clubbed her. I clubbed her."

Coleman was held throughout Monday in the county jail while the sheriff communicated with Police Chief George Fiedler of Blue Island. On Tuesday Chief Fiedler, his lieutenant, William Hanke, and George Mortos, believed to be the only witness able to identify Miss Buchholz's slayer, drove to La Porte and talked to Coleman.

Coleman was then taken to the hospital at Logansport, but was entered there under the name of Coleman Wilson, according to Dr. J. A. Lynch, the superintendent. The Indiana law prohibits extradition of mentally deranged suspects, Sheriff McDonald said in explaining why Coleman had not been returned to Blue Island.

During these developments the Blue Island weekly newspaper of last Thursday carried a guarded article on the Buchholz case, hinting that the investigation had entered a new phase and that Chief Fiedler hoped to clear it up within a week. The article continued with a plea for pledges to increase the reward for the slayer's arrest, which now stands at $6,000 although none of the money has been actually posted.

Slain on Way to Home.

Miss Buchholz, a stenographer for the Reliance Manufacturing company, 212 West Monroe street, Chicago, had been detained by an accumulation of work the night she met death. She alighted from a Rock Island suburban train at 123d street, Blue Island, about 6 p. m. The killer sprang from a thicket as she walked down 123d street on the way to her home.

An hour later Mortos, an independent contractor who unloads coal along the Rock Island tracks, was in his shanty when a man with bloody hands walked in and inquired when the next west bound freight train passed through the yards. The man washed his hands with coffee and left after declining a job, Mortos said.

2 Die, 4 Hurt as Auto Skids and Hits Train

Two girls were instantly killed, two young men were probably fatally injured, and another youth and a girl were hurt last night when their automobile skidded on icy pavement and crashed into a moving Elgin, Joliet and Eastern freight train on an unguarded crossing of the Lincoln highway two miles south of Aurora. The three couples were on their way from Joliet to a dance in Aurora.

The Dead.

Miss Alice Breen, 20 years old, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Breen, 1217 Wilcox street, Joliet, a teacher in the Joliet public schools.

Miss Gertrude Whitmer, 18 years old, daughter of F. M. Whitmer, 802 Cowles avenue, Joliet, a student in the Joliet High school.

The Injured.

Robert Spangler, 22 years old, of Plainfield, Ill., son of the late Dr. Harry Spangler, former mayor of Plainfield. He was the driver of the automobile. His skull was fractured.

Henry Schneider Jr., 22 years old, 411 Clinton street, Joliet, son of a Joliet restaurant man. His skull was fractured.

William Thompson, 22 years old, 2000 East Washington street, Joliet, son of Prof. J. M. Thompson, director of music in the Joliet public schools.

H. W. Smith, a Joliet insurance man, driving behind Spangler's car, saw the accident and notified the Aurora police, who sent an ambulance to the scene. The injured were taken to St. Charles hospital in Aurora.

MILDER WEATHER AND THEN SNOW FORECAST TODAY

A reenactment of yesterday's weather performance was billed for Chicago today, according to the program mapped by Forecaster C. A. Donnel last night.

Dawn this morning will find the temperature at 5 degrees in protected areas and as low as zero in the open suburbs, he predicted. Clear skies will prevail until late afternoon, however, allowing the sun to exert a warming influence, which, the forecaster said, will lift the temperature to 26 degrees by noon or soon after. Snow flurries are expected this evening.

HAFFA GUILTY; RIGHT TO OFFICE UNDER SCRUTINY

Alderman and Aids Face Prison.

The conviction yesterday of Ald. Titus A. Haffa [43d], who is up for reelection this month, on a charge of conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law gave rise last night to a controversy on whether the alderman would lose his citizenship and his right to hold office if he were sent to the penitentiary.

The consensus of lawyers seemed to be that Haffa would be barred from office. All were agreed, however, that the alderman is entitled to exhaust every recourse in the way of appeals, and that he will not be finally barred from holding office until his conviction and sentence are finally upheld in the higher courts. Therefore, it is pointed out, Haffa may retain his seat and continue his race for reelection unless his fellow aldermen should take steps to unseat him.

Maximum Sentence 4½ Years.

Haffa and four others were found guilty by a jury on an indictment containing eleven counts, the first ten of which charged the manufacture, transportation, possession, and sale of intoxicating liquor. The eleventh count was the conspiracy charge. If maximum sentences are given, the five each face four and one-half years in the penitentiary and fines of $15,000.

Federal Judge James H. Wilkerson received the verdict in the absence of Judge Walter C. Lindley, who heard the case and who was called to Danville Friday night by illness in his family. The verdict was sealed Friday evening after five hours' deliberation.

May Still Make Race.

Regarding Haffa's eligibility to run for reelection to the council, attorneys for the board of election commissioners yesterday stated that if the decision did not revoke his citizenship he could still remain in the race. Since the case will probably be appealed and, since the United States Circuit Court of Appeals is not likely to hand down a decision before late fall, several fellow aldermen were of the opinion that Haffa's case would be kept out of council meetings until the matter was definitely settled.

Authorities, however, were of the opinion that a sustained conviction on a felony charge immediately took away one's right to vote or to sit in any law making body. The case of former Congressman John W. Langley of Kentucky was cited in support of this claim. Langley was convicted of a similar charge, conspiracy to violate the national prohibition law, and was sent to prison. Later, when he was pardoned by President Coolidge, the executive order also restored his citizenship.

Ettelson Not Certain.

Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson gave it as his opinion that "any elected official shall vacate his office if convicted of an infamous crime or an offense involving violation of his oath of office. Before passing on this I must look up the official oath. In any case, the verdict is only a verdict until sentence is passed."

Judge Wilkerson yesterday set the hearing on motions for new trials on the part of all defendants for Wednesday when Judge Lindley will return to Chicago. In case new trials are denied, sentences will probably be imposed at that time.

Several hundred federal building attachés and spectators crowded the courtroom yesterday when the verdict was read.

Defendant Goes to Wrong Court.

Shortly after 10 o'clock, after a short delay caused by one of the defendants, Edward Hug, going to the wrong court, the jury was brought into the box. The foreman, George W. Heywood of Warrenville, Du Page county, handed the sealed verdict to Clerk A. L. Van Alstyne. Haffa, showing slight signs of nervousness, sat at the rear of his counsel's table with the other defendants, Sam Simon, Hug, Joseph Bagheria, and Henry Murray.

Clerk Van Alstyne read the verdict in a clear voice. "We, the jury, find the defendants guilty as charged in the indictment."

Haffa cleared his throat and stood up with Attorneys Joseph Rosch, Barratt O'Hara, and Everett Jennings while motions for a new trial were presented to Judge Wilkerson. With hearing of the motions set for Wednesday, Haffa picked up his coat and moved toward the door. A reporter

Agrees with 4 Neighbors to Outlaw War

MOSCOW, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Soviet Russia this evening signed with four neighboring countries a protocol making immediately effective among themselves the terms of the Kellogg pact for renunciation of war. Maxim Litvinoff, assistant commissar of foreign affairs, signed for Russia; Minister Patek for Poland, Minister Osolsk for Latvia, Minister Belyama for Esthonia, and Roumanian Minister to Poland Devilla signed for his country.

M. Litvinoff, in his speech before the signing of the protocol, said:

"The document that we are signing today is an exceptional international act; one may say an act unprecedented in history. The participators do not assume any new obligations of another document, but this circumstance does not diminish the significance of the protocol as an international act.

Double Pledge of Peace.

"Our countries now outlaw war before other lands, but this is not the only significance of the protocol. When governments which already have outlawed war under a common international agreement solemnly reaffirm that, not awaiting the coming into effect of any act obligating all peoples, they have decided to give immediate effect to such obligations among a limited group of countries, they have taken a double pledge of peace.

"Each signatory pledges before the world to maintain peace in certain geographical sectors, and the greater have been the fears heretofore inspired from such a sector the more significant is today's act."

Esthonia and Latvia had not been expected to join until later, but this afternoon the ambassadors from both countries received telegrams empowering them to sign the protocol simultaneously with the others.

Ends Danger of Conflicts.

The signing thus was converted into a peace demonstration participated in by countries which since the end of the world war have been considered as perpetually in danger of new military conflicts.

The ceremony took place in the conference hall of the foreign office and was witnessed by a number of diplomats, officials of the foreign office and all foreign newspaper correspondents in Moscow.

Most of the delegates came in simple, workday clothes except the Polish and Roumanian delegates, who wore frock coats. Each of the delegates spoke briefly and most of those present joined in drinking Crimean champagne, which closed the ceremony.

CALLED SOVIET VICTORY

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

RIGA, Latvia, Feb. 9.—The special agreement putting the Kellogg pact to outlaw war into force immediately, which was signed by the soviet government, Roumania, Poland, Latvia, and Esthonia this evening at Moscow was hailed by the soviet press as the greatest victory in recent years for bolshevik diplomacy.

The agreement, which was sponsored by Acting Commissar of Foreign Affairs Maximovitch Litvinoff has been first page story in the Moscow papers for weeks. Communist writers accused their western neighbors who hesitated to sign of being unwilling to renounce their intention to provoke war with Russia for England, whom the bolsheviks allege are attempting to form a united front of enemy states along the soviet frontier.

See Defeat for Britain.

The newspapers Isvestia and Pravda call the agreement a defeat for British diplomacy, and emphasize the good impression it is expected to make on the United States, who has now received positive proof of the pacifistic intentions of the bolshevik régime.

EUROPE URGES YOUNG TO HEAD DEBT EXPERTS

Asks Coolidge O. K. on Selection.

BY HENRY WALES.

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Feb. 9.—The dozen delegates of France, Great Britain, Germany, Italy, Belgium and Japan today unanimously urged Owen D. Young to accept the chairmanship of the financial experts' conference which will revise the Dawes plan for the payment of German reparations. They met at a luncheon which Emil Moreau, governor of the Bank of France, gave today. J. Pierpoint Morgan joined in urging the General Electric company's chief to take the honor.

Mr. Young cabled President Coolidge asking if there was any objection in view of his recent statement that he believed that it would be more ideal if a European was selected to preside at the conference, because it is to deal with European problems.

It is expected here that the White House will withdraw any objection and that Mr. Young will be able to announce his acceptance at the opening meeting on Monday. In fact, the secretariat has already ordered the stationery for the conference with Mr. Young's name engraved on it as chairman.

Alternates May Aid Deliberations.

At the luncheon the delegates discussed whether the alternate delegates should sit at conference and the general opinion was favorable to this, as it was pointed out that the alternates must keep apprised of the negotiations in order to be able to take part in the debates in case of the illness of the chief delegate.

There was a terrific row between a news photographer and a big gendarme at the gate of the Banque de France just as the American delegates arrived. This amused Mr. Young, but had a depressing effect on Mr. Morgan. The camera men were hustled away by the police.

Fix Five Weeks' Time Limit.

PARIS, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Five weeks was set today as the limit for consideration of the reparations problem by the new commission of experts. Speed was the password adopted at the first meeting of the commission which was held this morning under the temporary chairmanship of Emile Moreau, governor of the Bank of France.

All the delegates, Germans, allies and Americans, agreed at this informal "get acquainted" gathering that if they could not find a basis for a final settlement of Germany's war accounts within five weeks, there was a likelihood they never would agree.

There was unanimous demand at the meeting that Owen D. Young of the United States become permanent chairman. In both allied and German circles it was emphasized that since the United States delegates seemed destined to wield a preponderant influence on the committee deliberations, they should assume corresponding responsibilities and therefore it was proper that Mr. Young should become presiding officer.

Will Set Total of Debt.

The finding of a fresh total of German reparation payments, and also the fixing of the number of annual installments, was stated on all sides to be the heart of the whole problem. Therefore those two aspects of the situation probably will be tackled first.

J. P. Morgan and Thomas W. Lamont, the other American delegates, spent the entire afternoon delving into figures and details of payments under the Dawes plan which were submitted to them by S. Parker Gilbert, agent general of reparations. None of them would discuss the day's developments except to praise the menu served by the chef of the Bank of France. Mr. Young did say that he "really would rather serve as a plain American delegate," instead of as permanent chairman.

Expect to Cut Present Figure.

French members of the commission admitted that the total German reparations probably would be decreased by the present negotiations. They emphasized, however, that this reduction on the credit side of their reparations ledger must be counterbalanced by similar reductions on their debit side.

No official figures were mentioned. It was said, however, that if France should be asked to accept $10,000,000,000 for reconstruction of war-devastated territory and for pensions and similar claims, then the French debts to Great Britain and the United States would need to be reduced. France was prepared to make further sacrifices in the cause of peace, but expected her allies and associates to bear their shares of such sacrifices.

Seven Kinds of Wine.

The French cuisine scored with all the delegates. At the luncheon seven vintages of wine, to say nothing of Napolean 1820 cognac, made the American delegates realise that they were far from home.

The luncheon started with Ostend oysters, with Chablis 1921 as the beverage. Then came "lobster l'Americaine, Pouilly 1919," and both Mr. Morgan and Mr. Young admitted afterward that they had never before met that sort of an American lobster. A barbecue of venison was accompanied with Chateau Rothschild Bordeaux of 1881 vintage. The bird course was washed down with Clovougeot 1921, and the salad, of fresh asparagus, with Chateauyanem 1910.

Champagne made nineteen years ago accompanied the ice cream. Next came cheese, fruits and coffee, and finally the "Cognac Napoleon 1820." The chef called special attention to that, and when it was pointed out that in 1820 Napoleon was in exile in St. Helena, he said earnestly:

"Yes, but the 1820 Napoleon cognac was much better than that of any of the emperor's happier years."

Members of Commission.

The experts committee is made up as follows:

Great Britain—Sir Josiah Stamp and Lord Revelstoke, both directors of the Bank of England.

France—Emile Moreau, governor of the Bank of France, and Jean V. Parmentier, director of movement of funds at the ministry of finance and member of the reparations committee on transfers.

Belgium—Emile Francqui, former finance minister, and M. Gutt, a leading banker and recognised expert on European finance.

Japan—Kengo Mori, former financial attaché in London, and M. Aoki, under governor of the Imperial Bank of Japan.

Coolidge May Not Interfere.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—(AP)—While President Coolidge prefers that a delegate from another country serve as chairman of the committee of experts now considering German reparations in Paris, it was believed here tonight that neither he nor the state department would interpose an objection to the selection of Owen D. Young for that post.

GERMANY BUILDS ON LOANS SAND, SCHACHT CLAIMS

Will Cite Interest Fees to Debt Experts.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1929 By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—What Germany will tell the international experts assembled in Paris to revise the Dawes plan can be revealed today on the eve of the meeting.

The chief of the German delegation, Hjalmar Schacht, president of the German reichsbank, summarised his views on finances and economics in Germany.

"An important feature in the recent development of German economics is that several industries, in order to be able to sell cheaply abroad were forced to screw up their prices on the home market," he said. "Nevertheless, our economics showed remarkable power of resistance to all depressing factors. This was mainly due to the influence of foreign loans, which continue to pour into the country.

Borrowed Vast Sums.

"During the transition years we absorbed 1,700 million dollars in long term credits from abroad. Our banks handled 1,430 million dollars in short term loans. Other branches of German business went borrowing. Foreign capital bought German shares. Naturally this was used to strengthen our production machinery and led to an increase in consumption, which netted some savings.

"The important point which the international experts will have to discuss in Paris is whether or not Germany can export enough goods to pay interest on these loans—the interest amounting to 250 million dollars—and at the same time pay the annuities prescribed by the Dawes plan experts. Credits granted Germany are safe. They can be refunded if necessary through sale of movable property. They are still safer as long as the transfer clause provided in the Dawes plan is in force.

"Heretofore the transfer of annuities has been possible only with the help of credits taken up abroad. Therefore, it must be examined carefully to see whether this can and should be continued."

Unemployment Is Increasing.

A similar view was taken by the men whom Owen Young, on his last visit to Germany characterized as "one of the best informed men I met," Peter Grassmann, socialist member of the reichstag and prominent labor leader. Herr Grassman said:

"The Dawes plan enabled us to cut out the worst of the misery and bring the masses of the country back closer to the pre-war standard of living, but right now we are in danger of losing the ground won in a slow struggle. Unemployment is increasing steadily. In all parts of the country employers, in an effort to reduce the cost of production, are trying to cut wages. This week 50,000 textile workers were locked out because they refused a wage cut of 8½ per cent. Men get $7.50 per week, women $5 per week. It is a mystery how they live on it.

"I and my friends are convinced that only men and women who are desperate and hungry, who see no hope ahead, become communists, and therefore we are trying everything in our power to help them get living wages. We know the bolsheviki are pouring funds into Germany to agitate for their cause. The hungrier and more unhappy our people are, the easier it is for bolshevik agitators to convert them. Our people want to work, they want to save, but it is getting harder all the time.

Face Shortage of Capital.

"An industry, which is compelled to try to reduce its workers to the lowest wage scale in order to produce cheaply enough to be able to sell abroad, must be sick.

"Investigating you find two important unfavorable factors: Such a shortage of capital among German industrialists that they are compelled to take up loans at exorbitant rates of 10 to 15 per cent. They cannot compete with the producer whose money costs him at the most, 6 per cent. Second, the unfavorable factor of taxes, both direct and indirect.

"The total of German direct taxation is close to $4,000,000,000, which is more than four times more than before the war. Indirect taxation, customs on sugar, tobacco, alcohol, beer, wine, railroad freight, and post increases the tax bill more than 100 per cent.

Can Feed Only 40,000,000.

"Germany can feed only 40,000,000 people, the balance of 23,000,000 must be fed on imported food, which increases the indirect taxation.

"Another tax is seen in the social insurances, against which many employers are protesting, but it is necessary to give the masses the feeling that we are doing something for them to prevent them from succumbing to the lure of bolshevik propaganda. There is illness, invalidity, unemployed, and crisis insurance.

"Miners, for instance, must pay out 30 per cent of their pay envelope in insurance money. It is hard on them, yet it is the only means we can find to protect them from absolute poverty in illness and old age. It is bearable as long as we can give them jobs, but as long as we cannot produce cheaply enough to sell abroad we see jobs dwindling and we are caught in a vicious circle."

$12,00,000,000 Already Paid

Still more pessimistic reports emanate from representatives of German agriculture. Only financiers say there is a ray of hope.

The expert, Dr. J. W. Reichert, figured out that payments made by Germany from the end of the war until the beginning of the Dawes plan payments were never taken into consideration. With the delivery of land, ships, goods and cash Germany has paid between $11,000,000,000 and $12,000,000,000. The expert, Dr. Klein, discovered that Great Britain, after seizing German private property worth $300,000,000, auctioned it off for a song, but should be able to retrieve a minimum of $150,000,000 through careful accounting.

CLEAR ROADS BY RADIO AS KING GOES TO SEASIDE

British Monarch Stands Trip Well, Report.

BY JOHN STEELE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, Feb. 9.—One of the most memorable moments in the life of King George, V came today. After weeks away from his subjects during which he appeared to be at death's door, the sovereign was given a fleeting glimpse of huge crowds of cheering men, women and children as the royal ambulance drove out of Buckingham palace gates at 10:24 a. m. carrying the invalid king to Craigwell house, Bognor, Sussex, where it is hoped he will begin convalescence.

A waving white arm inside the specially constructed ambulance was all that the majority of spectators saw of the king, but it was sufficient to send them into ecstasies of delight which continued until Queen Mary drove out five minutes later. She took a short cut to Bognor to arrive before her husband and superintend his reception.

Crowds Line Route

At frequent intervals along the sixty-four mile route were crowds of smiling cheering subjects, who likewise received a friendly wave from the ambulance window. A police auto, equipped with wireless, kept the road cleared of traffic. Twice during the two hour and fifty minute journey the car slowed down to five miles per hour for a few minutes while the attending nurse administered nourishment.

Immediately upon his arrival at Craigwell house, the king ate and then fell asleep. The following bulletin was issued from Craigwell house this evening:

"His majesty, the king, traveled to Craigwell house without undue fa-

Splendid Escorts Commended

Despite the difficult task of carrying the stretcher up the narrow stone stairway of Craigwell house, the ambulance attendants were credited with amazing skill.

The memorable royal procession included several motors besides the ambulance. In a royal household car, Sir Derek Keppel, master of the household, Col. Seymour and Sir Clive Wigram, equerries, and a nurse rode. Another carried the royal physicians, Sir Stanley and Lord Dawson, and in a third were the stretcher bearers. In addition, the king's ambulance, which was driven by a royal chauffeur of twenty years' service, carried an ambulance attendant and two nurses. The sole attendant of Queen Mary was Lady Bertha Dawkins, lady in waiting.

Asks Assembly to Permit Emergency Bonds.

The sanitary district trustees will go before the legislature this week with a plan to finance the improvements which the government has decreed must go forward.

President Howard W. Elmore and some of his associates will take with them to Springfield the draft of a bill stating precisely the form of legislative relief they consider necessary. They will ask the restoration, in a limited form, of the bonding power the district enjoyed until this year—the right to issue permanent improvement bonds without a referendum.

The limitation proposed by the trustees is that the power to issue bonds shall be restricted to those issues required for the completion of the federal government program for the construction of sewage disposal facilities upon which—at the pleasure of Washington—depends the district's permission to divert water from Lake Michigan.

Considered as Emergency.

The issuance of all other bonds, the district's bill will provide, must be subject to the approval of the voters. It will be the contention of President Elmore and the other trustees that the fulfillment of the Washington program is not a matter for local discretion, that the federal orders are mandatory, and that even a postponement of work until a referendum—with its uncertainties—is too serious a risk to ask the community to take.

It is probable that some member of the senate will be asked to introduce the bill and that an immediate hearing will be asked. If the hearing cannot be held this week, a request will be presented that representatives of the board be allowed to appear before both houses, either in separate sessions or in a joint session, some day next week.

Consider Starr Bill.

President Elmore and Trustee Henry Berger have been invited to appear before the senate executive committee on Thursday and it is possible that the bonding bill may be discussed to some extent at that time, but the subject the two members have been asked to discuss is the Starr resolution aimed toward having the state take over the district, the trustees being appointed by the governor.

Trustee Ross A. Woodhull is expected to accompany Elmore and Berger. They will present legal arguments to show that the Starr proposal is unconstitutional. They are said to feel confident of coping with that situation, so they are concentrating their attention on the relief bill.

The general provision of the proposed bill limiting the purposes for which bonds may be issued with a vote of the people reads as follows:

"After Dec. 31, 1928, no such sanitary district shall issue bonds for any purpose or purposes except for the purpose or purposes of complying with any direction or directions of the United States government or with the conditions and requirements of any permit now in force or which may hereafter may be issued by the United States government or the secretary of war or for the purpose or purposes of complying with any decree of any court of the United States government and any other government; and for the purpose of paying legal claims for damage to land or other property unless the proposition shall have first been submitted to the legal voters and approved by a majority of those voting on the proposition."

Elmore Presents Case.

A summary of some of the high spots of the argument that President Elmore has had prepared in support of the bill is as follows:

"Ordinarily a referendum on the bond issue is a suitable and correct method of having the question of the public desire for an improvement passed upon. This principle has become established in the public mind.

"Where the government of the United States has given mandatory instructions to a local government, the question of discretion or desire on the part of the people of Illinois is not involved. The duty is mandatory and is practically under coercion by the United States government and may be enforced by suitable action.

"Therefore the money must be expended. There is no question of desire or assent involved. Therefore the principle of referendum is not involved.

"With these premises in view we have amended the act giving bonding power to the sanitary district by preserving the principle of the referendum and requiring it for all other permanent improvements except those made necessary by governmental authority.

Quotes Hughes' Finding.

"Former Secretary Charles Evans Hughes, as a special master, presented the situation clearly in his report to the United States Supreme court when he said that 'the present flow from Lake Michigan through the drainage canal could not immediately be cut off or reduced to 1,000 cubic feet per second and, in consequence, the sewage of the sanitary district in its present condition turned into Lake Michigan, without exposing the inhabitants of the district to grave risk of water borne diseases by contamination of the water supply taken from the lake. The Chicago river and the waters of the lake about the city would be filthy and noisome, with serious injury to the commerce of Chicago harbor.'

"The question of complying with the conditions and requirements of the federal government cannot logically be submitted to the hazards of a referendum.

"Therefore, it is our opinion, that if the principle of the referendum is retained by giving the people authority to pass on new projects which the legislature may authorize, though it be lifted from those things that the district must do whether the people approve or not, a fair solution is presented to the entire problem."

Opinion on Starr Bill.

The legal opinion given to President Elmore by Walter E. Beebe, attorney for the board, on the Starr resolution, was drafted by Frank Johnston Jr., former Circuit judge who served for several years in the Appellate court.

"In my opinion," it began, "the legislature has not the power to pass such an act unless the act provides that the question of the proposed changes shall be submitted to the people of the sanitary district for their adoption or rejection; and if the people of the sanitary district do not give their assent to the change, the act would be invalid and inoperative.

"If the act does not contain such a provision it will contravene Section 9 of Article IX. of the constitution, since that section, as construed by the Supreme court, prohibits the legislature from granting the power to assess and collect the taxes of any municipality to any other persons than the municipal officers who have been elected by the people or who have been appointed in some mode to which the people have given their assent."

ASSASSIN OF OBREGON SHOT; CRIES MARTYR

Places Hand on Heart to Guide Bullets.

BY JOHN CORNYN.
[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MEXICO CITY, Feb. 9.—José de Leon Toral paid the penalty for his assassination of President Elect Alvaro Obregon on July 17 before a firing squad in the district penitentiary at 12:33 o'clock today. Toral fell in front of the bullet scarred wall of the prison courtyard facing the cell occupied by Madre Conchita, the nun who was found guilty with Toral of the assassination.

The youth died proclaiming himself a martyr to the causes of religion and Mexico.

Toral was marching between his guards and talking to them as he rounded the angle of the building and came in sight of the score of representatives of the native and foreign press who were present. He took his place ten paces from the firing squad with his back to a pile of sacks filled with sand. He placed his right hand over his heart, to guide the bullets.

Bullets Strike Heart.

Almost immediately the commander of the squad gave the command to present arms and to fire in a voice that went resounding through the long corridor. Toral shuddered convulsively, doubled forward and fell over on his right side. All of the five bullets took effect in the region of the heart and death was instantaneous. The commander of the squad then stepped forward and immediately gave the obligatory coup de grace, a revolver shot behind the left ear. He used a pistol given to him by the late Gen. Obregon.

In less than two minutes after the prisoner had appeared in the court yard all was over and the small crowd of witnesses was moving rapidly away from the scene of the tragedy with the feeling that a no more machinelike execution had ever taken place within the walls of the penitentiary.

Cries "Viva Cristo."

Toral was dressed in black with prison stripes on his trousers. He wore a gray and black prison cap which he took off and with which he saluted the firing squad in the cool and self-possessed manner which has been characteristic of all his actions since his arrest nearly seven months ago, immediately after his assassination of Gen. Obregon. As the rifles were leveled on him he began to repeat the rallying cry of the Roman Catholics, "Viva Cristo Rey" (Long live Christ the King), but he had only uttered "Viva Cristo" when he fell.

Shortly before the execution Toral said, "I shall die without uneasiness, with the unalterable conviction that I am going into unity with God. I have suffered continuously and today I finish my Calvary." He told a prison guard that he dreamed last night that the Virgin Mary beckoned him to heaven.

Toral's father and mother stayed with him all the morning till 11:30, when the mother was carried out in a hysterical condition. His father remained until noon.

Toral Permitted to Have Priest.

The head of the federal district yesterday cut the Gordian knot which threatened to prevent Toral from having the last rites of the church by going back to a clause of the reformed constitution of 1857 which guarantees for Mexicans, including criminals condemned to death, the last rites of the church. In doing so he waived the fact that the confession and the other rites would have to be done by a priest who had not registered in conformity with the law, as no others exist in Mexico today.

An Augustine monk, Ignacio de Jesus, Flores, was designated by Toral for the performance of the religious offices. The general sentiment of the public commends this decision of Dr. Puig y Casarauno as judicious.

SUES DOCTOR

MRS. LUCIA SELVIDGE.
[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Dr Frederick Doyle, owner of the Northern hospital and dispensary, 2314 North Clark street, was sued for $10,000 yesterday by Mrs. Lucia Hester Selvidge, an artists' model. The girl, who is about 20 years old, is asking damages on charges of false imprisonment and assault and battery, according to her lawyer, Lloyd A. Faxon. The attorney said she was held in a room for about twenty minutes while she fought with the doctor when she took her baby to the institution for a minor operation last month.

POPE CORRECTS FINAL PROOF OF PACT WITH ITALY

Peace Agreement to Be Signed Tomorrow.

ROME, Feb. 9.—(F)—A succession of developments today brought nearer to the formal consummation Monday the settlement of the Roman question. The pope today with the assistance of his negotiators corrected final proofs of the texts of the treaty and its accompanying concordat.

The Italian government notified all Italian ambassadors and ministers abroad of the agreement and of the forthcoming signing. This was the first official move made by that government in connection with the question.

Cardinal Gasparri, papal secretary of state, although suffering from a severe cold, received the diplomats accredited to the holy see this morning and heard their congratulations before retiring to his room where he remained the rest of the day.

Swedish King Felicitates Pope.

King Gustav of Sweden visited the pope today and congratulated him during a fifteen minute chat on the reconciliation with Italy. He was the first crowned head of Europe to do this. French Ambassador De Fontenay was the first diplomat accredited to the Vatican to present congratulations to the pope, which he did early this afternoon.

The treaty has been printed in the secret printing shop of the Vatican by workmen who have not been permitted to leave the Vatican or even to talk to other persons within the building. The Vatican has one of the best printing houses in Rome, especially for Latin texts, where most of the ecclesiastical, liturgical and theological works of the church are produced.

But besides this there is a secret printing house to which no one has access except high officials of the papal department of state. Here are employed old and trusted printers who have spent their entire lives in the same employment as their fathers and grandfathers.

Pins Goes Over Proofs.

The final proofs of their work on the Italo-Vatican treaty were corrected today by the pope for the last time. In going over certain passages he often remained with his pen in the air, undecided whether to put in or to omit a comma. He said: "There are cases where the presence or absence of a comma entirely modifies the meaning."

Finally, late tonight the corrected proofs were released for the final printing. Thus the official text now exists which will be signed Monday morning by Cardinal Gasparri and Premier Mussolini. Later, it will be ratified by Pius XI. and Victor Emanuel III.

KENOSHA POLICE SLAY OWNER OF DRINK PARLOR

Tony Dudzinsky, 45 years old, owner of a soft drink parlor in Kenosha and the father of four children, was shot and killed early this morning in a scuffle with two Kenosha policemen who entered his place, they said, to buy liquor for evidence of violation of the prohibition law.

William Detert, the policeman who fired the shot that killed Dudzinsky, was ordered held by Inspector Charles Rock pending the verdict of a coroner's jury. Detert has been a member of the Kenosha police force for two months. His partner was William Chendonais, a policeman for six months.

Detert said he and Chendonais entered Dudzinsky's establishment after raiding eight other soft drink parlors, and purchased a small quantity of moonshine from Dudzinsky's wife, Mary.

Detert admitted he then told the woman the liquor was to be used as evidence and that she screamed, summoning her husband and seven other men in the place. When one of the men struck at him Detert and Chendonais drew their pistols, they said, and Detert fired as Dudzinsky struck the gun from his hand. The bullet struck Dudzinsky near the heart. The policemen were in plain clothes.

SMOOT WARNS NOT TO BOOST TARIFF TOO HIGH

Believed to Express the Views of Hoover.

[illegible]HUR CRAWFORD.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Exorbitant demands for tariff increases will be refused by congress, Senator Reed Smoot [Rep., Utah], chairman of the senate finance committee, asserted today upon his return from a week's visit with President Elect Herbert Hoover.

Senator Smoot's position was regarded as reflecting the views of Mr. Hoover, who is reported to be disturbed over the possibility of a runaway tariff, with rates so high as to react against the Republican party in the next campaign.

As outlined by Senator Smoot, the program contemplates a general revision of agricultural rates and scattering increases among rates of other schedules of the present Fordney-McCumber act.

Some Slight Increases.

Even the agricultural rates, Senator Smoot said, will not be boosted as high as some of the farm groups desire. The Utah senator was of the opinion that the wool growers would not be granted the increase which they are seeking, nor would the beet and cane sugar producers get more than a slight increase.

Wheat duties, he said, and those on eggs also would not be advanced as far as some would like. Some rates suggested by farm groups Senator Smoot described as "unreasonable." However, he said, the upward revision of agricultural rates would be far-reaching and sufficient to provide adequate protection.

While Senator Smoot said that the revision would not be "general" as applied to other than agricultural rates he made it plain that there will be some boosts in nearly all the schedules. This does not mean, he insisted, that all industries will get everything they are asking for. The purpose, nevertheless, will be to give higher duties wherever actually needed.

Wool Mills Protected.

"The cotton manufacturing industry is an example of one which greatly needs higher duties," said Senator Smoot. "This applies especially to the finer cotton yarns and cloths. The coarser grades are well protected. The decline in the cotton manufacturing industry in New England has demonstrated the need of greater protection in certain particulars. The woolen manufacturing industry does not need greater protection to the same extent. Also the dye manufacturers received ample protection in the last act.

"There are other industries where more protection is needed. There will be the question of putting cement, brick, and shingles, now on the free list, on the dutiable list. If a duty is placed on hides it will be necessary to put a duty on shoes. Any increases in duties on raw materials entering into manufactured products must be accompanied by compensatory rates on the latter."

The flexible tariff provision of the law, Senator Smoot said, may be modified, but the principle will be retained. There will be some consideration of a new basis of valuation, but he thought the proposition would not be as far reaching as was contemplated in the proposal of 1921 for the substitution of American valuation for the foreign invoice basis.

The new tariff bill, in Senator Smoot's opinion, will be in effect an amendment to different sections of the present law rather than a complete new measure. At the same time he thought it might be desirable as a matter of convenience to reenact the entire law, incorporating such changes as may be made.

Although the extent of the tariff revision will be limited to as narrow a field as is justified by conditions, Senator Smoot said it is intended to complete the job at the coming session. There will be no further revision for years, he said.

The reports that there might be a partial revision at the coming session and a general revision next winter are erroneous, he indicated.

Silent on Cabinet Post.

With reference to cabinet appointments, Senator Smoot was noncommittal, insisting that he could not speak for the President Elect. He admitted, however, that it was unlikely that Louis S. Cates of Salt Lake City, prominent mining engineer whom he has boosted for appointment as secretary of the interior, would obtain the place. Senator Smoot thought that Mr. Cates might be useful to the government in a different position.

The special session will be called by Mr. Hoover early in April, Senator Smoot said, and may run until the middle of July. He was hopeful that it would be possible to limit its activities to tariff revision and farm relief.

FLIGHT HALTED

HERBERT HOOVER JR.

Atlanta, Ga., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Bad weather today forced Herbert Hoover Jr., to cancel plans for a resumption of his flight to Miami to join the President Elect. He arranged instead to complete the journey by train.

The son of the next President arrived here shortly after midnight after a night flight in an airplane piloted by Capt. Edward M. Haight from Spartanburg. He hopped off from Washington yesterday afternoon.

TARIFF TO AID FARMER

BY PHILIP KINSLEY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Miami Beach, Fla., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—President Elect Hoover has indicated in a concrete manner his intention of aiding the farmers of this country through tariff revisions.

Farmers of Florida stand in need of help in the marketing of their vegetables crop and Mr. Hoover has assured them they will get this protection.

The higher tariff movement has been under way in this state since 1927 and had a great deal to do with the vote of Florida turning Republican, an event which old residents thought impossible.

Important Political Bearing.

Mr. Hoover's policies and the action of the Republican congress on the tariff will have a more important bearing on the future of the party in the south than any rewards of political patronage possibly could bring, according to political observers here.

Many have called on the President Elect to remind him in a gentle way that they worked for him during the campaign. The old political method would be to reward them directly. Mr. Hoover is not making appointments on that basis, but his consideration of the economic structure of the south is expected to bring larger and more permanent political results.

In this tariff question Mr. Hoover faces the resentment of Latin America, for when he helps the Florida farmer he hurts those of Mexico and Cuba and other countries. He has been alive to this phase of the tariff question, particularly since his trip to South America, where he frankly discussed it with those who complained against such discriminations and found it the basis of much of the ill feeling against the United States.

Welfare of Farmers.

Mr. Hoover told these people that he was in the same position that they were and that his first consideration was the welfare of the farmers of his own country.

Florida farmers have told him their troubles, and they are assured that help will come from the Republican administration. Just now it is reported that 65 per cent of the Mexican tomato crop has been killed by cold weather, and that means a $15,000,000 crop in Florida which has been feeling the Mexican competition keenly. Mexico's bad luck is Florida's good fortune.

If the growers of Florida get the 2 cents a pound tariff on tomatoes they see $8,000 acres planted next year and $15,000,000 to $20,000,000 received for the crop.

Vast Vegetable Garden.

Tariff protection on other vegetables also is sought, as Florida with drainage and reclaimed land will make a vast vegetable garden.

The President Elect and Mrs. Hoover were hosts to Boy and Girl Scouts on the lawns of Belle Isle today. They were presented with a truck load of vegetables grown in the Miami district and the captains of the charter fishing boats gave Mr. Hoover a new fishing rod.

After luncheon he left on the houseboat Sauntorer for a two day trip around the keys into the gulf of Mexico, landing at Fort Myers next Monday morning. He will fish a day or two and will return here on Thursday, leaving the next day on his farm inspection trip. Besides his hosts, Mr. and Mrs. Jeremiah Millbank, the other members of the party will be Mr. and Mrs. Edgar L. Rickard of New York.

The Day in Congress

SENATE

The senate passed the District of Columbia appropriation bill cutting it by approximately $10,000,000 for district government activities.

The senate passed numerous minor bills on its calendar.

Senator Reed Smoot, [Rep., Utah], upon his return from a visit to Herbert Hoover asserted that, asserted that demands for tariff increases will be rejected.

A sub-committee of the senate interstate commerce committee was named to consider coal legislation.

HOUSE

The house passed the so-called "migratory bird bill," authorizing expenditures aggregating nearly $2,000,000 in the next 10 years for the creation of a nation-wide system of bird sanctuaries.

Representative Loring Black, [Dem., N. Y.], offered a resolution providing inquiries to the federal reserve board relative to the part played by Montagu Norman, governor of the Bank of England, in the recent attempt to control speculation.

3 NEW NAMES ARE LINKED WITH HOOVER CABINET

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Walter F. Brown of Ohio, first assistant secretary of commerce, and William N. Doak of West Virginia, vice president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, are the latest cabinet selections made by President Elect Herbert Hoover, according to reports current here today.

Mr. Brown is slated, according to Washington friends of the President Elect, to become postmaster general, succeeding Postmaster General Harry S. New of Indiana. Mr. Doak is scheduled, according to the same sources, to be named secretary of labor to succeed James J. Davis of Pennsylvania.

Stuart Cramer, North Carolina textile man, engineer, and naval academy graduate, is to be selected as the southern representative in the next administration, is another report.

Mr. Cramer, according to those who have talked with Mr. Hoover, has been chosen for secretary of the navy to succeed Curtis Wilbur, whose brother has been picked for eventual if not immediate place at the head of the interior department.

LINDY INVITED TO SEE HOOVER FETE ON MARCH 4

Event to Be Most Photographed in History.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh today was invited to participate in the Hoover inaugural festivities.

The inaugural committee mailed the flyer a specially embossed invitation. Assistant Postmaster General Glover, executive secretary of the committee, said Lindbergh would stop in Washington on his return flight from Central America. It was indicated the request that he participate in the ceremonies would be personally confirmed at this time.

300 Photographers to Attend.

The inauguration will be "the most photographed event in history," committee members said today, and they were busy assisting photographers in making arrangements. More than 300, it was said, will "cover" the event.

Sound movie producers have guaranteed to reproduce scenes at the ceremonies of inducting the president and vice-president on Broadway on the evening of March 4. Films will be transported to New York in airplanes, which will be specially equipped to permit development of the negatives en route.

Dr. Hubert C. Work, chairman of the Republican national committee, today accepted the post of marshal of the second division of the inaugural parade.

Summerall Named Marshal.

Maj. Gen. Charles P. Summerall has been named grand marshal, and his aide will be his chief of staff, Brig. Gen. George E. Simonds.

Major Gen. Fred W. Sladen, U. S. A., commander of the third corps area, will be marshal of the first division of the parade. This sector will be composed of representatives of the three branches of national defense, while Dr. Work will lead the division made up of state governors and other distinguished guests, and their military and civilian escorts.

The plan to reproduce the ceremonies by television has been abandoned.

TWO PHYSICIANS FACE INQUIRY ON WOMAN'S DEATH

Bundesen Orders Them Called to Inquest.

Dr. Benjamin Breakstone, chief surgeon at the West End hospital, 35 South Hoyne avenue, and Dr. Ira B. Willits, 530 North Clark street, were named yesterday in an investigation into the death of Mrs. Bernice Barnes, 30 years old, 1228 North Clark street. Both physicians will be subpoenaed to appear at an inquest to be held on Wednesday, it was announced by Coroner Herman N. Bundesen.

Mrs. Barnes died on Jan 24 after an operation performed by Dr. Breakstone in his hospital. Circumstances preceding and following her death caused Coroner Bundesen to order Deputy Coroner Dennis Carrol to make an investigation. When Deputy Carroll told yesterday what he had discovered the coroner ordered the inquest, which he will conduct.

Woman Becomes Ill.

On Jan. 14 James F. Barnes, the woman's husband noticed that his wife was ill, according to Deputy Carroll's story. She told him that she had a cold and a few days later he consulted Dr. Samuel Abrahams, 1201 North Clark street. Dr. Abrahams visited the wife and ordered a nurse.

To the nurse, Helen Strunsky, 550 Surf street, Mrs. Barnes confessed, Deputy Carroll said he learned, that she had submitted to an illegal operation by Dr. Willits. The nurse told Dr. Abrahams, who informed the husband and told him his wife should immediately be given treatment in a hospital.

Barnes pleaded that he was without funds and Dr. Abrahams then arranged to have the wife taken to the county hospital. She went there in the Chicago avenue police ambulance, arriving at the hospital at 11:05 p. m. on Jan. 23.

Condition Called Serious.

To another nurse, Miss T. M. Wilmot, the wife again repeated her statement about an operation by Dr. Willits, Deputy Carroll said. Dr. Carl Scuderi, who examined Mrs. Barnes, diagnosed her case as one of septic abortion. Her fever was 103 degrees and he described her condition as serious in the extreme.

Mrs. Barnes told her husband to call Dr. Willits and tell him where she was. Barnes did so and, according to his story, the physician declared:

"She must be removed from the county hospital at once. She should be taken to the West End hospital, where she can be given proper care."

Acting on Dr. Willits' instructions, Barnes said, he met an ambulance and rode to the county hospital, where he signed an order for his wife's release. Dr. Scuderi and other staff physicians protested, declaring that to move the woman would be suicidal. Mrs. Barnes' temperature had risen to 105 degrees, the weather was cold, and the woman was in a dying condition with only a slight chance for recovery if left alone, they told the husband.

Taken to Other Hospital

However, Barnes insisted, Deputy Carroll was told, and his wife was placed in the ambulance and taken to the West End hospital. There Dr. Breakstone performed an operation at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. Mrs. Barnes died soon afterwards.

Dr. Breakstone told the coroner that the woman was not suffering from septic abertion but from appendicitis. His operation removed the appendix and several other organs, examination of which would have been necessary in order to determine whether an illegal operation had been performed, Deputy Carroll said.

When Coroner's Physician Jerry Kearns demanded these organs at the hospital soon after Mrs. Barnes died, he was shown a jar containing organs which he said could not possibly have come from the body of the dead woman. He refused to take this jar and when coroner's investigators asked to see it later Dr. Breakstone and his staff said it was missing and that they had presumed Dr. Kearns had taken it.

Doctor Defends Operation.

Dr. Breakstone declared the operation he performed was justifiable and the only means which could have saved the woman's life. He said he had received a telephone call from Dr. Willits telling him that Mrs. Barnes was being taken to his hospital.

An operation performed by Dr. Breakstone in December, 1925, which resulted in a young woman's death caused the holding up of the burial permit and the ordering of an inquest. The physician was exonerated at that time.

Dr. Willits was arrested in 1924 on warrants charging him with performing an illegal operation. In 1915 Dr. Willits was arrested on a charge of violating the Harrison anti-narcotic law but later was discharged.

REPORT WEALTHY CHICAGOAN BUYS DENMARK CASTLE

George Rasmussen of Chicago and Lake Forest, wealthy president of the National Tea company, may purchase the castle "Hvidoere," property of the late Empress Maria Feodorownas, just north of Copenhagen, it was announced in dispatches from Denmark yesterday.

Mr. Rasmussen, a native of Denmark, already owns two estates near Copenhagen, purchased in 1925. One of these, "Soelyst," is reputed to be one of the most picturesque spots in Denmark and cost half a million crowns. No mention was made as to the disposition of these properties.

The Rasmussen Lake Forest estate, Elmwood farm, was the scene of a spectacular fire last March. The chain store executive also maintains a town house in Chicago at 3400 Sheridan road. He and Mrs. Rasmussen are now vacationing in Florida.

Marionville, Mo., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Four young men who called at the home of Cashier R. C. Turpentine of the bank of Marionville at 9 p. m. yesterday held the banker and his wife prisoners for nearly 12 hours until a time lock opened the bank vault. They then compelled Turpentine to open the bank, took $3,363, and escaped in an automobile. Before leaving the unwelcome guests took several hundred dollars' worth of jewelry and almost all of Turpentine's clothing.

HARDEST FREEZE IN THIRTY YEARS HITS CALIFORNIA

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—A cold spell that has broken long standing records tonight provided Los Angeles and Hollywood with a skim of ice on its back yard fish ponds and slippery streets.

The whole city was overhung with a pall of smoke, wafted by an oceanward breeze from hundreds of thousands of smudge pots which blazed through the citrus valleys to save the fruit.

Temperature in Los Angeles proper was the coldest since Christmas night, 1924, according to the weather bureau. Thermometers in the outlying sections read as low as 30, the coldest in 30 years.

URGES SPEED IN ADDING NEW WING TO ART INSTITUTE

Percy B. Eckhart, trustee of the Art institute and chairman of the special committee in charge of construction, yesterday expressed a desire to push to an early conclusion the suit started on Friday by the Stevens hotel to restrain the institute from erecting an extension to the present building in Grant park.

As the trustees of the 1933 Chicago World's Fair have selected the Art institute for the centennial's fine art exhibits, it is imperative that the building of the proposed east wing start as soon as possible, to make room for the art treasures which will be brought here from every foreign country, Mr. Eckhart pointed out.

Form Organization to Give Aid to University.

Northwestern university is to have the benefit of the counsel, assistance and coöperation of a group of the city's leaders in business and professional life as the result of the organization yesterday of the Northwestern University Associates. Attorney Silas H. Strawn acted as chairman of the meeting at which the organization was formed "to promote the general welfare of Northwestern university and the cause of education in Chicago."

"We wish to bring to the attention of the people of Chicago and of the country generally the splendid work being done by the university in providing the means for an education and in promoting all of those things which make for general culture," Mr. Strawn explained.

Entitled to Public Support.

"To assert that a college or university is not a tremendous asset to every community in which it may be located is to say that our whole scheme of modern education is a failure. President Walter Dill Scott and his associates are entirely willing to assume responsibility for the technique of the university, but I submit that they are entitled to receive the whole hearted coöperation from those who have had wide experience in the commercial, industrial and financial world.

"The carrying on of the work of the university is the responsibility of the faculty and the trustees. The perpetuating of the university and its advancement as a potential factor in the community is a responsibility which every citizen must help to share and to that end this group has been organized."

Calls University a Necessity.

President Scott sketched the activities of Northwestern university and added:

"The modern university is not a luxury that serves the selfish interests of a few. It is a necessity that in itself justifies the combined symbolism of the alms house, the hospital, the church and the school house, for it reduces poverty, disease, wrongdoing and ignorance and increases prosperity, health, righteousness and wisdom."

William A. Dyche, business manager of the university, told the associates the assets of the university have increased in 24 years from $6,000,000 to nearly $37,000,000, and that the university has so managed its affairs that its present assets are worth more than double all the gifts the university has ever received.

COL. STEWART BACK IN CHICAGO; DENIES SINCLAIR JOB REPORT

Chicago again became the center of interest yesterday in the battle of John D. Rockefeller Jr. to wrest control of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana from Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board, as the latter returned here from New York City, where he had been for more than a week.

Col. Stewart, accompanied by E. G. Seubert, president of the $300,000,000 corporation, arrived in the city smiling, but he had few words to say concerning the fight for proxies with which the contest will be decided.

"There is absolutely not one word of truth in that," Col. Stewart replied when asked concerning rumors that he was contemplating taking a post with the Sinclair Oil company, should Rockefeller succeed in ousting him at the annual stockholders' meeting on March 7.

There was no indication yesterday what the next move in the fight will be form either side.

AGENT OF UNION SHOT TO DEATH; HUNT FOR KILLER

Blame Shooting on Labor Feud; Quiz Officials.

A union factional fight was blamed by the police for the slaying yesterday of James A. Fee, 45 years old, business agent of Local No. 629 of the International Union of Steam and Operating Engineers. Fee was shot to death on the sidewalk at Walnut street and Kedzie avenue.

Half an hour later Police Capt. Charles McGurn of the First district raided the offices of the union at 17 North La Salle street and seized for questioning four officials of the organization. Then a search was begun for Thomas Marshall, about 36 years old, 3315 Addison street, a former business agent of the union, who was replaced by Fee six months ago.

The killer met Fee on the sidewalk as he left his rooms at 3349 Walnut street. The two walked slowly east in Walnut street engaged in argument, police were told by James Klaer, 16 years old, 3208 Walnut street, who was on his way to school. Suddenly Fee, Klaer said, turned fiercely upon his companion and shouted, "No, you won't!"

Then the other fellow pulled a gun, stuck it against Fee's back, and fired three times, the youth declared.

Fee sank to the ground and the slayer darted through an alley and disappeared. Klaer ran to engine house 44 at 3138 Lake street and told the firemen, who called Fillmore street police. John T. Lynch, 3315 Walnut street, driving past, also saw the shooting and hurried the victim to the Franklin Boulevard hospital. Fee died without regaining consciousness.

Learn of Labor Feud.

By questioning the union's officials, Frank Zimmerman, president; John W. Gorey, assistant business agent; and H. W. Vanderwall, an organizer, Capt. McGurn said he learned there had been a feud in the organization for months. Zimmerman, who admitted that his own life had been threatened, and Fee, were opposed by a rival group who sought control, it was said.

Dismissal of the former business agent along with the alleged discovery that $4,000 in union funds were missing at the time Fee took office started the trouble, it is believed by Capt. McGurn.

A card found in Fee's pocket may throw light on the murder, police believe. The card, addressed to Fee, had scribbled on it: "James J. (1920) Fee, alias James A. (1924) Fee. We know why you changed your middle name, you rat, stool pigeon, and double crosser."

Beneath this was written: "Didn't the laundries you mention in your letter give you enough when you sold out? Huddell and Fee sold out."

Big Tim Murphy Involved?

Big Tim Murphy, known to have had close relations with this union, is said to have stepped in as arbiter in the union fight a short time before he was murdered at his north side home.

Charges of "czar" rule within the union resulted in August, 1927, in the withdrawal of five locals and the establishing of the Amalgamated Union of Operating Engineers. The circumstances of this trouble were also being looked into in connection with the murder inquiry.

FIRE AROUSES FLAT DWELLERS.

Occupants of the Kenwood Gardens apartments, 5519-25 Kenwood avenue, were aroused yesterday morning by a small fire, which started between two unoccupied apartments on the third and fourth floors of the building and caused an estimated damage of $500.

WHISPER CAMPAIGNS ARE BARRED IN ACTION OF OKLAHOMA SENATE

Oklahoma City, Okla., Feb. 9.—(AP)—A measure designed to silence whispering campaigns was passed by the state senate today.

The bill, introduced by Senators Wade H. Loofbourrow, Democrat, Buffalo, and W. G. Stigler, Democrat, Stigler, would make it unlawful to "report or scatter false rumors or reports of a slanderous or harmful nature." It fixes the penalty of fines ranging from $100 to $500 and jail sentences running from 30 to 120 days.

Senator Loofbourow explained in supporting his measure that it was not intended to affect libel laws. It was inspired, he said, by slander circulated against the presidential candidates prior to the last general election.

FIREMAN'S DARING RESCUE WINS HIM $100 HERO PRIZE

Lieut. Joyce, Who Risked Life in Flames, Honored

The valor shown by Lieut. Thomas Joyce of the fire department in rescuing an unconscious man from a blazing building has won for him THE TRIBUNE hero award of $100 for the most heroic deed of any policeman or fireman during the month of January. The rescue was made by Joyce individually after he and his company had ben forced back by the spreading flames.

Fire Commissioner Albert W. Goodrich, when Joyce's action was called to his attention, characterized it as a "meritorious service" and "a great piece of work." Further commendation was given to Joyce by Chief Fire Marshal Michael J. Corrigan, who cited him for honorable mention in the fire department's general orders.

Find Building in Flames.

Joyce, commanding hook and ladder company No. 46, was on duty at the fire station at 4666 Fulton street on the morning of Jan. 16. Shortly before 8 o'clock, a still alarm of fire followed by a box alarm sent the company to 5023 Chicago avenue.

Upon arrival, the company found that the two story frame building was enveloped in flames. Daniel J. Ahern, chief of the battalion, upon receiving information that a man was trapped in the structure, ordered Lieut. Joyce and his company to the rear of the burning building when there appeared to be a chance to save the entrapped victim.

On their first attempt to enter the building the company was forced to retreat by the flames. Determined to make a final effort, Joyce returned to the building, leaving his company behind to fight the fire.

Rescues Entrapped Man.

Crawling on his hands and knees, Lieut. Joyce began a systematic search for the unconscious man. After proceeding along the floor in this fashion for forty or fifty feet, the victim, Thomas Gare, 822 North Lavergne avenue, was found lying face downward. Joyce pulled him to the open air and Gare was revived at St. Ann's hospital.

"In my judgment, it was the best piece of rescue work that I have seen or heard of in years and the lieutenant is deserving of everything that is coming to him," Michael S. Kerwin, 7th division marshal, reported.

Lieut. Joyce, who is 38 years old, is the father of four children and lives at 1534 North Menard avenue. He has been a member of the fire department for twelve years.

Commend 2 Policemen.

Deeds of two policemen during the month also received commendation. Policeman Michael Curtin of the 5th district automobile detail captured a prisoner who had escaped from Judge Dennis J. Normoyle's courtroom on Jan. 4. Curtin persisted in the search for the escaped man, Harris Baily, who was awaiting trial for robbery, and located him in a dark airshaft. Climbing up the inside of the shaft for two and one-half stories, Curtin forced Baily to descend with him. Had Baily struggled, both men would have fallen to death on a concrete floor.

Policeman Patrick Dillon of the 31st district received honorable mention for his capture of a bandit, Maxwell Arndt, after the man had failed in an attempted holdup. Arndt had his hands in his pockets, as though he had a weapon, but Dillon, pulling his own revolver, commanded him to raise his hands. As Arndt complied, he brought forth a shiny object. Dillon, thinking it was a revolver, fired, wounding the robber.

NEW 38 STORY BANK BUILDING WALL CRACKS

New York, Feb. 9.—[Special.]—A crack appeared in the wall of the newly completed thirty-eight story skyscraper of the Chase National bank in the heart of the financial district today and caused police to rope off Nassau street beneath the fissure.

Workmen hastily erected a scaffolding about the portion of the wall affected by the rift. W. H. Moorhead, vice president of the bank, declared the break was of minor importance since it extended only through the surface stone.

The fissure runs diagonally downward for some ten feet from the base of a third story window to the top of one on the second floor.

PATIENT LEAPS TO DEATH.

John Lewandowski, 35 years old, 3637 South Marshfield avenue, a laborer, leaped to his death yesterday from a sixth floor window of the County hospital, where he was a patient.

DENIES CHICAGO YACHT MISSING IN PACIFIC TRIP

A report from Manila that the yacht Illyria, carrying the Crane Pacific expedition of the Field museum, has not been heard from since Jan. 12, was denied yesterday by Stephen C. Simms, director of the museum. The director produced a radiogram received last Tuesday from Cornelius Crane of Chicago, in command of the expedition, which stated: "Arrived Marquesas. All well."

The expedition is probably in harbor at the Marquesas islands at the present time, Mr. Simms stated, as its itinerary calls for an eight day stop at these islands. The concern of the American embassy at Tokio over the whereabouts of the Illyria is unwarranted, the director said, since the expedition is not expected to reach Tokio until November.

The scientists are making a 30,000 mile voyage, circling the Pacific in search of zoölogical specimens. They expect to proceed from the Marquesas to Tahiti.

American manufacturers attack European furniture industry. Demand prohibitive duty

READ the editorial below and see what manufacturers think of Colby import values. Their association has enlisted the aid of prominent politicians to secure legislation increasing the price of this beautiful merchandise.

They would have the government add at least $60 to every $100 chair imported. Why they oppose the importation of needlepoint pieces and other art specialties not made in American factories, is beyond our comprehension, but they are included and the opportunity we now offer may soon be gone.

Excerpts from Editorial in Good Furniture Magazine Published in Grand Rapids

"The new National Association of Furniture Manufacturers has initiated a campaign to secure a higher protective tariff on furniture. Robert W. Irwin of Grand Rapids, chairman of the tariff committee of the manufacturers' association, has enlisted the aid of U. S. Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg of Michigan in the project. The committee report shows the vital need of a higher tariff on furniture..... Foreign manufacturers are learning the use of dry kilns which makes it possible for them to make furniture which will survive our climatic conditions. The result is that foreign furniture is often offered for retail sale in the United States at prices below the actual original cost of manufacture in America.

"The furniture makers propose to ask the advisory tariff commission to recommend an emergency increase under the elastic terms of the present Fordney-McCumber law. But the real drive, it is revealed, will be made in the new congress in which a new and permanent tariff law probably will be written."

THREATS LIVEN COUNCIL CONTEST IN ELLER WARD

Meyering Looses a New Blast at Foe in 8th.

BY ARTHUR EVANS.

Two headliner aldermanic fights stood out last night—the struggle of Ald. A. J. Prignano against the Eller-Thompson crowd in the "bloody" Twentieth, and the battle of Ald. William D. Meyering, anti-Thompsonite, against the Brunker civic safeties in the Eighth. Other wards furnished an unusual melange of politics, Thompsonism spreading out as the issue.

Reports came to the city hall that new methods of intimidation are being employed in the Twentieth, the jungle of Chicago politics. Voters sent in anonymous complaints that they were receiving letters warning them to stay away from the polls Feb. 26. The letters bore nothing to identify the senders, and the recipients refused to give their name for fear of reprisals. West side leaders in adjacent wards said it appeared that efforts were under way to clamp down a reign of terror upon the voters in the ward.

Three Rivals in Ward.

The 20th has three candidates, Ald. Prignano, who is praised by the M. V. L., Martin Klass, a nephew of City Collector Morris Eller, and State Rep. William V. Pacelli, who is reputed to have the backing of the Ellers. Pacelli was recently discharged as ward superintendent by Commissioner Richard Wolfe for being "on too many pay rolls." The stage is set for a hot day at the polls.

In some precincts of the Twentieth, 30 per cent of the voters are "illiterates" on the poll books, which means that their ballots have to be marked for them by the judges and clerks of election. This is one explanation of the overwhelming pluralities often polled by the Ellers for their tickets.

This time, however, a rigorous house cleaning in the polling places is planned by County Judge E. K. Jarecki, State's Attorney John A. Swanson, and other agencies. The outcome in the ward is held to depend largely upon the judges and clerks and whether those who mark the ballots for the "illiterates" are friendly to the Eller-Thompson camp or vice versa. To counteract this the politicians theorize the word is being sent out that it will be healthy for the "illiterates" to stay at home this time.

Charge Lavish Funds.

Things were popping in the Eighth yesterday after Albert R. Brunker of the civic safeties had taken to the air Friday night against Ald. Meyering. Unfair and lavish use of campaign funds was charged by the Meyering managers, who announced they had no intention of trying to compete with the expenditures of the Meyering opposition. They reported the telephones had been kept busy all morning with messages from citizens who had tuned in Friday night and were wrathful at what they called "Lake Forest interference."

Ald. Meyering tore into Brunker at his night meetings.

"The inconsistency of the Brunker safety commission," said Meyering, "the unfairness of its attack, the damage to our democracy by the unlimited use of funds in elections, was emphasized by Mr. Brunker's radio talks last night.

Tells of Brunker Talk.

"Brunker singled out the contest in this ward and recommended my opponent to his radio audience. Yet only 24 hours previously he personally told me that he regretted our controversy. He explained that conditions precluded proper investigations of aldermanic candidates and that thus some mistalks were made and he was sorry if he had injured me. He said that he thought, in fact, through his opposition he had caused to be brought out so conclusively my qualifications for public office as to have assured the success of my political future. I wonder if Mr. Brunker desires to run me for a bigger office. I am satisfied to continue to serve my people who have approved me in four elections."

A complicated struggle has developed in the 34th ward, home of Ald. Eugene L. Nusser, a Thompson yes man who was beaten for assessor by John E. Conroy by 348,000 in November. Nusser is son-in-law, or nephew or something of George Hitzman, the Thompson ward committeeman, who was appointed state grain inspector by Len Small last year. Charles J. (Doc) Peters, who was grain inspector when Fred Lundin was the apple of Len Small's eye, but was thrown out to make way for Hitzman after Small tied up with Thompson and America First and gave Lundin the gate, is supporting Capt. Leonard M. Rice, an overseas veteran, who is an examiner of titles for the Chicago Title and Trust company.

"Doc" Peters was the Lundin-Deneen candidate for sheriff in 1926. In the shuffling it now appears that, so far as the ward factions are concerned, there is a struggle between the Crowe-Hitzman-Small-Thompson lineup and a Lundin-Peters-Deneen grouping. The Democrats argue that it may clear a path down the middle for Lawrence J. Fenlon, who is assistant attorney of the sanitary district and was an assistant to Corporation Counsel Francis X. Bush during the Dever régime.

PEACE IN NICARAGUA AS REBELS QUIT, SAYS ENVOY IN WASHINGTON

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—(AP)—The Nicaraguan legation tonight announced it had been officially informed that the Sandino bands had left Nicaraguan territory and that "peace has been reëstablished throughout Nicaragua."

The information was given out in the form of a brief typewritten note signed by Evaristo Carazo, charge d'affaires of the Nicaraguan legation in Washington. The text of this was:

"This legation has been officially informed by the Nicaraguan government today that Sandino's bands have left the Nicaraguan territory and that peace has been reëstablished throughout Nicaragua."

COLISEUM SHOW INCLUDES DEVICES TO STOP SMOKE

Elimination of smoke by the use of advanced principles of combustion and new appliances will be among the things demonstrated this week at the power machinery show opening in the Coliseum Tuesday. The exposition is a part of the annual midwestern engineering and power convention, to be held at the Palmer house during the week.

"Some advanced principles of combustion have been evolved which burn up all the carbon in the coal," George E. Fisterer, a member of the exposition committee, said. "It is carbon that causes the smoke and soot. It is only a matter of a few years before the heavy black smoke will give way to white smoke, composed of light gases that dissipate easily."

Included in the exhibits are ventilating machines and heat regulating mechanism for skyscrapers, which screen out dust, keep up a steady flow of fresh air and maintain even temperatures. Another is an automatic train control which operates signal lights, guards against trains traveling over a fixed maximum speed, and warns the engineer.

ADVERTISE IN THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE

ALDERMEN THINK THEY HAVE TONIC FOR CITY CREDIT

Would Speed Up Start of Tax Collections.

BY OSCAR HEWITT.

Members of the council subcommittee on city loans and deposits, after listening three hours yesterday to officials concerned with tax assessments, said last night that they believed they have found a plan to repay Chicago banks an estimated $90,000,000 loaned on tax anticipation warrants three months earlier than the bankers expect it.

The subcommittee, composed of Ald. Joseph B. McDonough [13th], James B. Bowler [25th], E. I. Frankhauser [49th], and Terence F. Moran [16th], said that they think they have improved the city's credit so that it may borrow more readily and at a lower interest rate for current expenses.

The aldermen asked the tax assessing officials in to estimate the time required to complete the 1928 assessment roll and start collection of taxes. They painted a dark and gloomy picture. The appraisers of all the real estate in Cook county under Harry S. Cudmore asked until April 1 to finish their task. Then Charles Ringer for the board of assessors wanted sixty days more for their job. Edward R. Litzinger "guessed" that the board of review would take an added ninety days. That brings the date to Sept. 1.

William H. Malone, for the state tax commission, then wanted two weeks for its work, and it was represented that the extension of taxes would take forty more days. That would bring the date to Oct. 25 before the tax collector started to garner in the coin and tends to confirm the estimate of the bankers that it would be 1930 before they were paid.

The aldermen cannot understand why much of the work of assessing cannot be done concurrently with other work. When the appraisers have finished supplying the assesors with the full fair market value of every piece of real estate in one township the aldermen cannot see why the assessors cannot begin fixing tax valuations, and, after the assessors have finished with that township, why the reviewers cannot start hearing complaints, and so on.

Might Start by June 15.

"If that system were followed, when would the tax rolls be ready for collection?" asked Chairman McDonough.

"June 1 to 15," replied Chairman Malone of the state tax commission.

"Then we could get the taxes for the bankers by Sept. 1, or Oct. 1 at latest, three months earlier than they have estimated," commented McDonough. Bills to accomplish that result are pending in the state legislature.

The subcommittee will meet again tomorrow at 1 o'clock and ask Attorneys Alfred S. Austrian and Silas H. Strawn to appear and express their opinions of the pending bills. The views of Corporation Counsel Samuel A. Ettelson personally will also be sought, as well as the opinion of Hayden Bell, county attorney on tax matters. Gov. Emmerson, who was not represented at yesterday's meeting, was telegraphed again yesterday to come to Monday's meeting or send a representative.

Expected to Indorse Bills.

The corporation counsel was instructed yesterday to supply a written statement on the subject. After the session's discussion tomorrow, it is probable that the subcommittee will indorse the bills, unless objectionable defects are found in them.

Because the assessing officials took so much time in explaining their troubles, lack of help and money, the aldermen were unable to compare notes with the county, sanitary district, park boards and other governing bodies on the amount of cash they will borrow this year for current operating expenses. Probably that subject will be taken up at a second meeting to be held tomorrow at 3 o'clock.

108 Illinois Bills Designed to Touch Pocketbook; Mad Cash Scramble Due

BY CARL WARREN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—To what extent the pocketbooks of the taxpayers of Illinois, especially those in Chicago, are going to suffer as a result of new legislation is the outstanding question confronting the fifty-sixth general assembly as it swings into its second month of activity the coming week.

A survey of pending legislation, made today, fully bears out predictions that the feature of this session would be an avalanche of so-called financial relief bills sought by tax spending bodies wrestling with debts and deficits.

Of 255 bills introduced to date, 108 are intended directly or indirectly to extract more money from the public. Fifteen of them provide specifically for special new taxes or tax increases.

Many Calls for Money.

"Everybody seems to want money for something and they all say if we don't give it to them there will be chaos, calamity, and disaster," was the comment of one veteran legislator. "We're going to be kicked if we do and kicked if we don't."

In the thick of the scramble for more money is the Chicago city administration and the Chicago board of education, each of them facing deficits in current funds and mortgaged up to the limit by I. O. U.s on anticipated revenues.

The city hall lobbyists are most active apparently in behalf of house bills 28 and 39, which would permit the city to sell 6 per cent water bonds without a referendum in lieu of 5 per cent water certificates found to be invalid and refused by the banks. The water fund now is overdrawn $12,000,000, and the administration is seeking a way to borrow more money without going to the polls with bond issues.

Another Chicago tax boosting bill, backed by Mayor William Hale Thompson and the city council, is house bill 119, providing for a 5 mill special tax for four years to pay for digging a harbor in Lake Calumet. Such a tax would bring in $8,000,000 in revenue during the four year period.

Airport Bill Hangs Fire.

A third measure in which the city administration is said to be vitally interested is senate bill 74, permitting cities to levy a special tax of 1 mill for the construction and maintenance of airports. Passage of such a bill would avert the necessity of resubmitting bond issues, twice defeated, for improvement of the municipal airport at 63d street and Cicero avenue or new issues for the proposed lake front field.

Among the other Cook county "finahcial relief" bills already introduced are the following:

Senate bill 69, to provide a .001 mill tax for house of correction pension fund; senate bill 97, to permit a .25 mill tax for school playgrounds; house bill 30, to permit investment of police pension fund in city tax anticipation warrants; house bill 46, to set at $1.07½ the corporate fund tax rate which automatically decreases to $1.07½ this year, and house bill 130, to permit the school board to pay 6 instead of 5 per cent interest on tax anticipation warrants.

Further bills intended to pull the school board out of its financial dilemma are expected to be received here before the close of the session. In addition to these, President John Dill Robertson has announced that he is back of a bond issue bill for a west side boulevard, while the sanitary district will bring down a measure setting up an employés' pension fund.

Downstaters Busy, Too.

While the Chicagoans already have stormed the assembly with tax and finance measures, the downstate legislators have not been asleep on the job of obtaining more revenue for their communities.

Twenty-seven of the pending bills, most of them introduced by downstaters, provide for special taxes and license fees on commodities, the most important of which are gasoline and cigarets. There are also proposed laws to collect license fees from automobile drivers, bus companies, electricians, plumbers, restaurant owners, horse and dog race promoters, and chain store proprietors, as well as suggested special taxes for old age pensions and so on.

Another bill, with considerable support, is that for a state income tax on top of property taxes.

From downstate senators and representatives have come no less than thirty other bills asking for state appropriations.

The sums asked for include $1,367,000 for bridges, $416,000 for roads, $1,075,000 for armories and arsenals, $467,000 for hospitals, and $600,000 for flood relief.

And on top of all, house bill 125, introduced last week by Representative Calvin T. Weeks, proposed an increase in the salaries of the members of the legislature to $6,000 a year.

All Referred to Committees.

All of the 108 "financial relief" bills have been referred to committees. Although some have received brief consideration the real battling on most of them is expected to start during the coming week.

Of immediate concern are house bills 1 and 58, the Chicago tax revaluation bills which were blocked by Gov. L. L. Emmerson on third reading in the senate after they had been rushed through the house.

If the bills are not passed and the reassessment not finished, their sponsors have warned, tax collections all over the state will be in a tangle. Fearing that very thing, the governor ordered their delay until they can be amended to keep state revenues out of the jam. The senate has set the bills for a special hearing when it convenes at 10 a. m. Wednesday.

Gets Police to Read Letter from Wife, Lands in Jail

East St. Louis, Ill., Feb. 9.—[U.P.]—Lidious Davis, 22, Negro from Ellerson, Ark., asked two detectives to read for him a letter from his wife, Alberta. They read, "Baby, I can't sleep for dreaming of you. I would tell you to come down here, baby, but the law is laying for you," whereupon they held him for Arkansas authorities.

Literary Critic

A LARGE Chicago organization has an unusual opening for a well qualified woman. The applicant must have more than the average ability as a descriptive writer. We prefer a mature woman with a college education who has majored in English or journalism and who has had practical experience writing for children's or women's magazines.

In addition to the ability to write, this position calls for a person with some secretarial ability or experience, and she must possess sufficient tact and poise to censor the writings of her superiors and to adapt herself to the routine of a large organization.

Salary will be commensurate with ability.

In writing, give exact education, age, experience, and expected salary. Every letter which complies with this request will be answered. All letters will be held in confidence.

CONVICT HAFFA; RIGHT TO OFFICE IS QUESTIONED

Alderman and Aids Found Guilty of Rum Plot.

stopped him with the question: "Any statement, Mr. Haffa?"

"Absolutely nothing," Haffa said. "Come on, boys [motioning to his co-defendants], let's get out of here."

Another reporter approached Simon, the only confessed bootlegger in the five. Simon whirled about. "If you want information you're got to get it some place else," he said. "You won't get it here. We don't want publicity."

The five hurried down the corridor to the elevators and as they went spectators saw that Haffa's eyes were filled with tears.

The jurors, too, disappeared quickly, but it was reported that they had taken only one ballot on Haffa, Simon, Hug, and Bagheria. These four were immediately found guilty. In the case of Murray there was a little discussion, it was said, but one more ballot was sufficient to place him with the others.

Pending the disposition of motions for new trials, the bonds for the defendants were not raised. Haffa's bond is $10,000, Hug's, $5,000, Simon's, $3,000, Bagheria's and Murray's $2,500. Albert P. Bauer, former Lincoln Park commissioner, who was indicted with the rest and who pleaded guilty at the beginning of the trial last Monday, is at liberty on a bond of $5,000. He will probably be sentenced with the rest.

Haffa Faces Two More Charges

Haffa still faces two similar charges of conspiracy. In March, 1928, eight indictments were voted by the federal grand jury. Besides the defendants who stood trial last week, several prohibition agents were named as having accepted bribes. Most of them plead guilty and were sentenced to the penitentiary or given fines. Haffa was indicted with Harry Weinstock, who managed the El Patio cafe, presumably for Haffa, on a conspiracy charge, and also with Bauer. Yesterday it had not been determined whether these indictments will be tried.

First Assistant United States District Attorney John E. Northup, who headed the prosecution, will join State's Attorney John A. Swanson's staff as first assistant within a week or ten days and could not say if the cases will be put on the docket.

"This is my last case in the district attorney's office," Mr. Northup said. "I'm glad justice was done." Mr. Northup did not appear in the courtroom when the verdicts were read. The government was represented by Assistant United States District Attorney Allan Healy, who delivered the closing argument in the case. Mr. Healy is the son of former State's Attorney John J. Healy.

Special Agents Uncover Ring.

The Haffa case was the result of investigations by special intelligence agents for the internal revenue bureau. Agents John A. Conwell and James F. Donahue were sent here from Philadelphia and Boston, respectively, to investigate reports that a $5,000,000 liquor syndicate was doing business on the near north side.

Arriving here, they joined Agents Patrick T. Roche and Clarence L. Converse of Chicago in planning methods for proving the conspiracy existed. On leads from Roche and Converse, the other two took up residence on the north side and became acquainted with Haffa and the other defendants, who frequented Haffa's Republican Boosters' club, 1432 North Larrabee street.

On the witness stand, both Donohue and Conwell said they had become so friendly with the alderman that he had offered to find Donahue quarters in which to open a gambling hall, and had talked seriously with Conwell about entering the bootlegging racket.

Builder Tells of Still.

These acts, coupled with purchases of liquor from the other defendants, including Bauer, led to further confidences and the agents learned, they said, that the syndicate operated several stills on the north side. The principal still, it was charged, was located at 1530 North Halsted street. Government witnesses included Charles Geller, a sheet metal worker, who said he had built the still in the place, but had been able to collect only half of the $8,000 the materials cost him. Attempts on the part of the defendants to show that Geller operated the still himself on the premises as a tenant of theirs proved unsuccessful.

THREE INJURED AS STREET CAR AND AUTO CRASH

Two women were probably fatally injured and a man was seriously injured last night when the automobile in which they were riding skidded on the wet pavement as they attempted to pass another car and was struck by a street car traveling in the opposite direction at 67th street and St. Lawrence avenue.

Howard Nehbas of Hammond, Ind., was the driver of the car. His passengers were Miss Etnel Lloyd, 20 years old, 6824 Lafayette avenue, and Miss Frieda Jeswyn, 20 years old, 6353 Evans avenue.

Nehbas sustained internal injuries, while the women suffered internal injuries and possible skull fractures. Nehbas and Miss Lloyd were rushed to the Washington Park hospital, and Miss Jeswyn was taken to the Jackson Park hospital in an unconscious condition.

Earlier in the evening Motorcycle Policeman Joseph Bothen, 29 years old, 343 South Trumbull avenue, sustained a broken leg and shoulder while chasing a speeding car on Racine avenue.

Miss Anna Samuelson, 45 years old, 2651 Burling street, died at the North Chicago hospital of injuries suffered last Tuesday when she was struck by an automobile at Wrightwood avenue at Halsted street. The car was driven by Edward Lurie, 135 South Austin boulevard.

Ex-Chicagoan, 79, Finds Family Here After 30 Years

Frank Schubert, 79 years old, who left his family in Chicago 30 years ago, wrote to the missing persons bureau yesterday from Phoenix, Ariz., requesting information concerning them. Last night, the police located Mrs. Schubert, now 72 years old, at 2646 South Sawyer avenue. She and her sons and daughter decided to write Schubert, inviting him to return and make his home here.

U. S. COURT O. K.'S SEIZURE OF BAUR STOCK BY CANADA

The war-time right of the Canadian parliament to confiscate property of alien enemies was upheld by Federal Judge F. E. Geiger in Milwaukee yesterday, when he ruled that Canadian Pacific railroad stock, valued at $200,000, which belonged to Jacob Baur of Chicago, was legally seized by Canadian officials while Baur, then an American citizen, was living in Germany.

Attorney James Hamilton Lewis, who represented the Baur estate in the suit against the railroad and the Canadian government, said last night that the case would be carried to the Supreme court of the United States in an effort to set aside the judgment.

The stock was confiscated under the alien property law. At the time he purchased the stock, Baur, who is now dead, was a resident of Germany although a citizen of the United States. He was also living in Germany when the stock was taken. A former suit to recover the stock in the Canadian courts was unsuccessful.

CITY TO OBSERVE ANNIVERSARY OF LINCOLN'S BIRTH

Schools, Clubs Will Pay Tribute on Tuesday.

Tuesday will be the 120th anniversary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln and men, women and children from all walks of life in Chicago and all over the nation will gather in innumerable meetings and services to honor his memory.

In Chicago the memorials will be unusually impressive this year. The children in the schools will hold exercises intended to impress on them and on their elders the greatness of the Great Emancipator and the wisdom of always revering his memory.

Civil War Veterans to Meet.

Silver haired veterans of the civil war, wearing the faded blue uniforms of more than sixty years ago, will stand once more at attention before the portrait of their commander in chief. They will meet in Memorial hall in the Chicago Public library, where the Grand Army of the Republic has for many years been holding its meetings.

This gathering will be in the form of a Lincoln birthday service given by the Grand Army Hall and Memorial Association of Illinois. The services will open at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. There will be an address by Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes and the public as well as the United States veterans of all wars are invited to attend.

Members of the Chicago Woman's club will hold their first annual Lincoln's birthday celebration "in the interest of good will and tolerance," in Curtiss hall of the Fine Arts building at 11 a. m. Tuesday. Mrs. Andrew MacLeish, president of the club, will preside; there will be an invocation by Rabbi Louis Mann, and Dr. Charles W. Gilkey, dean of the University of Chicago chapel, will speak.

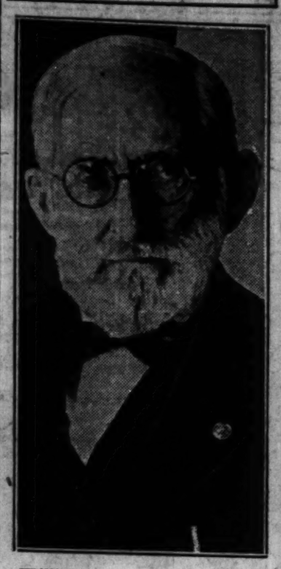
Principals, Students to Attend.

There will also be brief addresses by Carl O. de Dardel, deputy dean of the consular corps of Chicago; Judge Albert B. George, and William J. Bogan, superintendent of schools. Principals of high schools and delegates from the student bodies are expected to attend.

Dr. Frederick F. Shannon, pastor of Central church, will conduct a special Lincoln's birthday service to be held in Orchestra hall at 11 o'clock this morning. His subject will be "The Mysticism of Abraham Lincoln."

At this meeting William C. Slemmons, 86 years old, with whom Lincoln played marbles in 1853 at Paris, Ill., will occupy a seat on the platform. Lincoln, then a man of 44, passed the boy playing marbles on the street and gravely stopped to "shoot" him a game.

Remembers Lincoln



William C. Slemmons, 7000 North Paulina street, who once played a game of marbles with Abraham Lincoln. He will take part in memorial service today.

U. OF C. OFFERS NEW INSURANCE PLAN TO FACULTY

The new insurance plan being offered to faculty members by the University of Chicago as a supplement to the existing retiring allowance was characterized last night by university authorities as affording the ultimate in insurance protection. The policy, with the university paying more than half the premiums, gives the greatest amount of protection in the early years of service when the retiring allowance is comparatively small, decreasing in proportion to the increase of retiring allowance with added years of service. Similar protection is afforded nonacademic employés of the university, except that in the latter case the insurance replaces a death benefit system, with the university paying all premiums on an amount equal to the present death benefit coverage. The total group insurance taken out by the university totaled $3,566,000.

NEW IDEAS OF WAR GUILT.

Americans of German extraction and sympathy continue to seek support for Senator Shipstead's resolution asking the foreign relations committee of the senate to undertake an inquiry into the new evidence bearing on war guilt and to determine if the time is appropriate to recommend to the allies the elimination of the treaty clause which forced an acknowledgment of responsibility from Germany.

Time and investigation have changed many opinions. Trained soldiers in active campaigning generally are too busy professionally to consider anything but the enemy's strategy and tactics, but civilian populations, it is well recognized, must have their morning hate. To that there were no exceptions and the German civilians were as violent as any others, but the world has seldom been given a shrewder exhibition of the manipulation of neutral opinion, especially of American, than that of the British in promoting the moral cause of the allies against their enemies.

This is one of the weapons used to achieve success and sometimes the wounds it leaves are the last to be cured. Research since the war does not present a clear picture of what has been called guilt. Study of the national motives, actions, fears, and suspicions as revealed in official correspondence, in intrigue and in conferences divides responsibility. Russia and France must assume some of it. So must Great Britain. It is not to be limited to events in July, 1914. It has a deep background and many actors. History does not sustain the judgment carried in the treaty, but upon that moral verdict the financial responsibility of Germany hangs. It was a mistake for the victors to carry their moralizing into the terms they gave Germany. Thus they permitted their conclusion to be challenged later. Germany had done damage and then had lost. The loser pays. If France had been the loser it would have paid. It has paid when it lost. The account would be the sounder if it were not presented as a moral bill, but the treaty makers had to appear moral or nothing.

The United States rejected the treaty. It is inconsequential that its conference representatives accepted it. To our way of thinking this country would invite nothing but a pointed rebuke if it undertook to suggest to the allies that they were wrong and should mend their ways. Let Great Britain do that if it recognizes that it is an unwise thing to indict a whole people historically. If the clause complained of were in the treaty the United States made with Germany it would be something which concerned us. It cannot be well argued that American complicity was sufficient to give us a proper place in the revision of a treaty which was rejected here with indignation. Its inequities were the cause of the rejection.

There is, however, something in the background of the war that the historians and professors are neglecting. So long as they do so their examination of motives and acts and correction of errors will not give comprehensive conclusions as to causes. Regardless of what state papers may show as to tangible things, no one can ignore the imponderables of this history and by being logical hope to be sound.

What was at conflict were two great systems, inherently hostile. The German kaiser with his military aristocracy had scared the rest of the world, just as the Spanish, the French, and the British had scared it in their day. The French and British being scared were able by some miracle of incongruity to get Russia, which, with its docile hordes, also had other people scared, away from Germany. Wilhelm II. had a genius for frightening his neighbors. They were afraid of him, his mighty army, his parading bellicosity, his incomprehensible diplomatic breaks, and his unwise utterances.

The world was convinced that the explosion was inevitable. America had become so accustomed to Great Britain's navalism that Americans could not regard it in the same terms as Germany's militarism. It was not known that the kaiser was under any restraint at home and his ways were not the ways of democratic peoples. The assertion that the great people of Germany has as much right to imperial profit as had Great Britain, Russia or France made no logical impression on people who knew that if the German military system set out to get it there would be an upset world.

No ruler ever laid the way better for the propaganda of his people's enemies against them than the kaiser did with his mailed fist, his advice to be as Huns, his folly in the Boer war, with his pragmatic generals, military philosophers, and the professors who preached the morality of might and the beauty of the blonde beast. For twenty years these candid doctrines had been preparing the world for the time when Germany would attack somewhere on some occasion. The war happened to follow an assassination, but people had been accepting it as seemingly inevitable.

There is a responsibility for the building up of such apprehensions although it may be imponderable. It was the responsibility of an aristocracy which did not regard war as bad if it advanced material national interest. If such a military caste will have no prudence but will be outspoken in upholding the standard of such materialism it must be prepared to find other people holding it responsible when eventually, for whatever direct causes, there is a resort to the force which has been thus sanctified. But Germany is not without profit. The country is rid of the monarchy and the dominating military caste and its prospect is one of power and greatness as a republic. Its future is brighter than that of Great Britain, which retains its monarchy and caste and cannot be certain that there is not a revolution in store for it.

HOW THEY GET THAT WAY IN WASHINGTON.

Mrs. Herrick's series of articles on Washington society go a long way toward explaining the amazing changes that occur in the minds of men who enter the official life of the capital. They leave home as men of force and political sagacity and they wind up their careers as stuffed shirts. A frequent explanation is the climate of the capital.

It is not the climate which induces softening of the higher brain centers but the social atmosphere. We have developed in this country a court whose model is eighteenth century Württemberg. It is still young, however, and doubts remain about the order of precedence though no doubt of the desirability of putting every man in his place and keeping him and his wife there. We have a bureau in the state department which concerns itself solely with determining such matters as the seating at dinner of the chief justice of the Supreme court with relation to the minister of Nicaragua.

Mrs. Herrick shows that the formalities are not merely conveniences or even unimportant concessions to the weaker side of human nature. They have reduced the capital of the republic to the status of a petty principality, allocating to the President of the United States the social tyrannies of a petty despot. Officialdom has raised itself among the mass of the people and in doing so has been glad to place the American below the foreigner and the officers of the republic beneath the ambassadors of kings. Here is an explanation, if it is not the cause, of the inferiority complex in Washington which operates to place American interests below those of foreign countries.

The situation seems to call for a radical remedy. We suggest that the constitution be altered to permit the President to confer titles of nobility. Senators would become earls and representatives would be barons. Mr. Mellon would be Count Pittsburgh and Mr. Deneen the earl of Englewood. Appropriate costumes which would include velvet pants should be devised with swords for all above the rank of commoner. Pages and heralds would complete the stirring scene. Our officials would then have no reason to yield precedence. Ambassadors would rank as at any other court. Indeed, all questions of precedence would disappear. There may be doubt regarding the relative worth of a senator and the representative of the kingdom of Bulgaria, but there is no doubt about the relative splendors of a viscount and a baronet. The distinction is apparent to the naked eye.

With that reform accomplished, Washington society would be stabilized, the official gentlemen and their wives would have little to trouble them and they could devote themselves to golf and the interests of the United States without interruption.

BATTING AVERAGES FOR INTERVIEWEES.

The reporter who wrote in THE TRIBUNE of the stock dividend voted by the Standard Oil Company of Indiana properly noted that Robert Stewart only recently had denied that a substantial stock dividend was under consideration.

There is no law requiring a person to tell the truth to newspaper interviewers. Some do, some don't. Some tell the truth or its opposite as the circumstances dictate. It might not be a bad idea to run a batting average on interviewees.

With the aid of a scorekeeper in the local room it might be possible to refer to John Smith [.962] or William Jones [.333]. That would give the reader an easy method of weighing the value of any statements attributed to these gentlemen. It would not be perfect. A man who has never spoken falsely in a hundred interviews may suddenly do so, and vice versa, but the probability of character reversal is not great.

A rule of thumb might be adopted that no man with an average below .600 would be quoted on anything, except in unusual circumstances.

"AN AMERICAN CREW."

[Grand Rapids Press.]

Now and then the dry Congressional Record contains a bit of statistical matter that sets the pulses beating faster instead of putting the reader to sleep. Such was a column of data from a report of the United States shipping board published last week.

It chronicled the rescue of the crews and property of the following ships at sea during the last four years and three months: The Elven, Ignazio Florio, Spencer Lake, Antinoe, Muguet, Pinto, Silvanus, Beres, Elpell, Sylvana, Vestris, Alexandria, Tabora, James W. M. Hall, and Florida.

In every case the rescue was conducted by an American ship, many times—as in the cases of the Antinoe and Florida—under conditions of great danger requiring the highest skill in navigation and in seamanship. Five of the American ships making these rescues had one hundred per cent American crews. The largest number of aliens in the crew of any American rescue ship was four. There were three alien crew members aboard the S. S. America when, under Capt. George Fried's direction, it set out to save the crew of the Florida. Officer Manning and the entire little group of brave men who fared forth in the lifeboat to make the rescue were American citizens.

The shipping board comments: "It has been unjustly charged that the seamen employed on shipping board vessels are incompetent. It is obviously unfair to the gallant American seamen employed on these ships to attempt to minimize their efficiency by making statements that they are incompetent after they have proved to the world that they are not only equal to but are even more efficient than foreign seamen."

Certainly the record of rescues in late years by American crews—including the three most notable rescues of the period—indicates both courage and proficiency in seamanship, and justifies a glow of pride in every American heart. And it may do something more practical than that.

It may help to incline Americans to travel in their own ships.

WHAT MADE LINCOLN

BY THE REV. CHARLES A. GAGE.
[Chaplain and Field Secretary of the Illinois Masonic Hospital, Chicago.]

Henry Cabot Lodge, in one of his great biographies, says: "As certain lilies draw their colors from the subtle qualities of the soil hidden beneath the waters upon which they float, so are men profoundly affected by the obscure and insensible influences which surround their youth!"

Perhaps no person illustrates this truth more than Abraham Lincoln, whose anniversary of birth is celebrated next Tuesday, Feb. 12. The answer to much in his life is found in a story of the insensible influences which have surrounded the life of the man and his progenitors.

The Lincoln family back in the revolutionary days were pronounced Quakers, as was also the grandfather of President Lincoln. His mother also came from about the same settlement in Virginia and was possessed of a peculiarly gentle, shy, yet trusting nature, and transmitted to her son his very best qualities. Her biographer pays her the high compliment of having loved into the heart of her barefoot twelve year old son a sense of God and duty which her death seemed to accentuate and made forever blessed her memory to him.

Let us look at this inborn Quaker soul, shocked by the death of his mother, suddenly projected into the solitude of the forest and left alone with his meditation. His thoughts were of his mother. The itinerant preaching of his day made emphasis upon the supernatural and occult and his heart had been stirred with the thought of heaven and happiness and mother which he said so many times in after life that he had always hoped might be true. He was rather too thoughtful of these things to be carried away by the fervency of the revivalist of his day, and because he was slow to accept all that was preached was put down as rather a nonbeliever, although it developed later that he was a true believer in the real things of life as his state papers and letters continually revealed.

He loved nature and nature loved him, and whether the story of the pig mired in the puddle was true or false, such a man as Lincoln would be moved to compassion for the lowly creature of his Creator. He was a seeker after truth and very early in his young manhood sought for it in men and books and nature.

Without doubt his model of American manhood was George Washington. He was imbued with Weems' conception of Washington and throughout his whole career gave evidence of it. In his address at Philadelphia on Feb. 22, 1861, on his way to Washington for his inauguration, the estimate he gave of the character of the father of his country forever sets at naught any doubt upon that subject. A greater contrast in personal appearance could hardly be imagined. Here is a backwoodsman with his coonskin cap, buckskin shirt and homespun breeches studying to be like Washington, who was nothing if he were not a bewigged, ruffle shirted, silk brocaded, satin trousered, silk stockinged English gentleman. Lincoln saw nothing of himself in this comparison as he saw nothing of the clothes in Washington. The father of his country and maker of the constitution and gentleman of his day was the personal inspiration of his youth.

His early reading turned his mind toward the spiritual. "Pilgrim's Progress," "Æsop's Fables," "Robinson Crusoe," and the Bible all laid a foundation for his future which could never be effaced and without doubt contributed much toward determining his taste in literature. As Washington was his ideal of living manhood, so the character portrayed by John Bunyan and the essence of life as depicted in the Psalms of David became an ideal in spiritual attainment which asserted itself in conduct and thought, and which may be traced through his speeches and letters.

While living in Springfield he chose from the library of his brother-in-law, Ninian W. Edwards, a little book entitled "Vestiges of Creation—with a Sequel," and having devoured its contents, upon returning it to its proper place on the bookshelf, he addressed Mr. Edwards by saying, "Ninian, I thank you for this book; it has saved my faith in God." This is a mere incident but it reveals the taste of the man.

The death of his mother tempered his earlier life and the death of Ann Rutledge—the love of all his loves—softened his maturing life. He came back from a flatboat trip to the New Orleans slave market with a great conviction as the purpose of his life.

All these influences conspired to produce in him the quality of character we call integrity—than which there is no greater. He weighed his decisions by the inexorable rule of right. Upon one occasion Mr. Herndon, his law partner, chided him with being too conscientious, whereupon he remarked: "That is not it. Is it right?" Only a man with such a motto and a like conception of duty could come to the end of life as he did with his integrity untarnished by compromise. The influence of political hatred and sectional strife only made him more sure of himself.

The early biographers of Lincoln were too close to him for a proper perspective of his real worth. Some of those who gave us rather unhappy incidents of his career and family were among the disappointed office seekers, and it has been charged that maybe many unnecessary statements were made by one or two half crazed by drink, anger, and resentment at what looked to them to be ingratitude on the part of Lincoln. Research and new light upon Abraham Lincoln have disproved many of them. Mr. Lincoln never discussed at any length his family or his home life, but was content to leave to wagging tongues whatever imagination suggested.

He knew how to make right choices and was never ruled by mere force of circumstances. When he called to his assistance his first cabinet he did so to the consternation of many of the political leaders who prophesied failure. Born with a conciliatory disposition, he more than once thwarted his cabinet in a course that seems now could have resulted only in disaster. Backgrounded by inheritance, he sought as a pertinent principle the greatest good to the greatest number. Bereaved at the total collapse of all that was lovely in his already too circumscribed world, he sought strength and comfort in—"Why Should the Spirit of Mortal Be Proud?" Bulwarked by the environment of a spiritual sense, he could write the emancipation proclamation. Beset with the problem of humanity, he could say at Gettysburg—"With malice toward none and charity for all." Blind to selfishness, he could write a pardon and restore a son to an unhappy mother. Belittled by his enemies, he could be great in his forgiveness. Befriended by only a few, he came to the great sustaining friendship of God. Believed in by those whom he loved and trusted, he could bear a nation's burden. Blessed by a race for kindness, he is more blessed by mankind for his faithfulness to a purpose. These are the things that make him great.

BY P. P. BLISS.

I will sing of my Redeemer
And His wondrous love to me.
On the cruel cross He suffered,
From the curse to set me free.
Refrain:
Sing, O! sing, of my Redeemer,
With his blood He purchased me,
On the cross He sealed my pardon,
Paid the debt and made me free.

I will tell the wondrous story,
How my lost estate to save,
In His boundless love and mercy,
He the ransom freely gave.

I will praise my dear Redeemer,
His triumphant power I'll tell,
How the victory He giveth
Over sin and death and hell.

YANKS LIKE THEIR HEAT.

AMERICANS like temperatures that are 8 degrees higher than those preferred by Britishers. This applies to both summer and winter conditions.

This is not due to fundamental differences in the human machine as a heater, but is the result of three environmental differences. These are: difference in climate, in heating arrangement of houses, and in clothing.

In England, in winter, woolen underwear is commonly worn. In the United States and Canada very few people wear woolen underwear in winter. In an investigation made by Yagien and Drinker, it was found that the pure woolen underwear sold ranged from none in Tampa and Jacksonville to sixty per cent in Bangor, Maine. Among the cities with low percentages were: Boston, 1 per cent; Chicago, Dallas, El Paso, 2 per cent; Denver, Detroit, Duluth, Galveston, Minneapolis, New Orleans, New York, Seattle and Waco, 5 per cent. Among those ranking near Bangor were: Minot, N. D., 45; Winnipeg, 44, and Montreal, 25 per cent.

The distribution of wool and cotton mixtures ranged from none at Jacksonville; Tampa, 2 per cent; Waco, 5 per cent, and Dallas, 6 per cent, to Montreal and Pittsburgh, 55 per cent, and New York, 60 per cent.

The distribution of percentages of medium weight cotton undergarments ranged from Jacksonville and Waco, 5 per cent, to El Paso 58, and Boston 66 per cent. The proportion of light weight cottons used in winter varied from nothing in Bangor and 2 per cent in Winnipeg and Montreal to 95 per cent in Jacksonville and 90 per cent in Tampa.

Thirty cities were covered in the investigation. The average temperature from November to May in these cities ranged from 13.2 in Winnipeg and 19 in Minot to 60.1 in New Orleans, 60.5 in Jacksonville and 64.6 in Tampa.

The authors conclude: Pure wool is popular in localities where the average temperature falls below 20 degrees. In cities where the winter temperature varies between 20 and 27, wool and cotton mixtures are worn by the majority. In those cities with winter averages between 28 and 50 medium weight cotton is widely used. When the average temperature exceeds 50 the greater part of the underwear sold is the light weight cotton.

In Boston, where the average winter temperature is 35.5, 19 per cent of the people wore woolen underwear, 40 per cent wool and cotton mixtures, 30 per cent medium weight cotton and 17 per cent light weight cotton.

The investigation did not cover outer garments, nor did it take into account age and character of occupation. The authors think that men wear lighter underwear now than formerly. This is partly because they ride in heated street cars or they toil in limousines and they live in better heated homes. In America, the winter temperature which men find most comfortable is 66. They are apt to complain of the cold at 60 and of the heat at 74.

BENEFIT OF SAUERKRAUT JUICE.

Mrs. C. E. W. writes: Some one told my father that the juice of sauerkraut was good for the body in general.

If it is good for a person will you tell me just what good it does?

REPLY.

Of all fruit juices that of sauerkraut has the highest capacity for making an alkaline ash. To offset this, it is far too rich in salt.

ASTHMA CURE NOT EASY.

H. H. writes: Is there a permanent cure for bronchial asthma?

REPLY.

Cure is possible but not easy. Back of the asthma, generally lies a long neglected chronic bronchitis. On top of this, in many cases, the asthma habit is well established. The climate cure is often worth while. Specific treatment of the underlying bacterial susceptibility is sometimes effective.

ORDINANCE ON DOGS.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—Please tell me the law about dogs in the city. There is a dog next door that barks continually and keeps us awake. I have children and it annoys them and has me in a very nervous condition. I have asked the owner to get rid of him or try and keep him quiet, but he refuses.

Is there any possible way of my making him get rid of it, or to muzzle it at night? M. M.

Section 1063 of the city code provides: "If it shall appear that any dog has in any manner disturbed the quiet of any person or persons, or caused any abrasion of the skin, or attempted to bite or snap at any person or persons within the city, the owner or keeper shall be fined not less than five dollars nor more than two hundred dollars." We suggest that you try complaining to the police.

WORST SERVICE HERE.

Chicago, Jan. 28.—[Friend of the People.]—What is to be done when we have vacant lots, basements, alleys, and everything else filled with ashes and no ash wagons to come to pick them up? I believe we have the worst service in the city on ash and garbage pickups. This is in the 8100 block of Marshfield avenue. P. J. F.

Report is made that ashes have been collected. Regular service is given in this district, weather conditions permitting.

TWO YEARS' DESERTION.

Chicago, Jan. 31.—[Legal Friend of the People.]—A., an American girl, married a Japanese last March and in August he deserted her. [1] Can A. obtain a divorce from him without summoning him to come to Chicago? He is now in Japan. [2] Can A. force him to pay damages, although there is no law in Japan that recognizes it? [3] How long does it take to obtain a divorce in case he will not question it? R. G.

1. Desertion is not a ground for divorce until two years have elapsed. When two years have elapsed she could secure the divorce on notice by publication and mailing. 2. Not unless he enters his appearance here. 3. See 1.

FORTRESS MONROE.—On Feb. 6 part of Gen. Butler's forces, cavalry and infantry, under command of Brig Gen. Wistar, went from Yorktown, via New Kent Court House, to Bottom's Bridge across the Chickahominy, ten miles from Richmond, and endeavored by surprise to liberate our prisoners there. The surprise failed, because, as the Richmond Examiner says, "a Yankee deserter gave the information at Richmond of the intended movement." The rebels had felled a large amount of timber so as to obstruct the fords and make it impossible for our cavalry to pass. On the march back to New Kent, Gen. Wistar's rear was attacked by the rebels but they were repulsed.

BALTIMORE, Md.—A Fortress Monroe dispatch says that men who came down to City Point on a flag of truce boat report that Richmond was in a state of feverish excitement from midnight Saturday up to Sunday afternoon. The bells of the city were rung and men were rushing through the streets shouting "to arms!" "to arms!" "the Yankees are coming!" Consternation was everywhere. The Richmond Enquirer says: "Yankee prisoners, some 8,000 of whom are encamped on Belle Isle, could not restrain their exhibition of diabolical joy on hearing the alarm bells ringing."

FEBRUARY 10, 1899.

CHICAGO.—Dr. James H. Etheridge, one of Chicago's oldest practicing physicians and professor of gynecology at Rush Medical college, died suddenly in his home, 1634 Michigan avenue, from an aneurism of the heart. He would have been 55 years old next March 20. He was one of the gynecologists at the Presbyterian hospital and the Central Free dispensary, as well as of the Chicago Policlinic hospital. He also was connected at different times with the staffs of the Woman's hospital and of St. Joseph's and St. Luke's. He was president of the Chicago Medical society during 1887.

WASHINGTON.—Iloilo is now being bombarded by a portion of Admiral Dewey's fleet, unless the Filipinos have surrendered on demand of Gen. Miller. Gen. Otis advised Secretary of War Alger that he had sent a demand for the evacuation of the city by 9 o'clock a. m. Feb. 10 and had ordered that if the demand were not complied with the bombardment should begin.

CHICAGO.—The thermometer fell to 21 degrees below zero yesterday, the coldest for 26 years. In 1872 the record made was 23 below zero. Police and charitable institutions had their hands full caring for the sufferers from the cold. One man was frozen to death. Police sheltered 1,036 in the various stations up to midnight.

FEBRUARY 10, 1919.

CHICAGO.—Deportation is the answer of the United States government to the challenge of I. W. W. and bolshevik agitators who came to this country to stir up trouble in industry and social life. The first federal blow against the wave of bolshevism launched on the Pacific coast was revealed yesterday when 54 radical leaders passed through Chicago under guard bound for immediate deportation from an Atlantic port. Forty of the prisoners came from Seattle, where they took part in fomenting the general strike which has paralyzed that city.

WASHINGTON.—In almost every city and hamlet of the land Americans gathered today and paid tribute to the memory of Theodore Roosevelt, acclaimed the greatest world figure of his time. In the house of representatives the officials of the three branches of the government joined with the envoys of foreign nations in honor of the man who achieved the greatest personal following in the country's history and left a lasting impress on the development of the American republic.

CHICAGO.—An income tax bureau for the information and convenience of readers of this newspaper will be established by THE TRIBUNE immediately following the final adoption by congress of the war revenue bill and its signing by the President.

FOR FASTER BUSES TO STREETERVILLE.

Elmhurst, Ill., Feb. 1.—The Chicago Motor Coach company operates a bus between Streeterville and the North Western and Union stations. This service has become very popular, especially among North Western commuters who work north of the river. The bus is routed through the loop and much time is lost in weaving through traffic which could be avoided if, during rush hours at least, it were run over Wacker drive.

It might be objected that a number of shoppers use this bus from the two stations to the loop stores, but they have other buses at their convenience which the near north side residents and business men do not have. Such a change would be appreciated by the Motor Coach company's patrons, and would be profitable for the company.

LOCATING THE NEW AIR PORT.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—The proposed island air port would be costly and inaccessible. Why not utilize and beautify with at least a three story building the area over the railroad yards between State and Clark, Roosevelt road and 14th or 16th street?

The roof of this building would be used as a landing field; the floor below as a hangar and loading place. The floor level with Roosevelt road could be utilized besides as a freight depot, also for a garage. With a new passenger depot north of Roosevelt road both the air and railroad passengers would be convenienced.

SMOKE AND TIRED STOKERS.

Oak Park, Ill., Jan. 28.—May I suggest that an investigation into the working conditions of stationary firemen and engineers might show the cause of much of the smoke complained of?

How can a man maintain the efficiency necessary to keep his plant from making smoke when he is compelled to work twelve hours seven days a week in the high temperatures of the average boiler room for a bare living wage?

The average fireman's attitude is one of "Who cares? I haven't a thing to lose." These conditions are not the exception, but rather the rule. Give the men a break and a day to spend with their families and their efficiency and attitude may take a turn for the better on the smoke question.

SUNDAY SPORTS.

Chicago, Jan. 30.—Why has the south park commission decided to close all the park gymnasiums and showers to the public on Sundays? Is this consistent with an effort to encourage healthful exercise and place its park facilities at the disposal of the younger men and women on the one day most easily available to them? A. J. E.

WOMEN FELONS AS NURSEMAIDS.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—I read of the hanging of a woman in Louisiana and the sentencing for life of a woman in Michigan. Why not send them to an institution, give them gingham aprons, and make them look like nurses, but keep them off the streets? They would take better care of children than half the mothers. PETE MCKAY.

WHAT MAKES THE YOUNG MEN WILD?

Chicago, Jan. 30.—Concerning the wildness of our younger generation, we should be wilder, we've got more time to get wild in. It is the rare young man who can afford to get married before he is thirty and it is the lucky young man who can afford to get married after he is thirty. By that time all the fine illusions about the fair sex have been dissolved.

It is difficult to keep illusions about those who have a cash value for everything, and who are the greatest little wanters the world has ever known. Why women with no children, who never do more toward their share of founding a family than play bridge and polo and by buying $1,500 fur coats, are entitled to alimony is beyond me. How they have nerve enough to place a cash value on their love is another mystery.

A woman can promise to marry a man and change her mind at the altar but if a man does the same thing as he happens to have some money a breach of promise suit is born instead of a baby. When will that day come when those parasites calling themselves the law profession will modify our antiquated divorce and marriage laws?

E. M. B.

LOAFERS' PARADISE.

Maywood, Ill., Jan. 27.—I read with interest the wholesale graft of the sanitary board. The paper states they got men to work on the jobs and most of them don't care to do a day's work. I am sure there are plenty of honest men looking for work that would be glad to put in their hours and do real work, but it seems those men don't get a chance.

Pretty soft, the investigators' jobs. One woman I know of drawing $250 per month riding in her car coming to our political meetings as an organizer getting new clubs going before elections. The women that did real work before election got a lot of soft soap and promises, and that's all. TAXPAYER.

OBJECTS TO SERUM CHARGE.

Chicago, Ill., Feb. 1.—I have three small boys under seven years of age and last year one of my little boys had diphtheria so bad we thought we would lose him. I immediately went to the welfare station after that and had the other boys given toxin antitoxin, which was given absolutely free. This year I took the youngest baby to the same welfare station to be given the toxin antitoxin and the red tape I had to go through was simply terrible.

My husband has a fair job. We are paying off a little frame home and, while we are not starving, we cannot afford to have any doctor bills or any unnecessary expenses coming up. We might be classed as the middle class. We had had considerable sickness through the winter and while I explained this to the welfare station, they would not give my little baby this toxin antitoxin, wanting me to pay $15 for it.

Unless a person lives in a hovel, the husband is drunk all the time and won't support the family, one cannot get this toxin antitoxin, which certainly is a godsend to the children. MRS. H.

RUSSIA AND FOUR NEIGHBORS SIGN PLEDGE OF PEACE

Put Kellogg Pact Into Immediate Effect.

sign the pact failed to provoke enthusiasm among the border states, who have no delusions concerning the ultimate aim of the red army and Moscow diplomats. Roumania, Esthonia, and Latvia signed in order to prove themselves Poland's ally, and at the special request of the Polish foreign office.

Poland, according to a Polish diplomat, signed because it is about to negotiate further loans with the United States and is in hopes of attracting further investments of American capital. Facing the prospect of becoming targets for soviet propaganda, as being militaristically inclined, and fearing the effect of this upon its bond issues, Poland signed to silence Moscow.

Finland Remains Aloof.

Finland ignored Commissar Litvinoff's invitation, keeping its traditional policy of remaining aloof from Baltic politics. Hj. J. Procope, minister of foreign affairs, said Finland is a Scandinavian country and therefore is not willing to join any Baltic combination.

American diplomats who have been carefully studying the Litvinoff agreement and articles concerning it in the soviet press, believe the pact is a grandstand play for sympathy and support of American pacifist organizations whom Moscow wishes to enlist, using their lobbies for American recognition.

Plans to Cut Red Army.

As a climax of today's peace celebration in Moscow, THE TRIBUNE has received the information that the soviet government plans to cut the size of the Red army which now numbers nearly 500,000. The real reason for the reduction, however, it is declared, is the food shortage in Russia and the threat of famine. Red army rations already have been curtailed and several mutinies occurred recently in White Russian garrisons.

Lithuania's refusal to sign the pact at the last moment provided the only sensation of the proceedings. The original Litvinoff invitation only included Lithuania and Poland. Premier Valdemaras immediately accepted, announcing that Poland probably would refuse because Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, Poland's dictator, was only awaiting a favorable moment for completing the Vilna putsch by annexing the remainder of Lithuania. Subsequent negotiations placed Lithuania in the background and instead of a triangle agreement between Poland, Lithuania and Russia, the pact developed into a treaty outlawing war between Russia on one side, Poland and her allies, Roumania, Esthonia, and Latvia, on the other. Lithuania may be counted as Russia's ally, since eight agreements have already been signed between both countries.

Lithuania Displeased.

The Lithuanian government has announced it's displeasure with Latvia and Esthonia for siding with Poland, and her refusal to sign was due to the Latvian-Esthonian decision.

The Kellogg pact and the Litvinoff treaty have not cleared the air in northeastern Europe, for neither Russia nor Germany wishes Lithuanian to sign a peace treaty with Poland. So long as the Lithuanian and Polish armies continue to face each other across the Vilna frontier, war can be arranged overnight by any one of these four countries.

ILL HEALTH KEPT CARROZZO FROM CITY, JUDGE TOLD

Lung hemorrhages, brought on by an attack of the flu, which made it dangerous for Mike Carrozzo to expose himself to Chicago's wintry weather, were blamed yesterday for the failure of the business agent of the Street Sweepers' union to keep his appointment in court to answer a gun toting charge. Chief Justice Harry Olson of the Municipal court ordered Carrozzo to pay $8.50 costs and appear for trial tomorrow.

Dr. George D. Griffen told the judge that he had ordered Carrozzo to Florida on account of his health.

State Senator Adolph Marks, the defendant's attorney, also contributed his share of excuses. "I am sorry, your honor, to have inconvenienced the courts in the eight continuances my client has had," he said, "but my duties at Springfield kept me too busy."

THOUSANDS FACE BITTER COLD AT HUENEFELD BIER

Poem by Crown Prince Read at Funeral.

BY SIGRID SCHULTZ.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BERLIN, Feb. 9.—Despite the biting cold, thousands of persons stood for hours before the cathedral and lined the streets from the heart of the town to the faraway suburban cemetery, to pay their last homage to Baron Ehrenfried Guenther von Huenefeld, who made possible the first east to west flight across the Atlantic in the German plane, Bremen. He was hailed as a man who braved all the obstacles of illness and poverty to "fly for the glory of his fatherland."

In the cathedral built by the former kaiser, the men who flew to America with the baron, Col. James Fitzmaurice in his Irish army uniform, and Capt. Herman Koehl in his dark blue air pilot's uniform, stood beside the baron's plain coffin at the foot of the altar. August F. Loose and Johann Risticz, who were the first to try to fly the Bremen to America, were also present, as well as other German aces, military notables, students in full regalia, and members of the "Steel Helmet" in their gray uniforms.

Von Hindenburg Is Ill.

Until the last minute President Paul von Hindenburg hoped to attend, but because of the influenza, from which he is suffering, he was not permitted to leave the white house. Baron von Huenefeld's closest friend, the former Crown Prince Wilhelm, also was ill and unable to appear.

Pastor Bruno Doehring, former imperial court pastor, who officiated at the funeral, read the crown prince's poem to his dead friend from the pulpit. "Baron von Huenefeld has shown you that 'all things are possible to him that believeth,'" the minister impressed on the mourners, and then read the baron's last exhortations to the German people to remember their mission of greatness. The message was penciled by the baron the night before he died.

Prince Praises Flyer.

The crown prince, in his poem to the baron, said "Every star sinking in the firmament will remind us of you and our mission to achieve our work and become worthy of our ancestors."

All other princes in or near Berlin were present. Princes Eitel Friedrich and August Wilhelm appeared in uniforms of the "Steel Helmet" association. The crown prince's second son, Louis Ferdinand and Princess Siegismund of Prussia sat beside Prof. Hugo Junkers, the man who built the plane in which the baron flew.

Old imperial and new republican Germany forgot their feud and joined in the mourning. A wreath from President von Hindenburg was beside that from the former kaiser and a mountain of flowers were sent from flyers and officials in all parts of the world.

Wife Divorces Fess' Son as Drunkard, Is Report

New York, Feb. 9.—(AP)—The New York American will say tomorrow that a romance of Washington which resulted in the marriage of the secretary of Senator Simeon D. Fess of Ohio and the senator's son, Thomas L. Fess, has ended in the divorce court. Mrs. Marguerite Fess charged her husband, to whom she was married five years ago in Greenup, Ky., with drunkenness and misconduct in an action brought at a private hearing in Supreme court here some time ago, the paper says. The decree granted to Mrs. Fess becomes final March 12.

Firemen Fight Flames 200 Feet Up in Building

Two companies of firemen climbed eighteen stories with their hose lines early this morning to battle a fire which broke out in the scaffolding of the Barclay apartment building now under construction at 50th street and the lake shore. The mercury stood near the zero mark as the men fought the flames nearly 200 feet above the beach.

Rockwell Clancy, for 46 years a missionary in India and well known in Chicago religious circles, died yesterday in Albion, Mich., where he was residing while on furlough. He had been ill since his return from India a year ago, and the northwest India conference of the Methodist Episcopal church granted him a furlough, which took effect in January.

Evanston Council Gets Bill for Municipal Court

The draft of a proposed bill to be presented to the state legislature providing a system of municipal courts for cities of a population of 25,000 or more was received for consideration yesterday by the Evanston city council. It will be considered by the council on Feb. 19. If the bill is enacted it will do away with the present system of police magistrates and justices of the peace in the suburbs.

COPS AND CAPONE AGAINST HIM, KLASS CHARGES

Chicago police, leagued with the underworld forces of Al Capone, are responsible for the troubles of Martin Klass, nephew of Morris Eller, political boss of the Twentieth ward, it was charged yesterday by Klass' lawyer, Abe Kretske, in defending Klass on a gun toting charge before Municipal Judge Matthew D. Hartigan in Maxwell street court. Klass is candidate for alderman of the Twentieth ward.

"Mr. Klass is the victim of a conspiracy," Mr. Kretske told the court. "The Capone interests are back of this prosecution and the police are helping the Capones."

Kretske insisted on going to trial immediately, but an assistant prosecutor asked for more time, and so Judge Hartigan, asserting he was uninterested in "gangs or politics," put the case over until March 6, which will be eight days after the aldermanic election.

Klass, with four companions, was arrested a week ago outside his headquarters at 1330 South Sangamon street. Attorney Kretske is one of the other defendants.

BANDITS BREAK WEDDING PARTY; TERRORIZE 30

Two bandits posing as prohibition agents broke up a twenty-fifth wedding anniversity and birthday party last night at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Besch, 2669 Orchard street. The couple were celebrating their wedding anniversary in a joint party with their son Joseph on his birthday.

While the merriment was at its height there was a knock at the door. Two drunken men entered, saying they were prohibition agents. A minute later they presented revolvers and forced the 30 members of the party to lie on the floor.

Entering the bedroom where Mr. Besch was resting, one of the bandits ordered him to his feet. He, however, reached for a cane and rapped the bandit over the knuckles. The robber's revolver came apart, strewing bullets on the carpet. The robbers then fled.

In another holdup two men, representing themselves as building inspectors, entered the home of Anthony Picola, 3638 North Claremont avenue, a contractor, and took $200 from Picola and $4,000 in jewelry.

Ex-N. U. Student Faces Court on Girl's Charge

Warner Smoot, 21 years old, former Northwestern university student who won a movie contract in Hollywood last summer, was taken before Judge Edgar B. Miss Rotilla Jennings, 21 years old, 422 Melrose street, said to be a former Northwestern student, charged he was the father of a child to which she expects to give birth next month. Smoot, recently employed as a model in the Henry C. Lytton store in Evanston, pleaded not guilty and was released under $2,000 bond, pending a hearing of the case on March 21.

Directory of Special Values for this week ~ ~

On January 20th we published in this paper a Rotogravure page on which the art work alone cost more than $4,000. It showed in beautiful wash drawing the interior of every shop. We advertised that we had thousands of extra copies of that page printed which might be had for the asking. The demand was so great that we had to print a second and larger edition. If you did not receive one, call at your favorite shop or write to the "Manager's Office," Stevens Building, Chicago, Ill., and a copy will be sent you free.

The owners of these splendid shops were so well pleased with the tremendous success of that page that they have arranged for another page. The owners of the property agreed to pay for their portion of the page on the condition that each shop appearing in it should offer one or more positively unmatchable bargains, if possible. We believe, after careful investigation, that they are doing so. Keep this page for reference.

MARY AMBERG, FLORENCE NOTZ BECOME BRIDES

Last of Pre-Lenten Society Weddings.

The last of the socially important pre-Lenten weddings took place yesterday. Miss Mary Barbara Amberg, daughter of the John Wax Ambergs of 1811 State parkway, and Charles Pigott, son of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Pigott of Jackson, Tenn., were married at 9:30 a. m. by Mgr. Francis T. Purcell at Holy Name cathedral. Only the immediate families were present at the ceremony and at the breakfast which followed at the residence of the bride's aunts, Miss Zoe, Miss Leontine, and Miss Lillian Interreiden of 1439 State parkway.

The bride wore a green crepe dress and a small hat of tan straw and a corsage of orchids and lilies of the valley. Her only attendant, Miss Agnes Amberg, wore a light blue frock and hat and carried yellow roses. Plans for a more elaborate wedding and reception were canceled when the bride's younger brother was quarantined with scarlet fever.

Miss Notz Is Bride.

At 4:30 p. m. Miss Florence Notz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Felix J. Notz of 515 Stratford place was married to Charles Hines, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hines of Evanston, at the old home of her late grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Kranz at 1555 State parkway. The ceremony was read by the Rt. Rev. Francis C. Kelley, bishop of Oklahoma, in the room where her mother and father were married a quarter of a century ago.

The bride wore a gown of white chiffon velvet with a skirt which rippled into a train and a tulle veil mounted on a cap of rose point lace. She carried a spray of calla lilies. Mrs. Howell Howard (Loretta Hines), who served as matron of honor, wore a tomato colored moire frock with a trailing tulle skirt, and the bridesmaids, Mrs. Rush Clark Butler Jr. and Miss Ann Schuttler, were in banana colored moire. They held clusters of roses varying in hue from pale yellow to deep red. Ralph Hines acted as his brother's best man, and William Moody, Peter MacHugh, and John and Felix Notz were ushers. A reception followed the ceremony.

At the same time in the afternoon the wedding of Miss Alcove Winters, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leander Leroy Winters, and Sterling Armstead Warren, son of the Paul D. Warrens of St. Charles, Ill., and Coral Gables, Fla., was solemnized at Trinity Episcopal church in Highland Park. Miss Theodora Winters attended her sister as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Katherine Warren of St. Charles and Miss Gertrude Hayes of Louisville, Ky. The bridegroom's father served as best man, and the ushers included Willard Boyce, Martin Gardner, and McKay Bergen of Toledo and John Bradwell of Atlanta.

SAVANTS DIFFER ON FUTURE RULE OF LARGE CITIES

Possibilities of differences of professorial opinion were demonstrated yesterday before the forum of the Illinois League of Women Voters at the Congress hotel.

Reaching ahead into the future, Prof. J. C. Kerwin of the University of Chicago pictured the tendency in local government as toward the creation of regional areas centering around the large cities, which will override municipal and county and even state boundary lines.

Prof. A. R. Hatton of Northwestern university followed him, and before getting into his set speech, he interjected some comment on the subject of metropolitan areas. Noticeable were his contentions that the county unit will persist and that if the cities break down the whole experiment of the American form of government will be a failure.

Calls Chicago More Than City.

"Chicago," said Prof. Kerwin, "is not merely a municipal corperation. It is a region that includes twenty counties, 250 cities and villages, and parts of three states, Illinois, Wisconsin, and Indiana, and, some even contend, a slice of Michigan."

Leaving the local situation for a moment he discussed the efforts of various American and European cities to effect unification in their local governments. Continuing, he said that the solution of Chicago's problem should begin with elimination of unnecessary units such as the park boards within its borders. Then he suggested that a general convention of delegates from all the units within the Chicago metropolitan area be called to discuss the possibilities of unification into a regional government.

"The region is the area of the future," he said.

Urges Home Rule for Chicago.

Prof. Hatton contended that the trend in the solution of the metropolitan area problem is to "get the county government out of the state constitution," and let the county gradually take over the functions of the satellite communities of the big city. His principal arguments concerned home rule for cities.

"If you give Chicago the right to govern itself," he said, "within five or ten years you would see it come forward with a reorganization that would bring it to the front just the same as it has brought other home rule cities.

"For my part, I have no great hope that the government of Chicago will ever be put on the right basis until the people are given a right to handle their own problems in their own way."

DEATH TAX PUTS ANOTHER NOBLE ON POVERTY ROW

Hits $10,000,000 Estate of Earl of Durham.

BY JOHN STEELE.

Copyright, 1929, By The Chicago Tribune.

LONDON, Feb. 9.—Another great picture has almost been wiped out and another great English family almost impoverished by death duties. This was announced today in connection with the death this week of the earl of Durham who succeeded his own brother only four months ago.

Two deaths in the same family in this quick succession means that more than half of the family fortune, which was estimated at $10,000,000 at the first earl's death, passes to the state. It is now announced that Durham house, the great mansion in Grosvenor square, London, and Harraton lodge, Newmarket, one of the late earl's country seats, are for sale. There is much speculation whether the new earl will be able to maintain Lambton castle which is the main seat of the family. The death duties in England are fast wiping out inherited fortunes, and when two deaths occur in quick succession the results are disastrous.

Coats Family Hit Hard.

Other recent instances were those of Lord Masham in 1924 whose fortune of $7,500,000 was halved when his heir died a few months after him, and the earl of Chichester who died eight days after succeeding his father in 1926.

The family which has paid the heaviest death duties in recent years was that of Coats, the great sewing thread magnates. The members of this family who died, Lord Glentanar, W. A. Coats, and Peter Coats, paid death duties in all amounting to over $25,000,000. The estate of Sir George Wills, the tobacco magnate, who died a year ago was $50,000,000 and paid $10,000,000 duty.

The scale of death duties is 40 per cent on $15,000,000 to $50,000,000, 35 per cent on $10,000,000, 29 per cent on $5,000,000, falling gradually to 14 per cent on fortunes of $250,000.

One effect of these charges is the passing of the great London and country houses which have been in the possession of titled families for generations. The most notable of these is Devonshire house, Piccadilly, the town house of the duke of Devonshire, which was torn down a few years ago because it was too expensive even for the duke to maintain. The site is now occupied by flats and stores.

Selfridge Has Only Garden.

Another is Grosvenor house in Park Lane which was the home of the duke of Westminster. It has given way to a great block of flats and a hotel. Other houses have passed from the hands of old families to new occupants. Landsdowne house in Berkeley square which was the ancestral residence of the marquiss of Landsdowne is now occupied by H. Gordon Selfridge, the former Chicago dry goods man, who has made such a success in London. Landsdowne house is the only remaining great house in London with a large private garden.

A couple of blocks away is Stornaway house, facing Green park, which was the property of another great family and is now occupied by Lord Beaverbrook, the Canadian cement and newspaper magnate, while next door to him lives Esmond Harmsworth, the son of Lord Rothermere who also made a fortune in newspapers.

All over England old houses are thus passing out of the hands of their original owners to those of the newly rich, and the cause of this is the heavy death duties.

LEGION PROTESTS 3D SUSPENSION OF "ALIENS" LAW

Ask That Origins Provision Be Enforced.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Protests against further suspension of the so-called national origins provision of the 1924 immigration act were heard today by the senate's immigration committee. Unless suspended for a third time, as suggested in a pending resolution, or repealed, the provision which would assign immigration quotas to the various nationalities in proportion to their numerical strength among the whole population of the United States will become effective on July 1.

The provision is actively opposed by several racial groups who complain that the tentative quotas determined by Secretary of State Kellogg, Secretary of Labor J. J. Davis, and President Elect Hoover, then secretary of commerce, discriminate against them in favor of other nationalities. The three secretaries did not urge adoption of the quotas and Mr. Hoover, during the presidential campaign, advocated repeal of the provision.

Legion Urges Adoption.

Edward R. Lewis of Chicago, chairman of the immigration restriction association, and John Thomas Taylor, vice chairman of the American Legion's national legislative committee, joined today in an appeal to the senate committee to shelve the Nye resolution which defers operation of the provision for another year.

Mr. Lewis insisted that the diversity of racial groups and backgrounds in the United States is responsible for the crime waves sweeping over the country.

Mr. Taylor reiterated the Legion's stand in favor of the restrictive immigration law and in favor of the national origins scheme as the fairest basis upon which immigration quotas may be based.

Alien Slackers in World War.

The Legion official asserted that during the world war two million alien residents of the United States claimed exemption from service because of foreign allegiance and continued, "Should we go on basis our quotas upon the foreign born population, the countries of which these slackers are natives would be allowed to send additional immigrants to America on their account, although no account would be taken in immigration quotas of the native born Americans who responded to the call of their country."

"We are not advocates of immigration from any special nation or groups of nations," said Mr. Taylor, "but we emphatically uphold the theory underlying the national origins provision, which is that immigration quotas based upon the entire population of the nation is not only the fairest method for selecting immigrants but is the most certain method of restraining for the future the blend of population and racial mixtures as they exist in America today.

Arnold P. Mowitz of Philadelphia, Pa., chairman of the immigration committee of the German Society for the Relief of Distress Among German Immigrants, was the only witness heard today in opposition to the national origins scheme. Mowitz contended that records of the 1790 census, which would be the basis for quota computations, are incomplete, many of them having been burned in 1812. Most of the available data on the 1790 census, he declared, is "hearsay."

Court Case Affects Canadians.

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—(AP)—New importance was attached by the government today to the case pending in the Supreme court concerning the right of naturalized Canadians to cross the boundary in search of work without regard to quota restrictions.

A brief filed with the court by the government asserted it had become necessary for the highest tribunal to decide whether in the meaning of the immigration laws an alien working in this country or looking for work is here temporarily for business.

Aliens are landing at Atlantic ports, the government asserted, and are being admitted to this country by the courts on the claim that they are entering temporarily.

BOARD ACCEPTS CHICAGOAN'S BID FOR U. S. SHIPS

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—By a vote of 6 to 1 the shipping board today accepted the bid of $16,200,000 offered by P. W. Chapman & Co., Inc., of Chicago and New York, for purchase of the United States and American Merchant lines.

The action, however, was not necessarily final, as before making the acceptance complete the board will await the action of the senate commerce committee which has been directed by resolution of the senate to investigate the proposed sale.

The action today took the form of approving a letter drafted by T. V. O'Connor, chairman of the board, notifying the senate committee that the board had made up its mind in favor of the Chapman bid.

ADDRESS D H 304, TRIBUNE

STATE TO DEPORT ALIEN FELONS, IS PLAN OF BRANDON

Welfare Chief Gets Program Under Way.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Springfield, Ill., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Adoption of a policy intended to result in the deportation of all criminal and insane aliens in Illinois institutions, as well as those committed in the future, was outlined today in a statement by Rodney H. Brandon, newly appointed director of the state department of public welfare.

The deportation program already is under way, Mr. Brandon declared, and is to be pushed with all possible speed. Its legality, he said, has been upheld in an informal opinion by Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom, and federal immigration authorities in the office of James Davis, secretary of labor, have indicated that they will coöperate. Gov. Louis L. Emmerson and members of the state parole board also have been consulted.

Puts Program First.

"I am putting the deportation program first on the list of policies I hope to carry out," Mr. Brandon stated. "It is my belief that from every viewpoint it would be to the public interest to make a clean sweep of criminal and insane aliens and send them back to their native countries."

The announcement of the new welfare department head, who has supervision over each of the state's twenty-five penal and charitable institutions, was seen as of far reaching consequence, especially in Chicago, where there has been agitation for the deportation of foreign born gangsters and terrorists.

Under the procedure outlined an alien, instead of being paroled at the end of a prison term, would be turned over to the United States immigration authorities, while unnaturalized insane persons would be started toward banishment prior to their commitment.

Approximately 1,000 aliens, now incarcerated in Illinois, would be subject to deportation, according to a survey made by Mr. Brandon. About 500 of these are in the state prison at Joliet, with others at Pontiac and Menard. As the convicts come before the parole board their names are to be sent to Mr. Brandon, who then will arrange to put them into the custody of the immigration officials. He said that forty cases are now pending before the board.

Mr. Brandon explained that he is a personal friend of Mr. Davis, secretary of labor, and has talked the matter over with him several times. He said he was certain that Mr. Davis is in full sympathy with the program.

In connection with the deportation statement Mr. Brandon also announced that he has turned over to the state architect plans for the new Illinois reformatory for women for which the legislature appropriated, $360,000 in 1927. The plans have been approved by a committee of the Illinois Federation of Womens' Clubs, headed by Mrs. John T. Mason of Aurora, who was active in securing the appropriation. The building will be located in the east central part of the state between Joliet and Dwight, possibly near Wilmington, he said.

Further plans are under way by the new state welfare administration to build with prison labor a new hydrostone plant in the pit of the Joliet quarry and for a gravel pit to be worked six months of the year at the Vandalia state farm. The Joliet plant will have a capacity of 7,000 stone blocks or 125,000 bricks a day.

The Boiler is the Building's Heart

Many of the fine, modern buildings throughout this country are successful from an investment point of view, while others, equally as pretentious, are failures. Yet, their opportunities are similar. WHY?

Because the successful ones
Build from the Boiler Up

While the failures look upon the heating boiler as an incidental, a mere appurtenance, and buy the cheapest one on the market. No building is worth its salt if its heating boilers are "cheap" or inefficient. It soon becomes a profitless luxury. It never pays a dividend.

This Corporation can point out to you many of the finest structures in America, which are equipped with Kewanee All-Steel (riveted) Firebox Boilers, and every one is successful. The builders gave the heating boiler FIRST consideration. They looked for and found the best regardless of price. They built from the boiler up! They economized in many directions but they did not skimp on the heart of the building.

Beauty is a wonderful thing in a building. Luxury of appointment and convenience alluring. There's nothing beautiful about the Kewanee Boiler, but in any fine building it's "the goose that lays the golden egg".

If you contemplate putting up a building, better write first to The Old Man Behind The Boiler and ask him for the practical information he has gathered during his 40 years of boiler-making.

DID BRITON SWAY RESERVE BOARD? QUERY IN HOUSE

Five Questions Asked in Resolution.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—(Special.)—Inquiry into the part played by Montagu Norman, governor of the bank of England, in the federal reserve board's recent attempt to curb speculation was proposed today in the house.

A resolution offered by Representative Loring Black [Dem., N. Y.] proounded a series of questions to the board relative to Mr. Norman's activities. It was referred to the banking and currency committee.

Meanwhile, in the senate, an unsuccessful effort was made by Senator J. Thomas Heflin [Dem., Ala.] to get action on his resolution of yesterday, asking the federal reserve board to submit a report on the existing situation, together with recommendations for legislation to prevent "illegitimate and harmful speculation."

Black's Second Resolution.

The Black resolution, which is supplemental to one offered by him yesterday, directing the banking and currency committee to make an investigation, directs the federal reserve board, if not incompatible with the public interest, to inform the house of the following facts:

Did the federal reserve board confer with Mr. Montagu Norman of the bank of England during this month?

Were such conferences, if any, solicited by Mantagu Norman or by the federal reserve board?

What was the subject matter of such conference and what agreement, if any, was entered into by the federal reserve board and Montagu Norman, and what was said at the conferences?

Were notes made of such conferences, and, if so, what were they?

Did the federal reserve board confer with any individual other than Montagu Norman prior to and concerning the public statement issued by the federal reserve board on Feb. 7, and what was said at such conferences, if any?

Block Heflin Resolution.

Action in the senate on the Heflin resolution went over until Monday at the request of Senator Charles Curtis [Rep., Kan.], majority leader, after Senator Carter Glass [Dem., Va.] had insisted that his resolution represented merely a paraphrase of the La Follette resolution reported favorably by the banking and currency committee in the last session, and now on the senate calendar.

The La Follette resolution declares it to be the sense of the senate that the federal reserve board should admonish all federal reserve banks "to take steps to advise against further expansion of loans by member banks for purely speculative purposes."

It also directs the board to report to congress what legislation is required to prevent the future excessive use of the funds and credit of the federal reserve system for speculative purposes.

Heflin Doesn't Know?

Senator Heflin appeared never to have heard of the La Follette resolution, on which extensive hearings took place last spring. The Alabama senator's attention also was directed by Senator Glass to the fact that there has been no increase in rediscount rates in this country since July, 1928, although the language of the Heflin resolution indicated that its author was under the impression that the action just taken by the board was in the form of an increase in rates. Senator Glass said that in the absence of Senator La Follette, who is ill, it would be improper to approve the Heflin resolution.

Senator Glass agreed with Senator Heflin that "something wrong is going on," but said that the board had done "just what the La Follette resolution said it should do." Senator Heflin said that his resolution "deals with the worst gambling scheme in the history of the country."

RESERVE BANK TACTICS DANGEROUS, SCIENTIST TELLS SENATE HEARING

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—(AP)—This week's reaction in the stock market furnished the subject for a discussion of unemployment conditions today before the senate labor committee.

Dr. John R. Commons, professor of economics at the University of Wisconsin, testified that the federal reserve board should use its power of adjusting rediscount rates to stabilize the commodity market and not to regulate stock market speculation.

"If the reserve system pays first attention to the stock market and raises the rediscount rate so it will eventually affect the commodity market," he said, "then its system is bad."

The professor contended there was no reason to "get worried" about the stock market, because increases in prices of stock were justified by the expectation of business. He added that if the reserve system "gets scared" and starts depressing the stock market, the reaction was bound to spread to the commodity market.

Supreme Court to Decide Fate of Stewart Tuesday

The Supreme court will decide on Tuesday whether to grant the petition of Attorney William Scott Stewart for a writ of supersedeas to stay the execution of a 60 day contempt of court sentence imposed on him by Judge Frank Comerford. The petition for the writ was filed yesterday. Stewart received the sentence while acting as attorney for Dr. Amante Rongetti, who was once sentenced to death for murder by abortion, but more recently escaped with a manslaughter verdict.

8 IN ALLEGED RUM SYNDICATE HELD IN TRENTON

U. S. Drive Extends to Other Cities in Link.

Trenton, N. J., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Smashing of a gigantic liquor enterprise, which revenue agents declare extends from Boston to Washington with headquarters in Trenton, was reported here today by special agents, working under orders from the treasury department in Washington.

They arrested eight men in a surprise raid, obtained warrants for five additional arrests and predicted a roundup of two score more before Monday.

William L. Thibadeau of the treasury department's branch office in New York came to Trenton to assume charge of the round up.

He said that arrests in all principal cities in this section of the country would be made in connection with today's activities. All those arrested have been charged with conspiracy to violate the federal prohibition laws.

The eight men were taken in a raid on the office of Philip Lavine. Lavine was one of those arrested. All gave bail.

Thibadeau said one of the largest manufacturing plants ever seized in New Jersey will be raided later.

A Boston firm is said to have supplied extracts which were used in the manufacture of liquor. He said the ring had one man as chief of transportation, who was responsible for the operation of a fleet of motor trucks and private cars.

After visiting the office of Lavine the agents began seizing storehouses, plants and motor trucks said to be owned by the syndicate in Trenton and vicinity. The seized goods were taken to a government warehouse here.

POLICE WILL EXTEND JUNK CLEANUP DRIVE ON NEAR SOUTH SIDE

Encouraged by his progress in compelling dealers in junked automobiles along South State street to clean up their premises, Police Capt. John Prendergast announced yesterday he will begin next week on a similar cleanup in the vicinity of Dearborn and 39th streets.

An intensive campaign was begun by Capt. Prendergast against the I. W. Warshawsky company and other dealers in junk along South State street several weeks ago. Representatives of the Warshawsky concern and of four other neighborhood junk dealers were brought before Municipal Judge Peter Schwaba, who ordered the dealers to remove the pile of junk and make their premises "decent and respectable."

Vandals Wreck Home of Allen A Employe

Kenosha, Wis., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Damage estimated at $500 was done to the home of John and Theresa Katutis near Kenosha when some one entered the place and wrecked the furniture, which had been moved in the day before. Mrs. Katutis is an employé of the Allen A company, and Sheriff Steve Robinson attributed the vandalism to the Kenosha labor dispute.

ARREST 2 COPS IN NORTH SIDE CAFE SHOOTING

Charged with Assault on Restaurant Man.

Policemen Albert Dwyer and Charles Lavin of the Rogers Park station last night were booked on charges of assault to kill in connection with the shooting early Friday morning of John J. Boyle, owner of the Rosemont restaurant at 6302 Broadway. Later they were released under bonds of $10,000 each. They will be arraigned in Town Hall court tomorrow.

The two policemen were suspended from duty by Deputy Commissioner Thomas Wolfe pending the filing of charges against them with the police trial board.

Dwyer admitted the shooting when questioned yesterday morning by Acting Capt. John O'Brien of Summerdale police, but said he acted in self-defense. Lavin was in the restaurant at the time of the shooting but whether he took any actual part in it has not been determined. Lavin, however, was remiss in his duty by not reporting to the station the facts of the shooting, according to Police Commissioner Russell.

Lavin Away from Post.

Lavin's presence in the saloon was a further remission of duty, the commissioner said. At that hour, he declared, Lavin should have been at his post guarding the home of Capt. Luke Garrick, commander of Des Plaines street police. The Garrick residence at 1473 Summerdale avenue has been constantly guarded since it was bombed last September.

Commissioner Russell ordered an investigation to find out why his office was not notified of the shooting after the station learned of it. The accident report book at the station shows Boyle was wounded about 4:15 o'clock on Friday morning. The station had knowledge of the shooting Friday, it is reported, but did not inform the commissioner's office.

The story as pieced together yesterday by the commanding officers of the department showed that Policeman Lavin was in the soft drink parlor early Friday morning when Dwyer made his appearance. Boyle, known to his friends as Bull because of his height and his weight of about 285 pounds, started to chide Policeman Dwyer about his authority.

Scuffle Ends in Shooting.

Boyle is reported to have offered to take the policeman's revolver away from him and "shove it down his throat." This remark started a scuffle, which finally ended with Boyle putting the policeman on the floor. Dwyer said that Boyle had his hands around his throat and was choking him when he fired the three shots. Boyle, a patient in St. Francis hospital in Evanston, refused to affirm or deny the policeman's story except to say that he was "kidding the policemen and they must have taken it seriously."

PICK COMERFORD TO PRESIDE AT ELLER AIDS' TRIAL

CRIMINAL COURT.

Thomas Williams, forgery, sentenced to 1 to 14 years in the penitentiary; David Taddeo, Carlos Stanton, and Earl Torrence, robbery, sentenced to 1 year to life each in the penitentiary by Judge Harry B. Miller.

Judge Frank Comerford of the Criminal court was selected yesterday by Chief Justice John J. Sullivan to act as the judge in the forthcoming trial of 15 henchmen of Morris Eller, city collector, and his son, Judge Emanuel Eller. The men are named in two separate indictments charging them with kidnaping C. Ray Hamman and Russell Sampson, Chicago Bar association watchers, during the primary of April 10, 1928.

The same defendants were tried and convicted last fall for conspiracy. The jury at that time, however, only imposed minor fines on the men. The present indictments are punishable only by imprisonment in the penitentiary.

The assignment to Judge Comerford was made in the regular routine of the courts. This was because of the difficulty and disagreement between the attorneys in the selection of Judge Francis S. Wilson to preside over the trial of the Ellers. First Assistant State's Attorney Frank J. Loesch has announced that the henchmen will be tried first.

WILL FIGHT REVEALED AT TRIAL OF NEPHEW FOR UNCLE'S SLAYING

Fowler, Ind., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Former Judge B. B. Berry was the principal state witness today in the trial of Clarence B. Briggs, charged with killing his uncle, Victor M. Briggs, wealthy farmer, at his home in Warren county, last Oct. 2.

Judge Berry, at one time attorney for Joel Briggs, father of Victor Briggs, testified he wrote the elder Briggs' will which divided the estate of $60,000 in bonds and 1,700 acres of land into three shares. One share was to go to Victor Briggs and one share each to the latter's nephews, Arlie J. and Clarence Briggs.

The nephews were to receive only the income from their inheritance during the life of Victor Briggs, and at his death, they were to receive the principal, Berry said.

He testified that the nephews were not satisfied with the arrangement.

PROFESSOR AT COLUMBIA DIES IN 6 STORY FALL

New York, Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Robert Josselyn Leonard, 43, professor of education and director of the School of Education of Teachers' college, Columbia university, fell or jumped to his death early today from a window of his sixth story apartment overlooking Morningside drive. Leonard, a professor at Teachers' college since 1923, had been confined to his home for ten days suffering from influenza.

He had been delirious since yesterday afternoon, according to William F. Russel, dean of the School of Education of Teachers' college, who referred to Dr. Leonard as an outstanding authority in his field.

Leonard was professor of vocational education at Indiana university from 1914 until 1917, a member of the Indiana survey commission in 1917 and 1918, and a special agent of the federal board of vocational education the following year.

From 1918 until 1923 he was a professor of education at the University of California. He was acting dean of the school of education of that university in 1922 and 1923.

He was a member of many educational societies, a lecturer, and the author of a number of books.

You Needn't Let It Slip Away

The One Thing Every Human Being Hates the Most to Lose

A Discovery That Touches One of the Great Problems of Modern Life — Fading Vitality

IT is the most precious thing in life, yet day by day you feel it slipping away. According to many world scientists, the stress of modern life is imposing the penalty of Fading Vitality, even in the early thirties, on virtually thousands today.

Now in answer to the question, "Can Youth Be Preserved?"—science brings an interesting answer from Switzerland, where great success has been achieved in this field. Most cases of fading vitality are now believed to be correctable. And the method used has now been brought to this country.

What Is Done

37 years ago a young Swiss scientist formed the theory that fading vitality could be resupplied, if only a food concentrate could be found which could replenish the body with those vital elements it is constantly losing. After years of research he succeeded in developing a way of combining these vital elements together in a single preparation. A preparation, later called Ovaltine, which acts directly on vitality by feeding the wasted tissues of the body, and fostering normal activity of every bodily function.

The first great tests of Ovaltine were made in famous Swiss Sanitaria. It was given to convalescents who failed to respond to ordinary treatment—extreme cases of faded vitality and nervous exhaustion. It was also tested in numerous clinics, for treating nervous, underweight, debilitated children.

The 4 Signs Of Fading Vitality According To World Scientists

1 Fatigue. Frequent fatigue periods now definitely traced by scientists to Functional Deficiency, not always the result of "overwork" as so many people believe.

2 Sleepless Nights. A drain that not only weakens, but withholds the Great Rejuvenator, sleep, from rebuilding you. Corrected this way, utterly without drugs.

3 "Nerves." Like fatigue—and largely an outgrowth of fatigue—thus charged by many scientists to impaired Functional Activity. Yields quickly to this method.

4 Listlessness. Lack of energy—lack of power to achieve and accomplish. Another form of, or result of, fatigue.

These are both the cause of failing vitality, because of the constant drain on the system they entail; and also the result, because they find their most fertile field of growth in the sub-vital body.

How Many Do You Answer To? Check Up On Yourself

Success was immediate and results far reaching. So great that world prominence was given this discovery during the World War; being adopted by Base Hospitals and the Red Cross as the restorative ration for nerve-shattered, physically depleted soldiers.

Today the use of Ovaltine has spread to such a degree that it is being prescribed the world over. Not only for convalescents, but for the millions of people suffering from probably the most common complaint of busy modern life—Fading Vitality.

How It Acts

This preparation contains in concentrated form virtually EVERY VITAL element necessary to life! It is utterly free of all drugs. Is a food-drink that is taken in milk—at breakfast, one cup; before bed, one cup. That is all. It fortifies in the morning with tremendous energy elements. It induces sleep and replenishes vital tissues during sleep.

Results make themselves felt within a very short time. So quickly, in fact, that the use of this method has spread over 54 different nations during the last few years. Now to America, over 20,000 doctors are advising it. It rehabilitates, revitalizes.

It is obtainable in three sizes at drug and grocery stores under the name of Ovaltine. Obtain it anywhere. It is making a great difference in the lives of thousands.

5 MORE DIE IN HINDU-MOSLEM RIOT IN BOMBAY

...y Like Armed Camp; Order Curfew Law.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

BOMBAY, India, Feb. 9.—Rioting between Hindus and Mohammedans was renewed here today, completely paralyzing business in northern parts of this city. The trouble began a week ago when reports were circulated that Mohammedans were kidnaping children for sacrificial purposes.

By 7 o'clock this evening the city was quieter and police appeared to have a firmer grip on the situation. The citizens' peace committee has strongly protested against the delay of the government in using the forces at its disposal to end the disturbance. A curfew law was put into effect tonight and all public assemblages were banned.

It now appears that many of those killed yesterday were not victims of the firing of troops, but mainly of knife wounds. An accurate compilation of the casualties is difficult, but the latest reports for the week show 110 killed and 700 injured.

City Under Arms.

The streets are reminiscent of war- fare rather than rioting. Armored cars, marching soldiers, troops on lorries and machine gun pickets behind sandbags are seen everywhere.

The display of force cleared the main thoroughfares only to drive the murderers into lanes and bazaars, where guerrilla tactics and sudden knifings are employed, making control difficult. By the time troops or police arrive only dead and wounded remain.

Casualties for the last twenty-four hours ended at 12 o'clock today include 35 Hindus and Mohammedans killed and 193 injured. A Hindu was stabbed to death before the eyes of a British sentry, who fainted and is now in the hospital suffering from shock. Another Hindu was dragged inside a mosque by Moslems, who cut his throat and flung his body in the street. A third Hindu was dragged from a doctor's auto and knifed.

Transport at Standstill.

Public transport in many parts of the city has ceased, thousands of people are afraid to venture on the streets in daytime, while walking in certain areas at night is suicidal.

Instances are reported hourly of Mohammedans being dragged from tramcars and beaten up or killed.

Frequently when crowds are ordered to disperse by the military they refuse to do so and the soldiers are forced to fire a round or two. A serious upheaval, which occurred on Nagdevi street this afternoon, was broken up when a strong military force opened fire.

Rich Widow, Sanitarium Patient, Escapes; Hunt On

Police of Chicago, Evanston and north shore towns were searching yesterday for Mrs. Josephine Webster, 65 years old, wealthy widow and patient at the Kenilworth sanitarium, who disappeared on Friday from a beauty parlor at 1707 Sherman avenue, Evanston. Taken to the beauty parlor by a nurse from the institution, the patient went to the rear of the shop and walked out the back door.

FOIL MOVE TO KILL INFORMER IN KEYES CASE

Ex-Official Gets Bribery Sentence Monday.

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—While ex-District Attorney Asa Keyes, convicted last night of corruption in office, was in a cell awaiting his sentence, a gunman made an attempt on the life of Jacob Berman, alias Jack Bennett, one time pal and confessed briber of Keyes, who turned state's witness against the latter during his trial.

Berman, who is out on bonds, was leaving a Hollywood apartment this morning, when a gunman trained an automatic pistol on him and his two guards, Blayney Matthews and Jack Chriss, appointed by the prosecutor. Matthews was in the line of fire and the gunman hesitated to shoot. The guards pulled Berman back into the house and slammed the door. No shots were fired.

Berman Seeks Freedom.

Berman already is under a seven year sentence in federal prison, but is awaiting the result of an appeal and a plea for probation. During the Keyes trial counsel for the ex-district attorney heatedly charged that Berman had "five million dollars, taken from the Julian Petroleum steal, stacked away."

Berman's life was threatened in the court room last night, when the jury returned a verdict of guilty of conspiring to take and give bribes against Keyes and his co-defendants, Ben Getzoff and Ed Rosenberg. The man who whispered to Berman that he was to be killed slipped out of the courtroom during the furore following the verdict.

Keyes must remain in jail until 10 o'clock Monday morning, when sentence will be passed by Judge Edward Butler.

Will Appeal Case.

Appeals will be filed in behalf of Keyes, Getzoff and Rosenberg on Monday and they will then be eligible to bail. Each is liable to a one to 14 year term in San Quentin.

Keyes faces a second trial in March on similar charges. The accusation is that Keyes conspired to let A. I. Lasker, million dollar swindler, off lightly, when Lasker came up for prosecution. Keyes dismissed charges against Lasker, but some of the charges were later revived and Lasker was convicted. Judge Shaw today sentenced Lasker to San Quentin for a term of 15 to 50 years. Lasker is to be a witness against Keyes in the March trial.

Fear Trouble at San Quentin.

San Quentin, Cal., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Should former District Attorney Asa Keyes of Los Angeles be sent to San Quentin prison, he will prove a source of embarrassment to prison authorities, Warden James B. Holohan admitted today.

"With probably 50 per cent of the prisoners here having been sent up from Los Angeles by Keyes, the feeling against him is so intense that we will have to go to the extremes to protect him," Holohan said.

WIFE ASKS FOR DIVORCE TO QUIT BEER BUSINESS

Charges Mate Made Her Serve Customers.

Mrs. Lila Guenet filed suit for divorce in the Superior court yesterday for the expressed purpose of quitting the beer business as well as separating permanently from her husband, Fred S. Guenet. He conducts a beer flat, according to the wife, at 4903 Lake Park avenue.

Mrs. Guenet was married on Aug. 3, 1926. She was 20 years old and her spouse was 42. He leased a nine room apartment and forced her to act the part of a merrymaker as she served beer and liquors to the customers, some of them minors, according to the divorce bill, which was drawn by Attorney Irving Eisenman.

Fled Eight Times.

Eight times Mrs. Guenet fled from her husband's apartment, she avers, but each time he compelled her to return. The treatment, she alleges, wrecked her health, reducing her weight from 134 to 84 pounds. The final separation was on Sept. 15, 1928.

In a second case in the divorce courts yesterday it was the husband who was the plaintiff. James Ritchie, 40 years old, told Superior Judge William N. Gemmill he had been duped by Betty Meyers, a cabaret entertainer.

Refused to Live with Him.

Last fall Ritchie, a bachelor, decided he was reaching the age where he needed the comforts of a home. He withdrew some of his savings from the bank and started visiting places of amusement where he might meet a woman suitable for matrimony. He met Betty.

A brief courtship carried the couple before a magistrate in Waukegan and they were married on Nov. 17. He gave her $200 at the time, he testified, to buy some clothes before they started housekeeping. They drove back to Chicago and he took her to his apartment at 3634 West Jackson boulevard. She refused to live in the place and returned to her hotel alone.

Ritchie rented another apartment at 2348 West Adams street. He gave his wife $400 to buy additional furnishings. She bought a fur coat, he told the judge. Still she didn't live with him, he continued, but got $200 more to finish paying for the coat. A few days later, she asked for $80 more and he refused it. She threatened him with prosecution and with violence from the hands of her friends, Ritchie testified. He sought the protection of his lawyer, Hugh A. Caperton. Judge Gemmill annulled the marriage on the charge that fraud had been committed by the defendant.

LINCOLN STRANGE MINGLING OF FUN AND MELANCHOLY

Biographer Tells of His Wit and Dejection.

For many years the Rev. William E. Barton, former pastor of the Oak Park Congregational church, has made researches from original sources into the life of Abraham Lincoln. With the approach of Lincoln's birthday day after tomorrow, Mr. Barton has written the following sidelights and little known incidents of Lincoln's life.

BY WILLIAM E. BARTON.

Men who knew Abraham Lincoln were accustomed to say of him that he was at once the drollest and the saddest man of their acquaintance. His humor was the life of the taverns where he sojourned while on the circuit, and sometimes seriously impaired the dignity of the courtroom; and his melancholy, as we are reliably informed dripped from him as he walked. These two characteristics were the positive and the negative poles of the same mental trait.

As nearly as I can learn, Lincoln's mirth and melancholy came and went intermittently, and as a rule there was little if anything, to indicate the occasion for the transition; or, if there was a visible cause, it was commonplace. He might be in deep gloom, in the midst of a cabinet meeting, and then rouse suddenly when he was told that Elijah Kellogg of Illinois was at the door, and bring Elijah Kellogg in, introduce him to the cabinet, and demand that he tell the story of the stuttering justice, and from that time till the close of the meeting appear in rather high spirits. He might tell stories that set the tavern in a roar, and walk out into the night, gloomy and dejected.

The "Lincoln Hypo."

The Lincolns were that way. None of them went to the insane asylum, but they had what they and Abraham Lincoln called "hypo." The "Lincoln hypo," as the family knew it, or the "Lincoln horrors," as Ben Mudd, who was a Lincoln on his mother's side and married a Lincoln, called it, was well known among the relatives and their connections.

Abraham Lincoln in his maturity was a humorist rather than a man of wit. Yet here is the striking fact, his kindly humor was the sublimation of a very keen and not very gentle wit.

An example of this characteristic in Lincoln's early professional life is the incident known as "the skinning of Thomas." In 1840, Jesse B. Thomas, a prominent Democratic politician, in a speech in the Presbyterian church in Springfield, took occasion to criticize sharply "the Long Nine," and was especially severe against Lincoln. Mr. Lincoln was not present, but some of his friends slipped out and informed him what Thomas was saying.

Replies with Ridicule.

Lincoln went to the church, arriving in time to hear the closing sentences of Thomas' speech. He ascended the platform and made reply. He did not stop with argument, but used the keenest sarcasm, the most bitter ridicule. His partner, William H. Herndon, says:

"He imitated Thomas in gesture and voice, at times caricaturing his walk and the very motion of his body. Thomas, like every one else, had some peculiarities of expression and gesture, and these Lincoln succeeded in rendering more prominent than ever. The crowd yelled and cheered as he continued. Encouraged by these demonstrations, the ludicrous features of the speaker's performance gave way to intense and scathing ridicule. Thomas, who was obliged to sit by and endure the pain of this unique ordeal, was ordinarily sensitive; but the exhibition goaded him to desperation. He was so wrought up with suppressed emotion that he actually gave way to tears."

Regrets Follow His Triumph.

Lincoln went away triumphant, and sat down in deep regret. Herndon says: "I heard him afterwards say that the recollection of his conduct that evening filled him with the deepest chagrin. He felt he had gone too far."

It does us good to know that Lincoln hunted up Thomas and apologized for that speech.

Lincoln was capable of terrible philippic His notes for cases in which he was attorney for the prosecution, "Skin defendant," refer to an art of which he was past master and a practice that brought him immediate success in jury trials and on the stump and often subsequent regret.

Instances may be found in which Lincoln employed this dangerous gift even during the later years of his life. In moments of exasperation he could be cruelly satirical. But these instances grew infrequent. Lincoln took thought and added a cubit to his stature. He sublimated his biting wit into a genial and kindly humor.

In youth Lincoln obtained a copy of "Quinn's Jests," an old English book of jokes. These jests he read to his companions half by stealth. They were crank old jokes, some of them fairly good, none of them very bad, and most of them dull. He read Joe Miller's Joke Book, and it supplied him with some of his material. Not very much was available to him in the way of humorous books; he read what he could obtain.

Negro minstrels furnished Lincoln a part of his humor. He greatly enjoyed the burnt cork jokes. And they were enjoyable. The old time minstrel show was not very refined, but it was clean, frank, and did not put too great a strain either upon the intelligence or the imagination.

Lincoln's seemingly inexhaustible fund of stories came from his power of adaptation. He got the idea of a story from something he read, and when he came to relate it the incident was told as of "a man I knew in Indiana" or "a woman who lived down in Egypt"—that is, southern Illinois. His locations were far enough from home to avoid unpleasant personalities, and perhaps, also, too careful inquiries into his accuracy. But there could be little difficulty in the matter of veracity when he spoke of his own love of praise as akin of fondness for ginger bread of a man he knew in Indiana, who said he "reckoned he liked it better and got less of it than anybody else in the world."

To Lincoln there was no incongruity in coming to cabinet meeting with the manuscript of the emancipation proclamation in one hand, to be carried through whether the cabinet approved or not, because Lincoln had promised his God to do it, and in the other hand bringing, and reading first, a piece of nonsense. I do not wonder that some members of the cabinet were offended. I know more good people who would have been offended than equally good people who would have approved.

Pioneer Life His Standard.

There is no one question I am asked more frequently than: Did Lincoln ever tell vulgar stories? Many men who knew him have assured me that they never heard him tell any improper story, and others equally truthful tell me of stories which Lincoln told which were certainly indelicate.

Lincoln's taste in stories was level with the taste of the bench and bar of his time: How could it have been otherwise? That taste was rude, coarse, and honest. Blunt, Saxon names were used, and spades were called spades. Certainly some of Lincoln's stories were not very ladylike. But their coarseness was that of the backwoods, and if it lacked the refinement which we suppose to belong to modern humor, it lacked also the nastiness of it. The whole range of life, as the pioneer knew it, came into his stories—business, religion, politics, marriage, birth, and death. The jokes were rude, yes.

Col. Alexander K. McClure of Philadelphia compiled a volume of stories alleged to have been told by Lincoln, and he was in position to judge with reasonable accuracy as to what stories were authentic, for he was often in the White House.

Arnold on Lincoln Stories.

I own Isaac N. Arnold's copy of McClure's book. In it Arnold had written that about half the stories are genuine, but not very well told. I wish he had recorded which ones he believed authentic. He did not do so. His would have been a conservative list. He was called "the first gentleman in Chicago," was an associate of Lincoln at the bar; was one of the most stanch of Lincoln's supporters in congress, and was Mrs. Lincoln's personal attorney after her husband's death.

From his Life of Lincoln, which was a reflection of his own character, as well as that of Lincoln, we may be sure that he would have admitted only stories of high grade. And so would I if I were making a collection of the other kind.

The greatest value of Lincoln's humor to himself was its use as a safety valve. "I laugh because I am too big to cry," he said. There were times enough when he wanted to cry. Had he possessed melancholy to the degree to which he was subject to that emotion, and had no compensating sense of humor to relieve the strain, he must have gone mad.

Needed Sense of Humor.

Some good men with whom he was associated failed in part because they had no sense of humor. Secretary Chase, who was sure that the election of Lincoln in 1860 was a mistake and that the country would discover in 1864 that the right man for President was himself, went openly about his efforts to secure his elevation to that position.

"Like a bluebottle fly," said Lincoln, "he lays his eggs in every rotten spot. But if the country wants him, let him be elected, and may it never have a worse President." So Lincoln refused to dismiss him from his cabinet, and later made him chief justice of the Supreme court. Chase was a man of ability and of honor; Wall street believed in him, and so did Lincoln and with good reason. He was a constant thorn in Lincoln's flesh, but Lincoln needed him and bore with Chase's poor opinion of the President.

"The trouble is," confessed Chase, sadly, "I have never been able to treat this war as a joke." It was no joke to Lincoln, but it would have been an experience still more tragic if he had not joked. He needed, and the country needed, that he should now and then be reminded of a little story. Some of the stories sound very flat when repeated now, but they served a very useful purpose at the time, both for Lincoln and the country.

LINCOLN AND HIS CABINET

To Abraham Lincoln, Mr. Barton relates, there was no incongruity in entering a cabinet meeting with the emancipation proclamation in one hand and a bit of nonsense in the other—nor in reading the latter first. "I do not wonder," says his biographer, "that some members of the cabinet were offended."

MADLENER WILL LEAVES $835,000 TO 2 CHILDREN

The will of Mrs. Margaretha Madlener, who died on Jan. 30, leaves the bulk of her $835,000 estate to be shared by her two children, Albert E. Madlener Jr., 4 West Burton place, son-in-law of former Gov. Frank O. Lowden, and Mrs. Angelina J. Leight, 2416 Lake View avenue. The testament was filed yesterday before Edward S. Scheffler, assistant to Probate Judge Henry Horner.

Bequests of $5,000 are made to the Grant hospital and to the German Altenheim of Forest Park. Other relatives receive gifts totalling $14,000.

Mrs. Madlener was the widow of Albert F. Madlener, who died about thirty years ago after making a fortune in the liquor business. The estate is being handled by Attorney Edwin J. Mosser.

LEVEL OF LAKES IS HIGHER THIS JANUARY, REPORT

The level of Lake Michigan failed to take as great a seasonal drop as usual during January, according to the government lake survey report for the month, made public yesterday. Lakes Michigan and Huron, the report states, are .06 of a foot lower than in December, while since 1860 the January level has averaged .11 of a foot lower than December. The lakes are 1.83 feet higher than in January a year ago and 1.55 feet above the average January stage for the last ten years.

Finds $21,000 in Lost Stocks on Street Car

Negotiable securities worth $21,000 lost by a messenger of Stein, Alstrin & Co., 219 South La Salle street, last Tuesday, were returned intact, the company announced yesterday. The securities were found in a street car by L. N. Brown, colored, 38 years old, 1420 Fulton street, who told company officials that he did not know to whom they belonged until he read an item in the newspapers about the loss of the stocks.

LEGION TO SEEK NEW MEMBERS IN TEN-DAY DRIVE

County Offensive Will Be Launched on Tuesday.

Members of the Cook county branch of the American Legion on Tuesday—Lincoln's birthday—will start a ten days' drive to bring into the organization as many as possible fo the 125,000 ex-service men in the county who are eligible to join. The leaders say they now have only between 30,000 and 35,000 members in the county and they hope to strengthen their forces two or three-fold before the campaign is over.

David L. Shillinglaw, state commander, is taking an active part in the drive. He issued a statement urging all men who hold honorable discharges from the army to join with their wartime comrades.

Invitations Not Needed.

"It is an honor and a privilege to become a member of this great national organization of veterans of the world war," Commander Shillinglaw said. "There seems to be a misconception among veterans that it is necessary for a man who served to be invited to joint the Legion. This is not true, membership is a privilege he has already earned. Any man with an honorable discharge from the service of the United States rightfully belongs in our ranks."

Legion leaders, in a recent survey, determined that there are in Cook county at least 375,000 men between the ages of 30 and 40, and their best information is that at least one in three of these—or 125,000—served in the world war. So they have determined to urge as many as possible of these to become members this spring, as part of a great national campaign.

Greater Power to Come.

"The American Legion has not by any means gained the strength it is ultimately going to gain," Commander Shillinglaw continued. "In the long run it will become a vast force for real law and order and good government. When it reaches the height of its power—which it will within the next few years—all men who offered their lives for the country in the great war should be among 'those present.'"

Mr. Shillinglaw stated that leaders of the national organization are preparing to check with the adjutant general of the army, the bureau of navigation and the commandant of the marines, to determine just how many men received honorable discharges. It is estimated at least 4,000,000 men were under arms during the war and they wish to bring all of these who are eligible into their ranks.

SENTENCE THREE FOR ROBBERY OF BANK MESSENGER

Carlos Stepina, Earl Torrasco and David Taddeo, convicted of having robbed a messenger of the Service State bank, 5601 West North avenue, of $18,700, were refused a new trial yesterday by Judge Harry B. Miller in the Criminal court. They were sentenced to one year to life each in accordance with the verdict of the jury.

Stepina, for years a notorious police character and who once made his escape from the penitentiary, became angered when Assistant State's Attorney George Lavin refused to consider the question of granting him leniency. He tore a war service button from his coat and threw it on the table in front of the prosecutor.

Ald. Coyle Files Slander Suit Against Frank Sadler

Ald. James G. Coyle [17th], yesterday filed a $100,000 slander suit in the Superior court against Frank P. Sadler, author of the Sadler act. The suit grows out of a speech made by Mr. Sadler a few days ago in a meeting at 6316 Yale avenue in behalf of the candidacy of Robert B. Barbee, who will oppose Ald. Coyle at the approaching aldermanic election. Mr. Sadler, according to the complaint, said Ald. Coyle was a member of the political faction that "robbed" the sanitary district funds.

Who wants a heat-leaking house?

A GREAT change has taken place in home construction. Progressive building authorities and home owners are replacing old-fashioned, heat-leaking materials with a remarkable insulating cane board—Celotex. In old homes and new, Celotex increases comfort by shutting out extreme winter cold and summer heat.

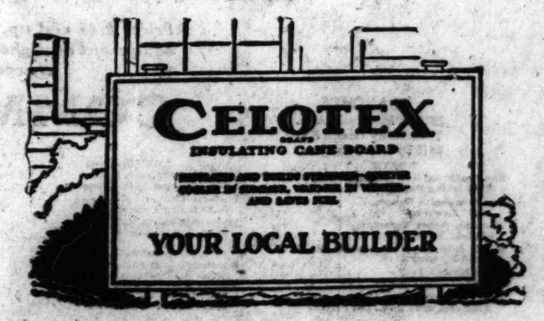
It reduces fuel bills 25% or more by retarding heat-leakage through walls and roofs.

As a heat-stopper, Celotex is 3 times as effective as wood, 8 times plaster-board, 12 times brick and 25 times concrete.

Its effectiveness is proved by the fact that it is used in thousands of refrigerator cars and household refrigerators, as well as in over a quarter of a million American homes.

Celotex is the only insulation made from the long, tough fibres of cane. It comes in big, strong boards, 4 feet wide, 7 to 12 feet long and 7/16 inch thick. These boards add strength to buildings and withstand all kinds of weather when used as sheathing . . . making houses more permanent.



When you buy a new house look for the Celotex Sign. It is your assurance of greater home comfort

Celotex is also used for insulating roofs; for lining basements, attics and garages; for making comfortable extra rooms out of waste spaces.

And for plaster-base there is Celotex Lath, 18 inches by 48 inches and 7/16 inch thick, especially designed to reinforce against plaster cracks and eliminate lath marks . . . to give finer, smoother plastered walls.

Ask any building authority for further information on Celotex—and send the coupon below for our free booklet.

DICTATOR PUTS MUZZLE ON ALL FOES IN SPAIN

Indiscreet Talkers Face Jail by Royal Order.

BY ROBERT SAGE.

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

MADRID, Spain, Feb. 9.—[By telephone to Paris]. — The strongest measure which the Spanish directorate has taken to silence all expression of opinion in the five years it has been in power was announced today. A royal decree was issued which aims to end all verbal criticism of the administration through Premier Primode Rivera forbidding political meetings and providing for the arrest of those who talk indiscreetly of governmental matters.

Claiming the population has been unnecessarily alarmed by "impudent prophecies," the decree states the police have been instructed to arrest any one speaking unfavorably of the government. The Somaten and Patriotic union, two semi-military organizations, pledged to the dictator, were again ordered to report persons engaging in defamatory conversation. Such persons will be subject to fines varying from $4.75 to $285.

Watch All Government Officials.

A special record will be kept of all government functionaries. Their opinions will be tabulated in order that the government may know the identity of those who "publicly and scandalously proclaim themselves as enemies of the régime whose prestige they are attacking."

Societies harboring a hostile attitude toward the government will be disbanded and every effort will be made by the government through the collaboration of the Patriotic union and the Somaten to throttle all verbal as well as printed comment on the actions of the dictatorship.

Former Premier Sent to Island.

The fate of Sanchez Guerra, former premier, who returned from exile to lead the short-lived revolution, was indirectly indicated in a curious semi-official communique today. This says: "It has been said—and the facts seem very probable—that Sanchez Guerra has been taken aboard the steamer Canaleja to one of the Chafarine islands off the African coast. It would thus seem to indicate a case of deportation as the punishment that should be administered the leader of the conspiracy, since it is now well known that the government does not intend to push the penalty to the extreme and will not have recourse to capital punishment."

REUNION OF LONG LOST BROTHERS IS BLOCKED BY BOOZE AND SUICIDE

Kansas City, Mo., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Going to a hotel room to surprise a brother he had not seen for twenty-four years, Lon Adams today found death an uninvited guest at the reunion. William Adams, the brother, believed to have been a music salesman at Sioux City, Ia., lay dead from a bullet wound, which, authorities decided was self-inflicted last night.

Left orphans in Chandler, Okla., the brothers separated and lost track of each other until yesterday, when the manager of the hotel where William Adams was stopping suggested that an acquaintance, Lon Adams, carpenter contractor here, was William's missing brother.

Lon Adams called at the hotel last night, but was told that William had been drinking heavily and was asleep. The door of the room was forced open this morning and Lon entered to find his brother lying on the bed with a bullet wound in his head and a pistol clutched in one hand.

BONES OF GIANT PRIMITIVE MAN FOUND IN AFRICA

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Feb. 9.—The Transvaal museum announces today what is described as one of the most important discoveries of primitive man yet made. As a result of road excavations in Springbok flats, Transvaal, a large number of fossil bones unearthed furnish, say the museum directors, positive proof of the existence of a large primitive man living in Transvaal during the time of the extinct gigantic buffalo, fossils which were found in close proximity, thus conclusively establishing the fact that both lived at the same time.

This man was large sized and not closely related to any negroid race. It is described as the heavy Cromagnon type but probably more primitive. The report is the result of investigations by the director of the Transvaal museum, C. J. Sleerstra, Austin Roberts, senior assistant, and Herbert Lang, who is studying at the museum on a scientific quest from America.

Evidence has been accumulated to prove that South Africa had its own independent development of cultures of primitive man. This is the first positive proof of such a pre-negroid race having lived in South Africa. The broken condition of the skull and other bones suggest that the man was evidently a hunter stalking a gigantic buffalo and he and the buffalo met death together. The man seems to have been trampled upon by the beast.

Boy Scout Troop Given Flag by Legion Post

A flag and troop standard were given to Troop 577 of the Boy Scouts yesterday morning in the Shakespeare avenue court by the Allen Federal post of the American Legion. The presentation was made by Eugene Bernstein, commander of the post, to Scoutmaster Thomas Marsh. Judge Phillip J. Finnegan, who is now sitting in the Shakespeare avenue court, gave the bugles to the troop.

HOOVER TO BACK BILLION DOLLAR PROJECTS IN U. S.

Economy Will Not Be His Chief Watchword.

BY ARTHUR CRAWFORD.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Increased government expenditures, as required by a program of expansion, will mark the administration of Herbert Hoover. While economy will continue to be stressed, it will not be the dominant watchword that it has been during the Coolidge administration.

The President Elect believes that the government now is on a financial basis which justifies going forward with new projects. Inland waterway development, construction of public works, and other proposals which have his approval will require large sums.

Mr. Hoover agrees with budget and treasury officials that peacetime expenditures of the future never will be any lower than at present. Incidentally, there is scant prospect of any further tax reduction during the next few years, as prospective surpluses are likely to be absorbed by new expenditures.

Increased Outlay in 1928.

Brig. Gen. Herbert M. Lord, director of the budget, is authority for the statement that the low point in post-war government expenditures was reached in the fiscal year 1927, and that the 150 million dollar increased outlay of 1928 marked the beginning of an inevitable upward trend. The present level of government expenditures is nearly five times as great as in 1916, the last year before this country entered the world war.

The total in the fiscal year 1916 was $740,980,416, exclusive of postal expenditures paid from postal receipts. In the fiscal year 1917, the first year of the war, the government expended more than two billions of dollars. The total was increased in 1918 to upward of fourteen billions, and in 1919 to nearly nineteen billions. In the fiscal year 1920, which was the last full year of the Wilson administration, the total dropped to a little more than six billions.

Hammer Down Expenses.

Since the Harding administration came into office in 1921, at which time Secretary of the Treasury Mellon assumed control of the financial affairs of the nation and the budget system became effective, constant efforts have been made to hammer down expenditures to a peacetime basis. The low point was reached in the fiscal year 1927, when expenditures, including the reduction of the public debt required by law to be made from ordinary receipts, amounted to $3,493,584,519. Excluding the debt reduction item, the total was $2,974,029,674. This represented a reduction of a little more than two billion dollars since 1921.

"That 1927 figure of $2,974,029,674 is the lowest expenditure level this government will ever see," said Gen. Lord, in discussing the matter at the recent semi-annual budget meeting. "The country is growing, expanding, developing gloriously. Its population is increasing—105,000,000 in 1920 and 120,000,000 in 1928. You can't run a modern mogul locomotive for the money that was sufficient to maintain and operate an old style wood-burning engine. When legitimate operating expenses fail to show development and growth it will be evidence that something is radically wrong with the republic.

Look for Steady Increase.

"From now on we can look for steady increase in necessary national expenditures. This, however, does not change budget policy nor weaken the demand for the strictest economy in federal operations. Rather that demand is strengthened."

President Elect Hoover's campaign addresses made it evident that he will not hesitate to recommend congressional action on new projects, even though it means a steady increase in aggregate expenditures. An expenditure of upwards of one billion dollars probably will be required during the next four years to carry out new projects which he has in mind, he said, in his acceptance speech at Palo Alto, Cal.

"The war and the necessary curtailment of expenditure during the reconstruction years have suspended the construction of many needed public works," said Mr. Hoover at that time. "Moreover, the time has arrived when we must undertake a larger visioned development of our water resources.

"Nearly all of our greater drainages contain within themselves possibilities of cheapened transportation, irrigation, reclamation, domestic water supply, hydro-electric power and frequently the necessities of flood control. But this development of our waters requires more definite national policies in the systematic coördination of those different works upon each drainage area.

Millions Are Wasted.

"We have wasted scores of millions by projects undertaken not as a part of a whole but as the consequence of purely local demands. We cannot develop modernized water transportation by isolated by-products. We must develop it as a definite and positive interconnected system of transportation. We must adjust reclamation and irrigation to our needs for more land.

"Where they lie together we must coördinate transportation with flood control, the development of hydro-electric power and of irrigation, else we shall as in the past commit errors that will take years and millions to remedy.

"The congress has authorized and has in process of legislation great programs of public works. In addition to the works in development of water resources, we have in progress large undertakings in public roads and the construction of public buildings.

"All these projects probably will require an expenditure of upwards of one billion dollars within the next four years. It comprises the largest engineering construction ever undertaken by any government. It involves three times the expenditure laid out upon the Panama canal. It is justified by the growth, need, and wealth of our country."

IRELAND TO CELEBRATE CATHOLIC FREEDOM'S CENTENARY WITH MASS

DUBLIN, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Pastoral letters from the various bishops of Ireland will be read in all Roman Catholic churches of the country tomorrow. In each letter reference is made to the fact that 1929 is the centenary of Catholic emancipation in Ireland.

"People may differ as to the value of what was done in 1829," said Archbishop Joseph Macrory of Belfast in his letter. "Some might regard the right then obtained of sitting in a foreign parliament as only another step toward our country's denationalization. Others might maintain that, especially here in the six northern counties, we are not yet emancipated.

"Most will admit, I think, that Daniel O'Connel's victory in Clare opened a new era in Irish history. The condition of Irish Catholics is in every respect incomparably better now than it was 100 years ago."

The archbishop announced that a national celebration of the centenary would be held beginning on June 16. The program will be climaxed a week later with solemn pontifical high mass before a special altar to be erected in Phoenix park in this city.

Rescue Twenty as Flames Sweep Sanitarium Building

Firemen carried twenty patients to safety and rescued two others who were overcome by smoke yesterday in a blaze which swept through the south wing of the Chicago Sanitarium for Nervous and Insane Patients at 2834 Prairie avenue. Mrs. Tillie Harris, 45 years old, of Waukegan, and Miss Florence Janis, 24 years old, 1520 North Menard avenue, were carried unconscious through the smoke and revived by an inhalator squad. An overheated furnace was blamed for the fire.

YOUR BEAUTY IS AT YOUR FINGERTIPS

says Elizabeth Arden

The New Plastic Exercise models the figure into lines of beauty

YOU may have others to blame for your losing at Contract, marrying beneath you, or missing the last train from town, but if a trace of the wear and tear of present-day living shows on your face, you have only yourself to blame. In this enlightened age there is no excuse for tired eyes and sagging skin. Elizabeth Arden has put her secret of beauty at your fingertips.

The modern woman must be as lovely as her loveliest gown, therefore it is only logical that she should consider the preservation of her beauty a prime essential. She no more neglects her skin than her teeth, knowing as she does, that a few minutes of judicious care daily are a necessity, not a luxury.

The beauty routine sponsored by Elizabeth Arden becomes a joyous affair as you watch the sallowness and lines melt away in a glow of youth. In addition to her Muscle-Stapping and Skin-Toning, Miss Arden advises her new Ardena Firming Treatments. The remarkable Vienna Youth Mask, brought to this country by Miss Arden, has been most amazingly successful as a natural method of rejuvenation.

And in order that you may have not only beauty of face, but also that beauty of body so essential to a fashionable allure, Miss Arden has now added to her personally planned exercises a new form of rhythmic movement called Plastic Exercise, which subtly models your figure as it develops grace.

The 2-Door Sedan, $745 Body by Fisher

"TELL ME who you go with and I'll tell you who you are." That has a familiar ring, hasn't it? But you seldom hear it any more. And why should you? People have a better way of judging other people now. They simply look at the family automobile.

And that is why the Pontiac Big Six is meeting with greater success than any other Pontiac ever built. It was designed to appeal to forward looking people. To progressive Americans who simply refuse to buy just any car—and who demand in their automobiles an increasing degree of beauty, luxury and comfort.

Study the Pontiac Big Six and you will see that it provides big car qualities to the fullest degree. It has big car beauty and grace of proportion. It offers big car engineering features by the score. In chassis and body, it is built to the strictest standards of big car quality. It performs like a big car—easily, effortlessly, silently, smoothly. It drives like a big car, due to its easy steering, its adjustable driver's seat and its internal-expanding four-wheel brakes. It rides like a big car—with an inviting air of big car roominess and comfort. Yet it sells for as little as $745.

Every day, more and more forward looking people are beginning to realize that the Pontiac Big Six enables them to express their progressive ideas without any great drain on their purse. And every day, the number of Pontiac Big Sixes on the road is increasing—because progressive people welcome the idea of stepping up in motor car quality without stepping out of the low-priced field!

Prices $745 and up, f. o. b. factory, plus delivery charges. Bumpers and rear fender guards regular equipment at slight extra cost. Check Oakland-Pontiac delivered prices—they include lowest handling charges. General Motors Time Payment Plan available at minimum rate.

AIRCRAFT NOW DESIGNED FOR SPECIAL USES

'Jack of All Trades' Plane Being Discarded.

BY COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH.

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

The airplane manufacturer is confronted with problems similar in many cases to those of the boat builder. Every new use found for aircraft requires a design especially fitted for the purpose if the maximum economy and efficiency are to be maintained; just as it is necessary to design boats according to specifications regarding speed, carrying capacity and seaworthiness.

In the past it has been the practice to design a plane to fill a number of purposes in order to obtain a large enough market to absorb the cost of design and development and to distribute it among a number of units. Such a plane was more or less a "jack of all trades," capable of doing a number of things but none of them really well. With the present demand for equipment to fill one very definite requirement, however, the aircraft builder finds himself able to design and sell a number of specialized types to replace the old all purpose machine.

Looking forward a few years, we might see huge transoceanic flying boats on one extreme, with small and comparatively slow pleasure craft on the other.

Veteran Pilots at Controls.

The large transport will be commanded by a veteran pilot whose years of experience and thousands of hours of flying time have qualified him to fly any ship over any airway under the rules and regulations of the United States department of commerce. Under him will be a second pilot, radio operator and crew, the size of which will depend upon the capacity of the transport.

It has often been suggested that as scientists and engineers perfected aircraft, the skill and training required to operate them would decrease. This is undoubtedly true of the small plane for the individual owner who has not had a large amount of flying experience. This type might be compared to the smaller class of yachts which may be handled easily by a crew of one or two men. They are built to fill a specific purpose where safety and simplicity of control are more important than speed and maneuvreability. In order to bring the airplane within reach of the average family a machine must be developed which is not only inexpensive in cost and upkeep, but it must also be so constructed that high skill and technical knowledge are not required to make its operation safe.

Commercial and especially military planes will continue to require comparatively highly trained personnel, depending upon the work they perform. The pilot of a transport carrying twenty or more passengers—a multi-motored plane equipped with every known device of comfort and safety—must be the type of man capable of commanding an ocean vessel.

As flying becomes older and as its pioneering growth settles down to a steady commercial development there will be colleges of aeronautics, not only for the engineer, but for operators as well, where instruction will be given in every subject pertaining to the industry.

Three Classes of Planes.

The general classes of planes we have today will divide into three main branches—land planes, sea planes and amphibians—with various types under each for specialized work. Thus we will have the commercial amphibian for carrying a large passenger load in competition with the best trains and ships—a multi-motored plane, probably four engines, capable of cruising its passengers in a comfortable cabin at 120 miles an hour or better. For use in countries where ground and water transportation is undeveloped, and where lower cost is more important than a few hours saving in time, an amphibian with a large wing area and lower speed will be developed. A still different type will be required for operation from high altitude lakes, where the air density is not much over one-half that at sea level.

Seaplane development has been sadly neglected in the United States, and is centered in Europe at present. The only agency in our country sponsoring seaplane construction is the United States navy. This condition is only temporary, of course, and was brought about by the fact that the commercial market for land types is larger and offers more inducement to the manufacturer. As the demand for land planes is filled the seaplane field will appear more alluring to both builder and operator.

The oceans offer the last undeveloped field for air transportation. Both the United States and Europe are covered with airlines. Routes are rapidly being extended into the remotest corners of the world where, in many instances, no other facilities of modern transportation exist. Aviation is bringing civilization to outposts which even the railroad has been unable to reach. It remains for the seaplane to take transoceanic flight out of the class of hazardous adventures.

HUNGARIAN GRUNDIES POLICE PUBLIC MORALS, KISSES, AND DANCING

BUDAPEST, Hungary, Feb. 9.—(AP)—City authorities have inaugurated a campaign against public "petting." Police have received instructions to stop couples walking down the street arm in arm. Other objectionable conduct of young people in cafés and restaurants is liable to fines ranging from $3.50 to $17.50.

A number of public dancing halls have been closed. Dancing is permitted only at the fashionable hotels. Girls attending must be chaperoned and then may dance only with young men known to the family. Several arrests have been made.

One case which attracted some attention was the detention of a young man and woman at a railway station. The man protested the woman was his wife and that the policeman had no right to interfere with them. However, the magistrate reprimanded him severely and fined him $17.50. They were told that a farewell kiss did not constitute a public offense, but that embraces of a more ardent nature did.

POLICE PLANE SAVES FLYER BY AERIAL WARNING

Los Angeles, Cal., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Warned by Detective Lieutenant Oscar Bayer, flying in a Los Angeles police plane, that his landing gear had dropped off, John Eddington, 21 year old pilot, was enabled to save his life this afternoon. The wheels dropped off Eddington's plane when he was several hundred feet in the air on his hop-off. He was unaware of his danger until Bayer took off after him. Bayer stood on the wing while Ben Taylor flew the police plane, and blew a siren to get Eddington's attention. Bayer yelled and signaled until Eddington understood his plight. The latter pancaked his disabled plane down over the ocean and made a landing off Venice.

HUNDREDS SEEKING AUTO TAGS TURNED OUT OF CITY HALL

Hundreds of persons were turned away from the city hall yesterday when they applied for their vehicle license tags after twelve o'clock, although they have been warned that 150 license investigators will be busy today handing out summonses to those who haven't them. The refusal of City Collector Morris Eller's office to remain open Saturday afternoon to accommodate patrons aroused much indignation.

"A drive against those who haven't their tags was announced a few days ago," City Clerk Patrick Sheridan Smith said, "but when the poor fellow who can only come Saturday afternoon tries to get his tag police are stationed at the door to send them away. If they come back on Monday they will lose a day's pay."

A large number of tags were procured yesterday and the city clerk's office is anticipating a rush tomorrow. Tuesday being a holiday at the city hall, another rush of late motorists is expected on Wednesday also. Collections for January this year exceeded those for January, 1928, by $216,812.

SKATER DIES IN CREEK.

Mount Carmel, Ill., Feb. 9.—[U. P.]—The body of Francis Pelitrer, 18, Ellery farmer, was found by searching parties in Big creek near here. He had been missing since he started to skate across the frozen high waters of the creek Monday.

J. R. MONTGOMERY, CHICAGOAN, WEDS CENTRALIA GIRL

Centralia, Ill., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—The wedding of Miss Helen Elizabeth Fyke, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Edgar Ellis Fyke, and John Hegerson Montgomery Jr. of Chicago took place tonight at St. John's Episcopal church. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hegerson Montgomery of Hubbard Woods.

The bride was attended by her sisters, Mrs. Theodore Gerould, as matron of honor, and Miss Lavinia Fyke, as maid of honor. Miss Marion Montgomery, sister of the groom; Miss Elizabeth McCoy and Mrs. George Christian Bunge, all of Chicago, acted as bridesmaids. Robert Howard Harrison of Lincoln, Neb., cousin of the groom, was best man.

FINGER PRINTS LINK HIM WITH KILLING OF 1919

A shabbily dressed man, picked up yesterday by Des Plaines street police on West Madison street, was sent to the bureau of identification as a matter of routine. The man identified himself as Arthur Davis, 28 years old, of no permanent address, but the police said his finger prints correspond to those of Frank Moran, 40 years old, who shot and killed James Patterson, 34 year old farmer, in a hotel at 1255 West Madison street, ten years ago. Lieut. Harry O'Donnell said he would endeavor to locate witnesses in the case and would book the prisoner if witnesses were found.

AN OPEN LETTER TO ALL YOUNG FELLOWS

I wonder if you are on the right track and feel that the road you have selected leads to a definite goal, confident of the future and sure that the years ahead will bring you all the things you ever wished for.

If you have selected your life's work and are sure you are working towards a successful career, then I want to congratulate you and you won't need, or won't be interested in the rest of this message.

But, if you have'nt, if you cannot see a definate future offering success, happiness and prosperity in the years ahead then you need everything in this message.

What you do in the next year or so is going to decide your future, to a great extent. You may have gotten an education and still fail if you lack specialized training. And even if you have not had a high school education you can make a success with specialized training, the same as thousands before you have done.

Electricity offers a young fellow untold opportunities to get into big paying jobs.

There are many fellows who call themselves Electricians who are just getting by. But, my friend they lack the necessary knowledge for success. There are many branches of Electricity, but, to succeed in any you must know all because they are so closely related to each other.

Here at my school I train you on actual electrical machinery with out books. I train you on door bells, burglar alarms, signal alarms, house wiring, armature winding, motors and generators, Radios, automobiles and the electried work on airplanes.

I want you to see my school this week. Come down and bring your parents or any of your relations and let me show you my shops where I have trained thousands like you for successful futures. Come down either during the day or mon. wed. or fri. evening. If you can't get down this week then mail the coupon and I'll send you my Free book.

Sincerely

SCHAEFER DEFEATS HOREMANS; TIED FOR 2D PLACE

CHICAGOAN WINS 400 TO 271 IN CRUCIAL MATCH

Belgian Disputes Decision.

New York, Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Jake Schaefer went into a tie for second place in the world's championship 18.2 balk line billiard tournament at the Level club tonight when he defeated the defending champion, Edouard Horemans of Belgium by the score of 400 to 271.

JAKE SCHAEFER.

The game which lasted ten innings, tied the low inning mark set by Eric Hagenlacher this afternoon when the latter conquered Felix Grange, 400 to 194. Hagenlacher also turned in a run of 264 in his game with Grange, setting a high mark for the series.

Schaefer Runs 205.

Schaefer threatened this standard by running 205 at night, but failed to get past a difficult cushion shot. Horeman's high run was 117, made in his ninth inning. He averaged 30 1-9. Schaefer tied for best average with Hagenlacher, with 40. The Belgian made a brave effort to overcome the huge early lead gained by his rival, and came along quickly at the end.

The match started slowly. Schaefer won the bank but went scoreless. Horemans took the lead by making 15 in his first inning. In the next session the Chicago wizard clicked three times and his rival made seven.

Jake Goes Into Lead.

Schaefer assumed the lead when he ran 45 in the third. Horemans responding with 18. The latter had difficulty getting the ivories in position and went scoreless in the fifth, after Schaefer made one point. Faced with a wide target in the sixth, Schaefer played expertly to bring the balls together for a string of 46, missing on a long draw shot. He left the ivories closely grouped, but the best Horemans netted from this advantage was a three.

A two was Schaefer's lot in the seventh while his rival countered with 14. Then the Chicago star launched his streak of 205. This was a remarkable performance, made thus by Schaefer's perfect open-table shooting. He gathered cluster after cluster without going in balk, rolling up the points with startling rapidity. A long one cushion attempt which failed brought the string to an end.

Horemans Disputes Decision.

Following this effort Horemans came back with a run of 51. Some excitement was caused on the Belgian's 123 shot which Referee Cutler deemed a miss. Horemans disputed the decision and some of the more outspoken spectators insisted loudly that the shot was good.

Cutler did not alter his opinion, however, and Schaefer took up the play to run 67. He went out with six, after Horemans contributed his high run of 117. The score:

HOREMANS — 15 7 18 6 0 3 54 51 117. Total, 271; average, 30 1-9.

Tilden, 'Tennis BadBoy,' Again Ranked No. 1

Boston, Mass., Feb. 9.—(AP)—William T. Tilden II., "tennis bad boy," was named as America's highest ranking male player for the ninth consecutive time here today at the annual meeting of the United States Lawn Tennis association, which began and ended harmoniously. Helen Wills of Berkeley, Cal., again was placed at the head of the women's ranking list.

HELEN WILLS.

Though Tilden, who was restored in good amateur standing last night after being suspended for violating the association's player-writer rule, did not compete in the 1928 national championship, more than 100 delegates from all sections of the country agreed that he deserved the honor.

George Lott Third.

Francis T. Hunter of New Rochelle, N. Y., was ranked second and George M. Lott Jr. of Chicago third. Both were given those positions in the ranking list last year. John F. Hennessey of Indianapolis was ranked at No. 4 in place of Manuel Alonso of Philadelphia.

Several other members of the sport's "younger set" were honored by being included in the first ten on the list, Wilmer Allison of Austin, Tex., was named fifth, coming up from his last year's eleventh position. John Van Ryn of Orange, N. J., again was sixth and Frederic Mercur of Harrisburg, Pa., another youngster, was seventh instead of fifteenth, as he was a year ago.

John Doeg of Santa Monica, Cal., again was named eighth, and the other two in the first ten, Julius Seligson and Frank X. Shield, both of New York, each were rated ten places above their last year's rankings.

Helen Jacobs, another product of Berkeley tennis, was ranked just behind Miss Wills on the women's list, changing rankings with Mrs. Molla B. Mallory of New York, who was dropped back to No. 4. Edith Cross of San Francisco, who was not on the 1927 list of 20 names, was named as the nation's third best woman player.

Others in First Ten.

The other women in the first ten were: No. 5—Mrs. T. C. Bundy of San Francisco; No. 6—Marjorie Morrill of Dedham, Mass.; No. 7—Marjorie K. Gladman of Los Angeles; No. 8—Mrs. L. A. Harper of San Francisco; No. 9—Mrs. A. H. Chapin Jr., of Springfield, who was No. 3 last year, and No. 10—Mrs. J. D. Corbiere of Southboro, Mass., who was ranked seventh in 1927.

John Hennessey and George M. Lott Jr., were given the No. 1 rank on the men's national doubles list, in place of William T. Tilden II., and Francis T. Hunter, who were rated third in 1928. Lott and John Doeg were given the No. 2 position, and William Allison and John Van Ryn No. 4.

Tilden won the fifth annual Cook county swimming interscholastic of the University of Chicago yesterday, and Schurz finished second.

Tilden's well balanced team had the meet won when the medley relay, the last event, started. Evanston won easily with Tilden second, but Coach Fuchs of Tilden claimed Holmes, Evanston's last swimmer, had fouled Ericsson, his anchor man.

Fuchs refused to have his boys swim the race over and threatened to withdraw his team from the meet until Coach Vance of Evanston agreed to concede the protest.

The disqualification dropped the north shore team to third place in the final standing and also cost it a new record, as the quartet swam the distance nearly four seconds faster than the record breaking preliminary performance Friday night.

Evanston set the only new record, however, breaking its own mark in the 160 yard relay by eight-tenths of a second. The new time was 1:20 8-10. Summaries:

Golden Gloves Entries Pass 500; Set Record

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

The greatest entry list any amateur boxing tournament in Chicago ever had.

That is now assured THE TRIBUNE'S Golden Gloves meet on the evenings of Feb. 20 to 23. More than 500 boys and young men already have entered the lists. Five hundred—and the entries are still open.

Last year's total entry has been eclipsed. It wouldn't be surprising now if this year's total reached 600.

The surprising feature of the entries is the number of out of town boxers who will try to make the Chicago team which will meet New York in an intercity tourney at Madison Square Garden next month. Nominations have been received from amateur boxers in Michigan, Iowa, Wisconsin and Minnesota, while local gymnasiums and clubs will be represented by full teams.

The size of this year's entry makes it imperative to use two rings on the first two nights of the tournament. One ring will be used on the third night, when the semi-final bouts will be held. Finals and the fights for third places will be decided on the fourth night.

Trains by Milking Cows

Among out of town fighters expected to make a strong bid for a title is Earl Runnels of Hinsdale, Ill. Earl is a welterweight and employed on the Chicago Guernsey farm. Drew Tenbrook, manager of the farm, has been taking special interest in Runnels, who is strong and rugged. He can take a punch and his friends claim he carries a knockout wallop in his right hand. Manager Tenbrook encourages boxing among his help. Matches are staged every day in the barns and a radio keeps the boys informed as to the results of important professional fights.

Jack Hurley, manager of Billy Petrolle and Russie La Rey, will bring a promising heavyweight from Duluth, Minn., Charley Retzlaff, a 21 year old giant who weighs over 200 pounds and is 6 feet 3 inches tall.

"Retzlaff is one of the most promising fighters I ever have been," Hurley said in the letter accompanying the fighter's entry. "He can hit and he can take it. He has engaged in nine fights and has won all of them by knockouts. He will be the winner of your heavyweight title and it will take a mighty good man to beat him in New York."

Lawrence College Team to Enter.

C. H. Rasmussen, football coach at Lawrence college, Appleton, Wis., will have at least three fighters in the tourney.

The Gary, I. M. C. A., Culver Military academy and Milwaukee A. C. are other out of town organizations which will be represented.

We want to emphasize the fact that no entry fee is required, but that each boxer must be registered with the A. A. U. A card in this organization may be secured from Roy E. Davis, chairman of the registration committee of the Central A. A. U., 531 South Clark street.

Every boxer who competes will be given a bronze button as a souvenir. The boxer who wins in each class will be given a golden glove with a diamond set in the palm. Silver gloves will go to second place winner and bronze gloves to third.

All proceeds of the Chicago tournament will go to the Forty and Eight an honor society of world war veterans. More than $9,000 worth of tickets already have been sold. The prices of admission are $1, $2 and $3, no tax. The tickets are on sale at THE TRIBUNE public service office, Madison and Dearborn streets, and in the lobby of The Tribune Tower.

Illinois gave the University of Chicago basketball team its seventh straight defeat in the conference at Bartlett gymnasium last night. The score was 33 to 29.

John How almost turned the trick single handed, registering eight baskets and three free throws for 19 points. The game was one of the roughest in recent years. This in addition to the close score, made it a good game for the spectators. As a Big Ten exhibition of basketball, it was only fair. The passing was ragged. Both teams dribbled excessively and shot from any position. However, many of these attempts registered and scoring was relatively high.

Yates Ousted on Fouls.

Capt. Gist, as usual, played the best game for the Maroons. Sid Yates, diminutive sophomore, entered the game in the middle of the second half when Harry Changnon forgot his defense. Yates played well until he was ejected for too many personal fouls.

The Maroons ran up an early lead of 6 to 0, but were unable to hold it after John How got under way. At the end of the half the Illinois had a one point lead, 19 to 18.

Early in the second period, the Maroons forged ahead at 33-23, through Sid Yates' one handed shot over the back of his head, and one legitimate counter, but their glory was short lived for the indomitable How came back with two field goals. Illinois maintained its lead by stalling and breaking for an occasional short shot until the timer's gun ended the fracas.

IOWA, 29; INDIANA, 27

Iowa City, Ia., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—After trailing through three-quarters of the contest, the University of Iowa basketball team staged a furious rally to defeat Indiana in an overtime battle here tonight, 29 to 27. The Hoosiers held a 14 to 9 lead at the end of the first half.

With half of the second period gone, Iowa drew abreast of the Indiana quintet and then forged ahead into a one point lead, 21 to 20, only to fall behind again when Wells sank two free throws and Veller dropped in a basket from the side of the floor.

A long shot by Wilcox and Farroh's free throw just before the gun knotted the count at 24 to 24. A free throw by Wells gave Indiana a one point lead early in the overtime period. Then Spradling, Iowa forward, dropped in a long field goal, but Strickland put Indiana out in front with his follow up shot with 30 seconds to play. However, Strickland fouled Spradling, and the Hawkeye sophomore knotted the count with his free throw. Leeka gave the Hawkeyes their victory with his follow-up of Farroh's shot. Lineup:

MICHIGAN, 34; OHIO, 24

Ann Arbor, Mich., Feb. 9.—[Special.] — Michigan strengthened its grip on first place in the Big Ten cage race by trouncing Ohio State tonight, 34 to 24. It was Michigan's fifth conference victory.

Michigan took a 19 to 10 lead at half time, when Big Joe Trunkowski and Bill Orwig, Wolverine forwards, went on a scoring spree, accounting for 16 points between them. "Truck's" four free throws, combined with his trio of baskets, matched the efforts of the entire visiting aggregation in the first half and gave the Wolverines an advantage which the Scarlet and Gray found impossible to overcome.

$50,000 Purse New American Derby Prize

BY FRENCH LANE.

The American Derby, for many years Chicago's most noteworthy turf event, has come back as one of the richest turf events in America, and when it is run at Washington Park on the afternoon of June 15 will carry an added money value of $50,000.

COL. MATT J. WINN.

The increase in the size of the purse for the famous 3 year old stake which helped shape turf history a quarter of a century ago, was announced yesterday by Col. Matt J. Winn, president of the Washington Park Jockey club. The monetary value of the race becomes equal to the prize of the Kentucky Derby, Belmont stakes, and Preakness stakes. Scheduled to be run nearly a month later than the Kentucky Derby, it should attract a field of considerably more class than the early rich 3 year old stakes are able to draw.

The American Derby has carried $25,000 in added money to the winner for its last two runnings.

Long List of Stake Events.

That the Washington Park course, located at Homewood, will make a determined bid for Chicago popularity is indicated not only by the increase in the Derby prize but by the liberal array of stake events that will be offered at frequent intervals throughout the meeting, which opens on May 27 and closes on June 29.

There are two $10,000 stakes on the program and four that will carry $5,000 in added money and including the Derby it brings the total added money for seven stakes to $90,000. It is one of the richest programs offered at a Chicago track since the sport was restored here a few years ago following the passage of the law which legalized pari-mutuel speculation in Illinois.

The Illinois Oaks, a race at a mile and an eighth for 3 year old fillies, and the Francis S. Peabody Memorial handicap for 3 year olds and upwards at a mile and a quarter, are the two $10,000 races which will be run. The latter, scheduled for a decision on June 29, two weeks later than the Derby, will attract not only the leaders in the Derby but all the older handicap horses in the country as well, it is believed.

$90,000 in Added Money.

General Manager C. W. HAY, arranged the program and pointed out that $90,000 in added money for seven stakes is exactly the same amount offered for the seven stakes run at the spring meeting of the Churchill Downs track in Louisville, where the Kentucky Derby is staged.

The Washington Park plant is being rebuilt at a cost of nearly $1,500,000. The job was started early last fall and will be complete several weeks before the meeting is scheduled to

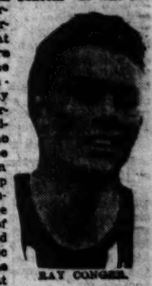
GOTHAM CROWD GOES WILD AS CHICAGOAN WINS

Captures Feature of Millrose Games.

New York, Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Paavo Nurmi was beaten. It was not Wide, Purje, Larva, or other foreign star that took the measure of the seven time Olympic champion. It was Ray Conger, an American from the Illinois A. C., who slammed past the great Nurmi in the last half lap of the Rod Wanamaker mile, one of the features of the twenty-second annual athletic carnival of the Millrose A. A. at Madison Square Garden tonight.



RAY CONGER.

It was Conger who drew steadily away from the Phantom Finn in the last 50 yards and it was Conger who burst past the tape, eight full yards ahead of the hitherto invincible Nurmi. A crowd of 15,000 shrieked and roared in its frenzy as the mild mannered American star gave Nurmi the second beating he ever has taken indoors.

Willie Ritola is the only one to hold a decision over Nurmi on the boards and Alan Helffrich is the only American ever to conquer him outdoors. That was in a half mile race in 1926 palpably too short for Nurmi.

Conger's Great Rally.

From the time that Conger started to make his bid nine and a half laps from the start, pandemonium broke loose in the huge Garden. The slim Illinois runner climbed from fourth to second in twenty yards and the shouts of the spectators grew louder and louder.

Doggedly Conger hung on, now a step, now ten yards behind the Finn. On the bell lap he marched up and followed him stride for stride. Rounding the last turn, Conger crept up to Nurmi's shoulder and passed him as the din of the crowd grew more intense. To the utter amazement of the spectators this sprint was not a last desperate effort that would soon be ended.

There was no answering spurt by Nurmi and Conger went further ahead.

When the American star broke the tape sedate old gentlemen were slapping each other on the backs. Strangers were shaking hands. The crowd just went wild. When Ray jogged back to the judges the bland, expressionless Nurmi was on his way to the dressing room with his head held as high as if he had won.

Fail to Approach Record.

In comparison to Nurmi's record of 4:13 for the mile, Conger's time of 4:17 2-5 does not stand comparison. But it is the fastest and best indoor mile race he ever has run. His best outdoor time is 4:17 in the national championships in 1927.

Flying down the spike bitten board in the center of the floor like a cyclone in full fury, Percy Williams of Canada maintained his record of never having been beaten, indoor or outdoor, by winning his sixty yard heat and the fifty yard final in the special international sprint series. The crowd which was heart and soul with Karl Wildermuth, the national sixty yard sprint champion, received Williams' victory with politeness.

Canada Wins Relay.

Canada took the international medley relay race by virtue of a splendid last leg race by Phil Edwards who gained ample revenge on his relay opponent, Sam Martin of the Boston A. A., who has thrice beaten the New York university star. Summaries:

LOUGHRAN FAILS TO ENTHUSE OVER WALKER BATTLE

Calls Halt in Harmon's Fistic Plans.

P. T. Harmon, the big builder, ceased firing on the Illinois boxing commission yesterday to start fuming over a new hitch in his plan to open the new $7,000,000 stadium with a Loughran-Walker light heavyweight title fight.

Harmon was thrown into disorder Friday by the commission's announcement that Walker could not fight here as a light heavyweight until he had defended his middleweight championship.

Tommy Is Silent.

Yesterday Harmon's temperature went up over Loughran's refusal to discuss a Walker match over the telephone. Loughran is in San Francisco. Harmon has the light heavyweight title holder under contract to fight on the opening night of the stadium here, but the papers declare that Loughran's opponent shall be a heavyweight. It was Harmon's desire to get this amended by wire so that Walker, as a light heavyweight, could be named as Loughran's foe.

"Loughran won't talk over the phone," Paddy said. "Well, I'll give him a chance to talk face to face. I'll see him in Tulsa on the 18th of the month. He's matched to fight there. I gave him permission for the bout."

Better Luck with Walker.

Harmon had better luck with Walker than with Loughran.

Jack Kearns, Mickey's manager, wired yesterday: "We are ready to sign immediately on terms we agreed upon. Walker has agreed to defend his middleweight title against Ace Hudkins at Las Vegas, Nev., July 4, so the boxing commission has nothing to kick on."

Boxing fans yesterday agreed that the Loughran-Walker match would be popular, but some expressed doubt whether Loughran would agree to fight Mickey anywhere. Loughran has expressed fear, it is said, that Jack Kearns might prove more dangerous than his boxer. Tommy will have to be satisfied that he would get a fair break here before he will agree to meet Kearn's protégé, the fans say.

Many Chicagoans are coming into the turf sport as owners of horses which will race here next season. Eugene Byfield is the latest to register his colors with the Jockey club. Mr. Byfield long has been a polo enthusiast but this is his first venture into the ranks of owners of race horses.

John C. Schank, president of the Hawthorne track, has been on a tour of the winter tracks in an effort to buy a likely Derby colt, but couldn't find anything for sale that he fancied. He will continue his hunt into Kentucky and Virginia within a short time.

P. J. Joyce is another Chicagoan whose silks will be seen for the first time on any race track here this season. He has secured a number of 2 year olds which are being trained by A. Baker in Kentucky.

SHEA CAPTURES ICE SPEED TITLE AT LAKE PLACID

Saranac Lake, N. Y., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Jack Shea of Lake Placid flashed across the finish line here today to win the three-quarter mile event, and with it the highest honor of the year in speed skating—the American championship.

Shea, skating for the first time as a senior, had been the sensation of the three day North American outdoor speed skating championships, and now takes his place in skating history beside Edmund Lamy of Saranac Lake, and Charles Jewtraw of Lake Placid.

The events of the final day were skated during a snowfall so thick that at times the racers scarcely could see. However, the weather was mild and the ice good.

In the half mile senior final, Shea skated a steady race and went to the front in next to the bell lap, crossing the line just ahead of Valentine Bialis of Utica and Lloyd Gunther of Detroit. In the three-quarter mile he met stiff competition from both Bialis and Melvin Johnson of St. Paul, Minn., and was forced to the utmost to win.

Bremner Scores 21 Points for Victors.

The sudden abandoning of its slow, deliberate professional style of attack for a fast breaking offensive made little difference in the scoring ability of the undefeated Loyola university basketball team last night, the Ramblers overwhelming Bradley Polytechnic of Peoria, 42 to 21, at Loyola.

It was the tenth consecutive victory for Loyola. Facing a man for man defense, Coach Len Sachs switched his battle plans. He put the fiery, red headed Jim Bremner in the key position and the fleet guard responded with a total of eight field goals, five free throws for 21 points.

With Stretch Murphy using his height effectively in controlling the tipoff, Loyola's new plays worked smoothly and rushed to a 22-4 lead during the first 15 minutes. Murphy took passes from his teammates in back court and relayed them to Bremner, whose fast drives under the basket Bradley couldn't stop. Meanwhile Loyola's tenacious zone defense kept the Peorians from threatening Loyola. The score was 28 to 10 at the half.

Capt. Bill Mason and Clyde McQueen each counted four baskets for the losers, two apiece in each half. Two thousand fans saw the game. Lineup:

In the WAKE of the NEWS

OFF TO FLORIDA.

FRIEND DON: Received your very intelligent note INSISTING I take my vacation at once and then proceed to Miami Beach for the Sharkey-Stribling bout on Feb. 27. I hope you did not think I had been hinting to go, because really Chicago is so pleasant now and I'm told it is very hot in Florida. It really didn't matter one way or the other, although I confess I do like the idea of seeing Young Stribling, who has been the "Georgia Schoolboy" for so long.

Well, old pal, I'm sorry not to have said good-by in person. But it was a strange thing. I've been associated with you for so long and thus recognized your unusually sound judgment in running the sporting pages, so I just figured something like this might happen unless you overlooked it.

So my trunk was down from the attic and a friend who had a drawing room had agreed to hold half his space to the last minute. So I just had time to rush home, toss my clothes into the trunk, give an order to the baggage company, grab the portable typewriter and make the train. I couldn't find my bathing suit, but perhaps it is just as well. Last time I had it on I was unhappy around the waist line and I don't think I have shrunk any since.

Note you say Pegler will be there, too. That's fine—in Florida—because you can get it there—you know what I mean. One year Peg came down to Louisville for the Kentucky Derby. He had an ailing stomach and his doc told him not to take anything along. But his stomach got better so fast he finally was complaining because French Lane and I had not brought more. But how were French and I to know he was coming with an ailing stomach which would get better?

Now don't think we'll be having a lot of "joy parties" and fall down on the job, or anything like that, Don, but it's just a comfortable feeling to know that you can get it if you really need it. You see, last year our party drove over to Miami and went into a fruit store to get half a case of oranges to have in our rooms and the chap put the half case in the car. When I asked him how much and he said $35, I called him a robber to charge that much for half a case of oranges, even in Miami, and told him to take them right out.

But you see, Don, that fruit store didn't really sell oranges. The oranges displayed were only "props" and orange was the code word for champagne. So, of course, 35 bucks wasn't so bad in that case. Anyway, if Peg comes down with an ailing stomach and doesn't bring anything and his stomach gets better, I'll take him to that fruit store.

Well, I'll let you know my address as soon as I get a room, if any, and you can wire when you want me to start working on the doings of the good looking Bostonian and the Georgia Schoolboy. Meantime best regards, and I hope you continue to get out those good sporting pages, supervised with such intelligence and good judgment.

Harvey T. Woodruff.

P. S.—I'll wire you as soon as I need money, which may be soon, as both horses and dogs race at Miami. Sometimes the horses I bet on are dogs, but these dogs down there are canine, not equine, dogs.—H. T. W.

Valentines Then and Now.

Layers of delicate paper lace
With Cupids plump embellished,
Mem rooms, drove, forget-me-note—
The valentine our grandsires relished.

An ardent couplet with the plea
That she his only love might be Forever!

Were I to send my love a wisp
Like this with dewer and rosy cupid,
I should be told in tones quite crisp
That I was "just too stupid!"

So all my sentiment I'll smash
And with my orchids I will ask
If she will be my valentine
For nineteen hundred and twenty-nine.

Clever? Country Mouse.

Notre Dame, Ind., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Notre Dame's basketball team defeated Pittsburgh, 33 to 23, before a capacity crowd of 6,000 here tonight. Colrick, Rambler center, besting the jumping Cohen and Wunderlich, a large part of the time, scored 14 points. Hyatt, Pitt's star, counted on field goals, Crowe and Smith also performed brilliantly for the Irish defense. Crowe also helped on the defense, sinking four shots.

Capt. Wunderlich of Pittsburgh went out on fouls in the middle of the second half. His particular task was fouling Colrick, which he did three times. Co-Capt. Jachym of Notre Dame, also went out on four fouls.

Pitt took an early 1-0 lead on 2 free fuss' free toss, but they were headed shortly and thereafter were never within three points of the Irish, who led, 18 to 3, at half time. Lineup:

TEX RICKARD—A STUDY OF THE WORLD'S GREATEST SPORTS PROMOTER

Genius Built Up Dempsey's Fight with Carpentier to Seven Figure Class

"Best People" Paid Record Prices

This is the fourth article of the series by Westbrook Pegler, describing Tex Rickard and what made him the world's greatest sports promoter. In previous articles Mr. Pegler detailed the early days of Rickard with anecdote and incident to point out the character of the man who was known as the operator of the "squarest gambling game in Alaska."

Rickard was trusted by the miners with their pokes of dust and his word was his bond. After making and losing several fortunes, Rickard went to Seattle with $500,000 which he lost when the authorities closed his gambling games. Then came several months in Paraguay and Tex returned to New York in 1915.

Rickard promoted the Willard-Moran fight in New York, his third venture. He revolutionized the fight game, conquered New York's gangs who had been accustomed to "crash the gate" and taught a new set of manners to the hoodlums. Tex brought New York's high society into the fight game and set the stage for his later record crowds.

The New York state new boxing law created a host of promoters. One of these brought Georges Carpentier, European champion, to America and shortly afterward Rickard signed the Frenchman to meet Dempsey.

Before the "Battle of the Century" Tex demonstrated he was the master of publicity. His only failure in a major promotion was the Tunney-Heeney affair which was at least partly due to the champion's lack of personality.

ARTICLE IV.

BY WESTBROOK PEGLER.

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

THE American race has come to enjoy chummy familiarity with millions, but up to the time of the Dempsey-Carpentier fight a million dollar sum was the point where everything went blurry and ran together in the popular imagination. To the common mind a million dollars was all the money in the world and anything beyond that was just some more money. And the notion of paying a million for a prize fight in which a man might get a bloody nose, or, at worst, lose a tooth, was especially fascinating to a country still mindful of men who had fought for $30 a month, minus deductions, and had taken rather more dangerous risks.

Tex Rickard later produced several prize fights which drew more money than the one between Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier, but for sheer power of showmanship, or ballyhoo, which is merely an old circus name for the same thing, this one surpassed them all. Tex availed himself of every latent possibility, and, for the first time since men began to pat one another with the closed fist for valuable considerations, the gate receipts of a prize fight mounted to a million dollars—to $1,626,580, in fact.

Rickard Sensed America's Amorous Feeling for France.

Carpentier was a good prize fighter for his inches and ounces and a graceful, decorative person, but, above all, he was a French soldier. Had he been a Spaniard, a Swiss, or other neutral, the same professional rating and public charm hardly would have qualified him for the Dempsey match. But Tex sensed the amorous state of this country's feeling for France. He saw the United States as a vital young full back, infatuated with a mature but fascinating widow and shopping for orchids. Tex went into the orchid business.

The ballyhoo ran a year. After the matchmaking there came the regular series of newspaper scoops, each one making exclusive announcement on unimpeachable authority that Rickard had bought a circus lot in Brooklyn or a disused patch in Manhattan and would build something positively awe-inspiring in the way of a prize fight stadium. Now he was weighing an offer of $700,000 from a syndicate of Montreal sportsmen to produce the prize fight there.

The next week Tex Rickard was seriously considering the transfer of the whole undertaking to London to elude priggish state laws in this country and escape heavy exactions of local politicians wherever he might undertake to do business; although it should have been apparent that the British excise raised an even more forbidding deterrent.

Then the Ballyhoo Started; Descamps Fell Into Line.

Somebody, probably Tex himself, casually noted a hypnotic quality in the gaze of Francois Descamps, Carpentier's manager, a little showman of the rural French street fairs, and the mere suggestion was enough to conjure the most fantastic speculation. A Svengali, he was, who might cast a spell over Carpentier and send him out of his corner indomitable. Or he might bewitch Dempsey in his corner just before the fight and bring him to the middle for the first bell enslaved by a superior will, unable to raise a hand, without volition to get up after one tap on the chin. Dempsey was thinking of wearing blinkers or smoked glasses during the preliminary flub-dub in the corner just before the fight.

The Svengali motif harmonized nicely with Rickard's decision that Carpentier would have to do his training in secret. Georges was so badly overmatched that Tex anticipated the same sort of journalistic booing and jeering that ruined his Tunney-Heeney production last summer. To prevent this he and Descamps went in for mystery on a large scale and shingles were hung out along the barbed wire fences of the farm at Manhasset, Long Island, where Carpentier was quartered, warning unauthorized persons off the premises. A detachment of state troopers stood watches around the clock and visitors, including the fight experts, were admitted only for the formal public workouts at appointed hours, except by special appointment, arranged through channels.

Photographer Takes Shot of Carpentier's Secret Punch.

The implication was that Carpentier was practicing some new punch in secret and this, of course, prompted many uncouth comments in the papers, for the sport writers felt certain that they had seen every punch within the talents of the human fist and the public demonstrations revealed only a limited repertoire. Still, it might be that Descamps was brewing herbs and working charms with hop toads in the dark of the moon.

Then, shortly before the prizefight, a photographer attending the afternoon performance, found his roving gaze returning to the loft of the old New England barn close to the ring. And when Carpentier returned for a private workout, some time later, an unseen lens, sighting through a crack, commanded the scene.

Descamps, Gus Wilson, the trainer, Italian Joe Gans and Marcel Thomas gathered at the ringside and Carpentier stepped in to box a round or two with Paul Journee. Paul was a huge, bovine party, who would have boxed one of the preliminaries on the million dollar program but for a business error. He went in against some now forgotten fourth rater for a qualifying match at the Brooklyn ballyard and forgot to duck. However, on this morning as Carpentier frisked about the ring practicing his secret punch, Journee reached out with a clumsy swipe and chunked him neatly on the chin.

Dempsey Had No Secrets; He Practiced in Public.

As Carpentier hit the boards on the heel of his chic boxing trunks a startled hush fell on the scene and in the depth of this awful silence the faint click of the camera shutter clattered like a train wreck. The drama sort of leaks out of this episode here. Descamps, Wilson and the others were up the ladder in great agitation and the young man lost all his plates, but he left the place with a distinct mental picture of Mr. Rickard's mystery man sitting on the canvas with his legs more or less tangled and a vacant expression on his well chiseled features.

In the meantime, Dempsey was training with great vigor at an abandoned flying field on the outskirts of Atlantic City and punching so hard that most of his sparring partners just passed through the camp.

Battling Gayhee, a lignite Indian from Memphis, arrived, emitting juniper fumes and feeling most brash. He had a secret plan to toes one punch into Dempsey's midst while sparring and win the heavyweight championship of the world by a knockout. He tossed it and missed. They had to use a jackplane to get him off the wall. Mr. Gayhee came in on his nerve and went out on his heels.

Harry Greb shouldered his way up to the ringside in the hangar wearing a sneering expression. He wanted to spar a bit himself. Dempsey was afraid Greb might gash him about the eyes with his billy goat head work and turned him away, which may have been just as well for Greb. He might have out-larked Dempsey for three rounds, but one of Dempsey's body slams would have split him like a board.

One of Dempsey's brothers opened a popular priced crap game. Jack Kearns opened social headquarters at a hotel. A dashing element of play boys hit the boardwalk. They were great fun lovers and played many mischievous pranks, but nobody objected much until one of the gallants grew petulant over a lunch check in an all night beanery and hit a waitress a smash between the eyes. He insisted that she had threatened him. But the waitress was a Jersey girl and an out of town boy couldn't hope for a square deal. They shooed him off the coast and the mayor told the police force to get rid of the whole set while they were at it.

GEORGES SOCIETY'S PET

Down at the airport Dempsey heard about this and went hurrying up the boardwalk to the hotel where Kearns changed clothes. He stalked through a little lobby, verminous with touts, petty gamblers, thieves and animal life too low to classify, going so fast the breeze sucked their hats off. Kearns was in, by chance, dousing himself with perfume from a squirt gun. Voices rose in anger. There was no written contract between Dempsey and Kearns and Dempsey was threatening to disown him if he didn't disown the boys.

That story broke for the morning papers, but it was only another sound in the ballyhoo. It just emphasized the social contrast between the two parties.

Carpentier, the darling of the right minded element, already had been taken up socially by some of the Long Island brokerage set. He had cruised on a yacht, danced with debutantes and eaten crumpets long before Gene Tunney ever realized that a crumpet was not a loose woman. Carpentier represented France and now he came to represent the refined element. This gave the $55 type of customer a class interest in the prize fight. It was their charming friend against the glowering creature of the brake beams, whose very presence in Atlantic City had been signalized by disorder.

For three days just before the fight, when the politicians were closing in on Tex for final and supplementary tributes and the pyramiding details of a $1,626,000 deal in public imagination and artificial glamour were demanding one man's quick and unerring decision, Tex was weak from the pains of the trouble that killed him. His appendix was giving him warning.

Rickard Gets Jack's Promise to Let Fight Go Three Rounds.

He lived at a hotel near the old Garden with Edith May Rickard, his second wife, herself a chronic invalid. At night Tex lay with applications of cracked ice on his body and morning found him back on the job. And it is one of the folk tales of the prize fight trade that in these throes he still had the energy and presence of mind to bind Dempsey to a promise that, for the sake of all those nice people, he would let Carpentier stay at least three rounds.

Rickard's own luck attended his customers that day for the rickety crate swayed sickeningly under the strain as 80,000 people sprang to their feet in roars two when Carpentier leaped in with a right hand to mouth that bobbed Dempsey's head and made him dig in his toes momentarily. It rocked again in the fourth when they came up, in utter stillness, to watch the Frenchman go down and lie twitching. But the crash didn't come.

In that instant Tex was watching the crowd, not the fight, and a few days later he ridiculed the ringside reports telling of a mighty roar from the mass.

"You reporters!" Tex said. "I'm laughin' at you. There wasn't a sound out of that crowd for half a minute after Carpentier went down the last time."

Tex Outgeneraled Descamps in Matter of Carpentier's Pay.

Late that night two New York detectives were standing in the bow of a ferry returning from the Jersey side. They saw a large car in the team gangway, driven by a chauffeur, with a solitary passenger in the tonneau. The man who had stampeded 80,000 people and $1,626,000 into a bleak expanse in a factory quarter on the wrong side of the North river was returning to his triumph alone.

The genial fiction about the dark powers of Francois Descamps became more laughable as the weeks passed. He became just a little bush league showman with squinty eyes who fizzed when he talked. Neither his native cupidity nor his sinister gifts had availed him in his dealings with the naive soul from Texas. He had closed with Rickard for a guarantee of $200,000, half believing the man must be crazy, when he might have held out for an option on 15 or 20 per cent of the gross receipts. This neglect cost him, in general figures, somewhere between $44,000 and $125,000.

Kearns Also Made an Error Which Cost About $200,000.

Jack Kearns has never lived down his humiliation. He accepted a $300,000 guarantee. When Dempsey finally broke with him he complained that Kearns was so dazed by the guarantee that he quite forgot to take an option on a percentage, thus waiving at least $200,000, a case of gross mismanagement, said he.

But perhaps the boys deserve a word of extenuation. The largest previous gate had been $452,000, for the Dempsey-Willard title transfer in Toledo and there were so many unsold seats that day that all but Rickard thought prizefight gate receipts had touched the ceiling. They had reckoned without the best people.

I hesitate to impeach Rickard's originality in cultivating this trade for the prize fight industry. He was so fond of them and believed so fondly that he had discovered them that it seems like plucking flowers from his grave to refer to accounts of a prizefight waged in Nevada, the very year that he turned in his badge and handcuffs to quit his job as town marshal of Henrietta, Tex., and head for Alaska with $100 borrowed from his mother.

But, in George Ade's account of the Corbett-Fitzsimmons fight at Carson City, I read that "Gov. Reinhold Sadler, chief executive of a bankrupt state, looked intensely happy at the orderly and high class attendance."

Gov. Sadler Found New Type of Fight Fans.

The governor has signed a special bill from the legislature to permit the fight after the regular army had chased Dan Stuart, the promoter out of Indian territory and Arkansas, after the Texas legislature in special session had repealed the Texas fight law to prevent the defilement of Dallas.

"I think it would have broken Gov. Sadler's heart if there had been a tough, disorderly crowd present," wrote Mr. Siler. "There were some women interspersed in the multitude and the boxes, where seats sold for $40, were partially occupied by men in city garb, with Van Dyke beards and an air of opulence and refinement."

Still, that fight drew only $22,000 and the statesmen not only demanded tickets for their votes but compelled Stuart to hold the show in Carson so that they would not have to leave town to see it.

Stuart seems to have been a pioneer, braving the same vicissitudes that Rickard surmounted and in much the same way. Thirteen years later, in 1910, when Gov. Gillette of California, chased Tex out of his state with the Jeffries-Johnson fight, another governor of Nevada sent him a terse wire saying, "Come on up here and fight your heads off." So Tex bundled his row off to Reno, drawing in his trial another far traveled crowd wearing few Van Dykes, it is true, but bearing an air of opulence and refinement, nevertheless.

Politics May Have Caused Rickard's Long Migration.

The reasons why governors chase prizefights beyond the borders of their states are always open to conjecture. Arkansas, Indian territory and Texas, in 1897, were not communities to blanch at the spectacle of a man with a split lip if the sagas of the southwest give a true idea of the social customs then obtaining. California in 1910 may have been somewhat more effete, but San Francisco, which was to have been the scene of special grace, seems to have been inured to pugilism and attuned to the morals of the ring.

Tex had been advised that there was some question among the minor statesmen in Sacramento, as to whether a fight between a spry young Negro and a paunchy Caucasian saloon keeper of advanced years would be a good or a bad thing for the peace and dignity of their fair commonwealth. Struggling with the problem alone they were inclined to think the worst of it. But they were open to argument and Tex heard that it would cost him $50,000 to conduct a convincing lobby. He took time to think. And the governor broke in on his cogitation with an order forbidding the bout, thus delivering the lesser politicians from temptation and doing himself no harm with the reform element.

THE KING IN HIS THRONE ROOM

TEX LAUGHED IT OFF

Tex always claimed that Gov. Gillette lured him along with implied assurance that he would be allowed to hold his fight, and suddenly, when he had spent $50,000, ran him over the border, a martyr to his excellency's political ambitions.

There was $20,000 worth of lumber lying on the lot when the word came that the men couldn't fight in California and Tex stood by that night watching, while the riff-raff of San Francisco came on in gangs to lug it away on carts or a plank at a time by hand. As the piles vanished and the police admired the moonlight, he said it was a good thing he hadn't paid the carpenters to drive nails in it yet. Then he laughed, bought a drink and forgot it.

The governor's order hurt some of the humbler political toilers almost as badly as it hurt Tex, however. One of the political Honest Johns of San Francisco had come to him just the day before with an assurance that the police would give every assistance on the day of the fight. There would be no grafting permitted, he wished to state.

"I won't take a quarter off you, Tex," he said. "All I want is 500 of your $50 tickets and I'll sell 'em meself."

"New York and Chicago are babies at grafting," Tex said. "In San Francisco every newsboy and bartender wanted a piece of the show."

Tex Was Genius; Received Publicity on Every Move.

Familiar as I am with the mechanics of sport ballyhoo and the qualities which constitute sport news, I never ceased to marvel at Rickard's ability to keep speculation going in the papers for months at a stretch regarding the most trivial business problems that beset him. If Tex took a quiet run down to some Jersey inlet to see an order of Scotch landed, he was considering plans to build a twenty million dollar motor speedway at Perth Amboy.

Associations of newspaper owners held serious consultations to see if some standard of authenticity couldn't be applied to the news of the Rickard enterprises. And an exasperated publisher at the convention of the Inland Press association complained that they had created a Frankenstein's monster in Tex Rickard. Originally they had covered his fights and carried his ballyhoo because they wished to sell papers. Now, having created artificial reader interest, they were compelled to go on indefinitely devoting more and more space to Mr. Rickard to appease that interest.

Another proprietor offered an appalling proposal to eliminate all news of professional sports and devote the same amount of space to church news. Then they all went home and continued printing news and opinions of Tex Rickard and his undertakings received from the press associations and syndicates or composed by their own staff men, as always. And Tex went on bantering with the papers and luring the sport writers along in windy discussion and speculation as long as he lived.

Tex Failed to Understand Delicatessen Comparison.

Most of the Rickard stuff was business news or comment as foreign to sport in any of the accepted definitions as the summary of the produce market. One day when Tex was complaining about the untimely publication of some business item about him I told him he ought to be grateful because he had no more right to publicity for his business than a neighborhood grocer, druggist or tailor.

"Why not?" he demanded. "I give you fellers plenty of good stories to write, don't I?"

That was as far as his understanding went, apparently.

"All right," I said. "You contract with a couple of large, sweaty loafers who ought to have jobs, to perform certain services for you. You do this because you expect to make some money. The same day the Dutchman down the street hires two fellows to sell pig knuckles, knackwurst and ham in his delicatessen. He does this because he expects to make money. Can you tell me why the papers from here to California should holler their lungs out the next morning telling people that Tex Rickard has hired a couple of bums to work thirty minutes for him six months from now and say nothing about the boys who are going to work ten hours a day in Krausmeyer's delicatessen?"

Tex grinned.

"You say the damnedest things I ever heerd," he said. "You ought to be glad to get behind these big fights and boost 'em. The best people in the country go to these fights."

"The best people in the country trade at the delicatessen, too. Why not a couple of columns a day about Krausmeyer's new ham, Krausmeyer's new keg of pickles, Krausmeyer's new stock of canned peaches?"

"Crazy!" Tex exclaimed. "Nuts!"

Tex Exploited Him

Georges Carpentier, a French aviator assigned to the Verdun front in 1916, was years later to capture the American imagination and receive $200,000 for fighting Jack Dempsey. All, of course, through the promotional genius of Rickard.

TEX KNEW REPORTERS

By experiment and accident he had discovered that the merest whisper, tossed about in the acoustics of the American sport page, became a thundering clamor of excited rumor and speculation. This was one of the reasons why his office was equipped with deep bide-a-wee chairs, an ash tray within flicking distance of each. The writers on the boxing run called there every day and the men doing general sports dropped in often. His own desk was more than furniture—it was an edifice. It was made of bronze and on it stood two silver figurines, boxers, who came to be known as Sharkey and Delaney, because they stood some distance apart, as though afraid of one another.

If Tex was in the building at all, as he usually was, he remained in his office and the sport writers had established for themselves the liberty of walking right in. I think Tex endeared himself to the sport writers because he never proceeded on the assumption that they were a lot of stews whose favor could be bought with an afternoon drink.

One muggy afternoon in summer I happened in and found him sharing a bottle of beer with a lady from one of the papers, but it seemed the gracious thing to do, and there was about Tex no hint of the "here come the reporters—break out the Scotch" attitude characteristic of other promoters. Beyond that, I never saw a drink poured there.

Tex would sit at his desk oscillating in his chair and discussion simply rolled along. His voice was not whiney nor drawling. It was a high voice but rich and he spoke in a clipped manner suggesting Coolidge. His grammatical lapses, or habits, were in the character of the man. I could edit his speech, substituting "saw" for "seed" and "heard" for "heerd," but Rickard didn't talk that way. There was something winning about that, too. He was observant enough to know that his so-called fine people spoke a different language, but honest enough with himself and the world not to warp himself out of shape pretending to be a Harvard Ph. D.

He liked to start arguments about the merits of practicing heavyweights and was little given to reminiscences about retired fighters. There was no advertising value in them. Nor was he easily drawn out about his own early adventures. His interest looked forward to next week, next month, next summer, and the maneuvers of heavyweights in more or less active competition. He stirred such discussion as he sat there with his gray hat tilted back, idly fiddling with his cane.

Rickard Finally Explains About His $83,000 Quarrel.

He told many a half truth, but never a lie, unless it could have been the time in Miami that he said he had bought the New York Giants and the time in Houston when he affirmed it all again. But his story was so circumstantial in each case that I believe he was merely anticipating something he believed sure to go through.

For several years he had detested Charlie Stoneham, the principal owner of the Giants, and when I asked him how they had ever come to compose their row he said there had just been a big misunderstanding.

"It was all over the Dempsey-Firpo fight up at the Polo Grounds," Tex explained. "A feller came up from downtown and said Tammany hall had to have $83,000 or we couldn't have our fight. I put up the $83,000 in cash. Al Smith heard of it and got sore. He called up Tom Foley and raised hell. Foley swore he didn't know a thing about it and got sore, too. He told the feller to look up Rickard and get all the money back. I was out golfing that day and the feller said he looked all over town for me. So he said he found Stoneham and claimed he gave him the money in a cab. After the fight, I couldn't get my money. I had a row. I went up to the Giants' office and saw Judge McQuaid. He asked me if I wanted to fight. I said, 'Not here in your own office, but if you want to come down on the sidewalk I'll fight you.'

"But I found out later that I was mistaken about the whole thing. Stoneham cleared it up and we're all right again. When I walked into his office he grabbed my hand and said, 'Richard, by God! I'm so glad to shake your hand again, I'm near cryin'.' He was near cryin', too."

Jimmy Johnston and Tex Get Together; Money's Cement.

Tex was a pretty fair journeyman hater, but every now and again you would find him tearing a page out of his hate-book and starting a new account with some one who had been a sworn enemy. Human forgiveness had something to do with this, but he was no man to forego a pleasant profit merely to humor a grudge.

His hatred for James J. Johnston, manager of a weird succession of physical prodigies, many of them with child minds, was a thing of awesome beauty when it erupted. For a long time he couldn't speak of Johnston in any tone below a berserk scream. A man had told him he couldn't tell a viper from a humming bird; that Johnston had the run of his office and, at the same time, was holding conversations with the federal prosecutor who was troubling Tex about the interstate transportation of the Dempsey-Carpentier films, contrary to law.

I am loath to believe that Mr. Johnston ever blew the whistle on a trusting friend, but Tex believed it, and he carried Johnston on the book for years. He carried him until James, one day, discovered little coal in his cellar and Michael McTigue, an unemployed drawing card, soaking up heat in his office.

Mr. Johnston was willing to let the dead past bury its dead, and he trotted right over to Rickard's office to ask for a match. He was a gifted ballyhoo man himself, and his fighter had a way with the customers. They did not exactly cry or kiss in the reconciliation, but the hate was declared off to their mutual profit, for Michael jammed the Garden three or four times in the second childhood of his career.

Rickard Might Have Ended His Feud with Jack Kearns.

Tex was even beginning to soften toward Jack Kearns when he died, and there was a hate for the ages, mutually fierce, malicious, and always active. But Kearns had Mickey Walker and the middleweight title. Tex saw some good middleweights coming along to fight him. The upkeep of the grudge was growing expensive.

Tex probably admired the reckless independence of an enemy who carried on an unrelenting campaign to trouble him in his business, social, and domestic affairs at a great sacrifice of money. Here was a truly esthetic hater who made loathing a burdensome luxury and never asked forgiveness even when his fighter lay idle through lack of a promoter. Kearns could have had rich matches merely for walking in on Tex, as Johnston had done. But he wouldn't, and it was Tex himself who began to remark toward the end that it was all damn nonsense to go on that way when all concerned should be making money together.

[To be concluded next Sunday.]

LAST SKI MEET OF YEAR TODAY AT PALOS PARK

Ski jumping bids farewell to the Chicago district today when the Forest Preserve Ski club stages its annual jump on the Swallow cliff slide at Palos park, 114th street and Keene avenue. The lull of the last month in this phase of winter sports, coupled with the disagreeable weather at nearly every other jump around Chicago this season, has whetted the interest and enthusiasm of ski fans and preparations are under way to care for a crowd of several thousand.

The tourney will start promptly at 1:30 o'clock. Stars from Milwaukee, Oconomowoc, Berrien Springs, Rockford, Hammond and Chicago, totaling sixty in all, will strive for the trophies offered by A. J. Cermak, president of the forest preserve commission.

Parking spaces for thousands of cars have been arranged. The slide is in perfect condition. The jumpers are in top form from early season meets and undoubtedly will menace the old record.

SINGER SIGNS FOR RETURN BOUT WITH BUD TAYLOR

New York, Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Since expert and public opinion seems to be equally divided on the question of whether Al Singer was fouled or took the easiest way out of his bout with Bud Taylor last night, the chief subject of the controversy took matters in his own hands today and made an effort to clear himself of suspicion by signing for a return bout with the Terre Haute, Ind., terror at the Garden on March 11.

While several doctors who examined Singer in his dressing room after the fight failed to find any evidence of injury in the foul zone, Singer insisted today that he was not fouled legitimately, but that Taylor hit him low several times before landing the punch that tossed a wet blanket on a promising battle.

Just as soon as Singer reached the Garden today with his manager, Hymie Caplin, to get his end of the purse, he made for the office of Matchmaker McArdle.

"There seems to be a great deal of doubt as to whether I was fouled or quit," he said. "I'm no quitter. I want to prove that I was a victim of a foul punch by signing for another fight with Taylor. I had him well licked when he fouled me, and I'm certain I can knock him out if we meet again."

Grinnell, Ia., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Two Missouri Valley conference swimming records were unofficially shattered by Drake university tanksters in a dual meet with Grinnell in the local pool this afternoon. Culver Polo Team Beats 124th F. A. in Overtime

CONFERENCE MAY MEET BIG SIX IN TITLE GRID GAME

A post season football game between the Western Conference champion and either the Big Six title holder or a leading eastern eleven will be proposed to the Big Ten officials by the athletic committee of the Illinois American Legion. The Legion plans to stage the game about Dec. 1 at Soldiers' field for the benefit of its disabled soldiers' fund.

Although the Western conference is opposed to post season games, Maj. John L. Griffith, Big Ten athletic commissioner, said yesterday the conference probably would change its ruling for the American legion. The proposal will be placed before the conference at its next meeting by W. C. Bechtold, state athletic director for the legion.

Knox Cagers Trounce Lawrence, 25 to 14

Appleton, Wis., Feb. 9.—(AP)—Knox college handed the Lawrence Vikings their second Midwest conference basketball defeat here this afternoon, 25 to 14. N. Y. AMERICANS REPEAT 1-0 WIN OVER THE HAWKS Rabbit McVeigh Scores Only Goal.

Hockey Scores

Toronto, 2; Pittsburgh, 1.
Detroit, 2; Ottawa, 0.
Montreal Maroons, 1; Boston, 0.

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—The New York Americans regained the leadership of the international group of the National Hockey league tonight, defeating the Chicago Blackhawks, 1 to 0. The game was played in the Peace Bridge arena, Fort Erie, Canada, just across the Niagara river, and was the first major league contest ever held in this community.

The score was the same as that which ended the Thursday night contest between the same teams in New York City. However, it was Rabbit McVeigh who came through with the winning counter tonight. He was down the left side of the rink, rode off the defense, and when just within the blue line, drove home an accurate shot that Gardiner was late attempting to knock down.

The game was unusually tame and only six penalties were dealt out. The Americans, concededly a defensive club, played much of that style in the early part of the game and clearly went on the defensive after scoring.

Riverside and La Grange Fives Split Suburban Bill

Riverside and La Grange divided West Suburban league games at Riverside last night. Wellman led the home heavies to a 31 to 20 victory after La Grange lights had won, 25 to 21.

Chicago took six firsts, and Purdue three. In the tenth event, the pole vault, Neff of Purdue and Cowley of Chicago tied for first.

Orval Martin, Purdue star, nosed out Letts, the Maroon sophomore, in a great mile race, breasting the tape two yards in front after the lead had changed three times in the last two laps of the 14 lap track. Martin did not enter the half mile, but was anchor man on the relay team and came within inches of giving Purdue a victory.

Illinois Boy Nines to Play For Legion Title in August

As last year, the state finals will be played at one of the Chicago major league parks Aug. 8, 9, and 10, with eight teams from four downstate divisions and Chicago competing for the title. The county championships will be decided by July 18, and the 24 district titles by July 20. The district winners will meet in five divisional tournaments before Aug. 3, to decide the entries for the final round here.

Age Limit Raised.

A change in the rules, Mr. Bechtold said, will permit all boys who have not attained their 17th year, prior to Sept. 15, 1929, to compete. Previously the date was Jan. 1.

Whereas last year several teams advanced to the finals by playing only two or three games, a rule this year bars any team from competing beyond the county tournament unless it played a minimum of five games.

Maj. John L. Griffith, Big Ten athletic commissioner, has been appointed state arbitrator to settle all cases of eligibility.

25,000 to Compete.

More than 1,000 team, composed of 15,000 boys, started play in the county tournaments last year, the Marine Post nine of Chicago winning the state title by defeating Peoria in the final game at the White Sox park; 30,000 boys are expected to play this year, Mr. Bechtold said in announcing the 1929 state committee.

Charles D. F. Merrill of Hinsdale and George W. Kitteringham of Rockford have been appointed co-chairmen of the second division committee. Ralph H. C. Lowes Jr., of Peoria and C. E. Brockman of Jacksonville were named by Mr. Bechtold as chairmen of the third division, with Guy E. Temple of Moline and J. F. Patterson of Galesburg in charge of districts.

Springfielder Heads Division.

The fourth division will be headed by John E. MacWherter of Springfield, and C. A. Hicks of Normal, Guy F. Wats of Kankakee and H. V. Millard of Decatur will be in charge of districts.

Fred H. Morian of Fairfield heads the fifth division committee with H. J. Knobel of Belleville, E. H. Chaney of Centralia, L. E. Belts of Harrisburg and Emmett D. Lear of Christopher as district chairmen.

BROWNIES PLAY DAVENPORT FIVE AT HIPPODROME

With last year's lineup intact, the I. W. A. C. Brownies, central state A. A. U. champions, will meet the Davenport Meccas tonight at the Hippodrome.

Marie McDopough and Lillian Riggs are the two regulars who will [illegible] down the forward positions, with Bonnice Ayers and Marion Ryan in reserve. The center job, held by Jo Copeland last season, is in doubt because of the skill being displayed by Frances Alswang. The Brownies are probably strongest in the guard positions, where Mary Byrne, Edna Erstens and Ted Teichman hold forth. Last year these girls held their opponents to 25c points.

Miami, Fla., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—A new mile and a sixteenth track record was hung up at Hialeah park today when William Maher's Fairy Maiden won the first running of the Miami-Florida handicap in 1:44 4-5. It clipped a fifth of a second from the mark Marconi set in 1926. Conditions were ideal for the running of the handicap and the six which started put up such a stirring contest there was little surprise when a new mark was established.

The race was regarded as between Clean Play and Fly Hawk, the two horses which staged a great struggle in the Miami Beach handicap last week. Clean Play won that duel by a head and he defeated Fly Hawk again today but was second when Fairy Maiden rushed past the finish line. Fly Hawk wound up in third place.

Fly Hawk and Fairy Maiden were coupled in the betting as the A. G. Robertson entry so that Clean Play had two of them to beat. At the end he was only a head behind Fairy Maiden which carried 109 pounds as against 117 for Clean Play and 119 for Fly Hawk.

The entry was joint favorite at 11 to 5, at which price Upset Lad was also held. Clean Play was quoted at 15 to 5.

LAURIE WINS AT N. O.

New Orleans, La., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Coming from behind under an excellent ride by Tony Pascuma, Laurie from the Jadell stable captured the Louisiana handicap in the mud and rain at the Fair Grounds here today. Two lengths behind the winner three horses finished only heads apart. In the order of their placing by the judges they were Chip, Marshal Seth, and Buddy Basil.

The result of the handicap gave the Jadell stable, Pascuma and Trainer H. C. Riddle a double on the day, as the same stable's Matthew, saddled by Riddle, was piloted to victory by Pascuma earlier in the afternoon. Jockey Pete McGinnis also won with two horses when he got Grand King and George De Mar home in front in the concluding races.

Snook, Florida Muskie, Gives Bob a Thrill

BY BOB BECKER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Punta Gorda, Fla., Feb. 9.—When a northern fisherman comes to the lower west coast of Florida he is going to meet a number of strange salt fishes. Such species as the iron jawed convict fish or sheepshead, the channel bass and others are usually new to the fresh water angler.

But there is one rough and tumble fighter down here that'll make all the northern rod and reel fans feel right at home. That is the rovallo or snook. He looks just like a second edition of the northern muskellunge when he attains a weight of 15 to 25 pounds, has a slightly undershot jaw like the 'lunge, and when hooked he leapes, rushes and slams around with all the vim and energy of an ornery muskie. Add to this the fact that you can take an outboard motor, push up a fresh water river which flows into the gulf and cast for the snook just like you cast for bass or 'lunge and you can see why Mr. Rovallo will make a northern fisherman think of the lake country of Wisconsin or Minnesota.

We met Mr. Snook [the high jumper with springs in his tail] yesterday. It was a case of renewing a former acquaintance because we caught this species a few years ago farther down the west coast. The Myakka river, a twisting, dark stream which flows into Charlotte harbor, was the scene of our second introduction to the snook.

What a stream! Lined with cabbage palms, with here and there live oaks bending their moss draped branches over the water to form a regular arch of green above your head, wild and uninhabited, the Myakka flows through a tropical wilderness setting.

Yesterday under a bright warm June sun we snagged a three pound snook which jumped six times. Later we caught a glimpse of a 20 pounder which cracked our lure when we placed it alongside of a log where a bass ought to have been loafing.

But Trails Far Back in Intercity Match.

Ad Carlson of Chicago beat Joe Scribner of Detroit, 2,144 pins to 2,119, in their intercity bowling match play which was resumed at the Randolph alleys last night. While Carlson gained 25 points on his Detroit rival he still trails by 509 pins. They wind up their match with ten games this afternoon and ten tonight.

LOMBARD BEATS MACOMB, 35-21, TO KEEP LEAD

Galesburg, Ill., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Lombard trounced Western Teachers of Macomb, 35 to 21, here tonight to maintain its position at the top of the Little Nineteen conference basketball race. Capt. Hall found his way through the Pedagogues' defense for eight field goals and four free throws. Grigsby, Macomb forward, who is high point man in the conference, was held to one field goal.

Macomb used a rushing attack. Their passing game was weak, however. The home team displayed a slow, cautious attack in which they awaited their chance to break through the visitors' defense. Lombard led 16 to 7 at the half.

A crowd of 4,000, the largest to attend a basketball game here in years, witnessed the contest. Summary:

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

The Tribune will pay $5 for each question accepted for the Inquiring Reporter to ask. Send name and address with your question to "Inquiring Reporter," Chicago Tribune. For today's question Harry Epperson, Y. M. C. A., Crawfordsville, Ind., was awarded $5.

The Question.

Do you think Dempsey will be a successful fight promoter?

The Answers.

Peter Sarpalius, 814 West 33d street, statistics clerk—I doubt if he will be able to make any notable success. He was successful as a prize fighter, but it is not likely he will be another Tex Rickard. It takes many years of experience and marked ability to stage such shows as Tex did. Rickard started in at the bottom, working his way up from the time he was a youth. Dempsey has lived his life in the ring, as a fighter, not a promoter.

R. J. Reiser, 2536 North Hamlin avenue, superintendent—I don't see why Dempsey shouldn't make a success as a fight promoter. He has had plenty of experience in ring affairs. He certainly ought to know all the internal and external workings of everything that has anything to do with the game. All he has to do is to follow in the lines laid down by the great Richard.

Robert A. Cannon, Room 840, 33 South Clark street, trader—He has been in the fight business long enough to know the game in all its angles. He ought to make more of a success of promoting than Fugazy and some of the others who are trying it today. It is said he has to make a success of the coming fight or go broke. But I believe he has a lot of money invested in the west coast.

Philip S. Bowe, 5744 Winthrop avenue, gas station—He ought to make a fair fight promoter, for the simple reason that he has taken part in a great many fistic encounters in which he was affiliated with Rickard. Dempsey has considerable money to back him in his endeavors; also he always has had the good will of the public.

Martin Wilens, Morrison hotel, house man—Well, Dempsey is as experienced and as well qualified as any man in the fighting game. Practically everybody is for him, so since he has the ability and the public's good will I see no reason why he shouldn't be successful. He was closely connected with Tex Rickard—an association which almost automatically prepares him for promotion on a large scale.

Purdue Cards Intersectional Grid Contests

Lafayette, Ind., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—One of the best balanced gridiron schedules that has been arranged for Purdue elevens in many years, including five Big Ten games and two important intersectional encounters, was announced today for the 1929 season.

Michigan and Iowa, strangers to Purdue schedules for some years, will both be met in home games here, along with the Kansas Aggies and the University of Mississippi, outstanding representatives of the Big Six and Southern conferences, respectively. The fifth home tilt will be provided by De Pauw, an old state rival.

Three Big Ten teams will be met in out-of-town games: Chicago, Wisconsin and Indiana, all familiar to Boilermaker followers. Purdue chalked up two victories and one tie against the three last season.

Considerable interest attaches to the Michigan game on Oct. 12, which will mark the first meeting of the two schools on the gridiron since 1900. Strong opposition will be provided in the season's opener with the Kansas Aggies, coached by Bo McMillen, former Centre college star.

The schedule:

Oct. 5—Kansas Aggies at Purdue.
Oct. 12—Michigan at Purdue.
Oct. 19—De Pauw at Purdue.
Oct. 26—Purdue at Chicago.
Nov. 2—Purdue at Wisconsin.
Nov. 9—Mississippi at Purdue.
No. 16—Iowa at Purdue.
Nov. 23—Purdue at Indiana.

HOUSE APPROVES $8,000,000 FUND FOR BIRD REFUGES

One or More Proposed for Each State.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Expenditure of nearly $8,000,000 during the next ten years for the creation of a nation-wide system of migratory bird refuges was authorized by the house today after less than two hours of debate and without a roll call.

Passage of the measure, which has been urged in one form or another upon congress for the last decade, virtually was assured when sections providing for the issuance of federal hunting licenses and for the establishment of public hunting grounds were eliminated from the program.

Representative E. W. Sproul [Rep., Ill.] attempted to force a roll call on the proposal, but was gaveled down by Speaker Nicholas Longworth.

Rules Quorum Present.

The speaker announced the bill was passed by a viva voce vote. Mr. Sproul jumped to his feet and insisted upon a point of order that a quorum was not present. Glancing quickly over the floor, the speaker announced that "219 members having voted, a quorum is present and the bill is passed."

Under the terms of the bill, sponsored in the senate by Senator Peter Norbeck [Rep., S. D.] and in the house by Representative A. H. Andresen [Rep., Minn.], a commission including the secretaries of agriculture, commerce, and the interior department, two senators, and two members of the house will be empowered to purchase, rent, or accept as gifts suitable areas of land or water.

$75,000 for Early Surveys.

Appropriations of $75,000 for the first year, $200,000 for the second, $600,000 for the third, and $1,000,000 annually for the next seven years are authorized by the bill, which limits expenditures for the administration and maintenance of the sanctuaries to 20 per cent of the total appropriation. The first year's appropriation of $75,000 was suggested by Secretary of Agriculture W. M. Jardine, who proposes, the house was told, to use that money in a survey of areas where migratory birds concentrate and to determine what areas are available for sanctuaries.

One for Each State Proposed.

At least 125 sanctuaries, one or more in each state and in Alaska, are estimated to be necessary to adequately protect migratory birds and at the same time fulfill the obligations of the United States under the treaty with Great Britain.

The bill passed today provides that no lands will be acquired in any state until after that state has consented to the acquisition, and the game laws of the various states relating to migratory birds, except as they are inconsistent with the federal law, will govern the refuges.

HANGS SELF IN CLOSET.

The body of Casper Nick was found hanging from a clothes hook in a closet of his home in Hammond, Ind., yesterday. Police said he had made a previous attempt to commit suicide.

THOUSANDS OF BIRDS TO ENJOY A BANQUET IN FOREST PRESERVE

Many thousands of birds in the Chicago forest preserves will have a grand feast today. Frequent snows and sleet have covered their sources of food and they are starving.

Hundreds of Boy Scouts and members of the Isaak Walton league have obtained eight thousand loaves of bread and many bushels of seeds, with large quantities of suet, bacon and cheese. This food will be taken to six distribution points by trucks and delivered to Boy Scouts who have cleared the snow off several places where the bird banquet will be spread.

The forest preserve birds have to be fed only about three weeks in ordinary winters, but this year they have been fed for nine weeks so far, two hundred bushels of corn and large quantities of millet and bread being used. However, birds have been found dead of exposure and starvation, so the big feed has been arranged.

The flocks in the preserves include woodpeckers, chickadees, nuthatches, cardinals, pheasants, quails, meadow larks, robins and the ever present English sparrow. A surprisingly large number of robins and meadow larks have remained north this winter. Pheasants and quail, under stress of hunger, have been invading farmers' barnyards and eating with the chickens.

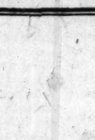
Is it a... STRAIGHT-EIGHT?"



G. M. Williams, President Marmon Motor Car Company, under whose direction the first Marmon straight-eight was built and who later inaugurated the policy of straight-eights exclusively.

. . . . . that is the constantly recurring question this year among all classes of automobile buyers

DURING the past few years most of the talk has been about fitments, colors and good taste, but in addition this year we find a lot of interest again being displayed in what's under the hood.

And when the talk becomes at all mechanical this dominant question is sure to follow, "Is it a straight-eight?"

To the big army of owners who want to push the throttle and have things happen, the straight-eight has become a symbol of increased performance—greater ease of operation—and rightfully so.

Straight-eight results are immediate and unmistakable. Were it possible to drive a car blindfolded to make comparison there could be no mistaking which cars were fours and which were straight-eights. You would sense and feel the difference in smoothness and the more immediate power at your command.

It is on this basis of comparison that the straight-eight wins its way—because it will absolutely demonstrate its superiority in the vast percentage of tests to which it is subjected.

Straight-eights have won every major Speedway event for the past eight years.

Straight-eights are growing by leaps and bounds in public favor. In 1924 only two manufacturers were producing straight-eights. Today 21 out of 43 manufacturers are producing them.

Now as the straight-eight reaches the crest of a great new popularity Marmon is found as one of its established leaders. Marmon did not invent the straight-eight idea. More importantly, Marmon harnessed the idea and made the straight-eight a practical, economical and long-lived car for all to own.

Marmon Prices—New "68", $1465. New "78", $1965. Prices, at factory. Deluxe equipment extra. Convenient time payment plan.

JANUARY RECORD POINTS TO GREAT MOTOR SEASON

26 Plants Report Increase in Production.

Detroit, Mich., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—If the month of January is a criterion of the automobile industry for what may be expected throughout the remainder of the year, those persons interested in the manufacture and sale of automobiles are facing an exceedingly busy and profitable period.

Evidence of this is found in official figures furnished by several of the leaders in the industry. Never before have the mass producers been off to such an auspicious start, made necessary by the demands not only of the distributors and dealers throughout the United States but also from the foreign agents, who are placing their orders earlier than has been the custom heretofore.

Show Increased Production.

Reports so far received indicate that 26 automobile plants showed increased production in January over the corresponding month of 1928, which shows the exceedingly healthy position in which the industry entered the current year, as the dealers throughout this and other countries took up the task of selling five million cars in the 12 months period.

Dealers as a whole are well pleased with this year's models because of the absence of any drastic changes. Manufacturers have improved their cars by additional equipment and minor changes, but have offered nothing radically new.

The tire industry continues on an exceedingly firm basis, with unusually high production. Car builders are ordering from 50 to 75 per cent more tires than a year ago. Akron tire officials estimate that city's output will average 20,000 more tires per day than last year, and that Ohio firms will supply 60 per cent of the total American market. The replacement market will call for at least 53 million casings, with a primary market for at least 20 million.

Employment Conditions Better.

The weekly labor barometer shows a rapid increase in the number of men employed in the various Detroit automobile plants. The increase is 3,967, with a total of 289,611, which number is greater by 66,109 than for the corresponding week of 1928.

The National Automobile Dealers' association this week adopted resolutions requesting the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce to appoint a committee to confer on trade problems and practices. Five men are to be appointed from the dealer group and an equal number from the manufacturer group to consider the dealer-factory relations.

Six subjects are to be considered, as follows: Creation of a fund for the removal of dangerous and worn out cars from the highways; protection of dealers 'franchises against infringement; recognition of freight and accessory charges as part of the car price; a fixed policy on the prices of discontinued models; study of the used car allowance and selling practices of the trade and recommendation of a national policy, and a thorough survey of dealer operating costs for the last 10 years as compared to the increase in gross profits. All these problems are considered vital and will develop through concentration and coordination.

SKIDDING RISK MAY BE REDUCED BY USING CAUTION

Skidding can not always be prevented, but with a few simple precautions its frequency can be greatly lessened. The first essential is a smooth running engine. If the power is transmitted in spurts, the chances of skidding are greater.

The next point is a clutch which engages gently, so that a sudden application of power is avoided. Brakes which take hold evenly on all braking wheels and which do not grab also are very essential.

It is good practice, in slippery weather, to apply the brakes without releasing the clutch until the momentum of the car is greatly reduced or until the car has been brought almost to a standstill. The objection may be raised that this brings a strain on the driving mechanism, but it will be found the most effective method, and if the safety of the passengers or a pedestrian depends upon it we should disregard any slight strain on the driving mechanism.

When driving across car tracks always try to cross as nearly as possible at an angle of 90 degrees with the tracks. If the rails are crossed on a line almost parallel with them the rear tires will usually skid. The advantages of using chains in slippery weather are, of course, too well known for comment.

Proves High Speed Safe on Four Lane Roads

Speed with safety has been answered in New York's greatest single highway project, a pavement 50 feet wide, running through eleven towns on Long Island for a distance of 24 miles.

An 18 foot road, with one traffic lane in each direction, will carry 1,969 cars an hour in safety, according to the Pennsylvania department of highways, provided the cars are driven at exactly 22 miles and hour.

On the other hand, the 40 foot road, providing two lanes in each direction, will carry twice as much traffic at an enormous increase in speed with greater safety.

GOOD MANNERS FOR MOTORISTS

With the coming of cold weather drivers are again becoming careless in regard to arm signals. Nearly every one will admit that neglect to notify of intention is discourteous and ill mannered in a driver. The practice of using the arm to indicate unusual driving procedure requires only the slightest effort. Complicated arm signals are not necessary. The extended arm is sufficient to tell a driver behind that his leader is about to do something, and give the follower a chance to bring his car under perfect control. The car that is slowed down or turned suddenly, without notice, is likely to be bumped, at least, and bumped by a person who does not want to do that. Just the slightest consideration on the part of the driver in front will prevent many an accident.

When cars are traveling, as in the illustration, the necessity for gesture is apparent.

VOICE OF THE TRAFFIC

SMOKING CABS.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—Let us get down to earth on this "Smoke Evil" which is so prevalent here in Chicago, and turn our attention to the cabs in the loop, especially the Yellow Cabs. Why not have one of your reporters go around the loop and snap photographs of some cabs that look like battleships laying down a smoke screen.

This is really a serious matter and I believe your paper should take it up as you are the only voice of the people.

R. C. A.

DEAF AND DUMB DRIVERS.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—"All auto drivers should be licensed; I know of one driver who is deaf and dumb," says one victim of your Requiring Reporter today.

I know personally of two or three dozen. And only one of those deaf mutes figured in an auto accident inside the last four years; that because the other fellow was drunk and failed to observe the rules of the road.

Why not license pedestrians—pass a law to keep deaf folks from walking on the sidewalk? They might bump into somebody.

Why, if you—yourself, the reader—should get a blow on the head which suddenly deprived you permanently of your hearing, would that affect your driving skill? Be frank with yourself, and you will conclude your eyes would "accelerate" month by month, until you would have it all over the seven sense driver who jumps at a sudden noise. For in both driving a car and promenading a pave, the eyes and judgment are everything; the ears relatively unimportant.

Several states in recent years have passed auto laws restricting deaf drivers, and every single state has—after a rigorous test of several deaf mutes—removed all taboos thereon.

This periodical hullabaloo recalls California's boxing law, requiring every fisticuff contender must be "physically perfect." Of course deaf mutes are "out." (As if one fought with his ears). But the laugh came when California's boxing commission barred the champion of the world in his class—the late "Deacon" Flowers, I believe it was—because he had one finger missing at the joint!

Don't make Illinois another laughing stock! J. FREDERICK MEAGHER.

ABOUT THE GAS TAX.

Chicago, Feb. 6.—After electing the Hon. Louis Emmerson, who we thought would protect the interests of the people, we now find that he wants to tax us three cents [3c] a gallon for the gas we use. It was not bad enough for Len Small to take two cents, but now he wants three.

Let's hope that the Chicago Motor club as well as all the rest of the motor clubs fight this bill and win. Members would rather pay them to fight this than donate 21 millions to graft. F. R. C.

NO PARKING.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—At the northeast corner of Canal and Madison streets the police have posted a sign reading, "No Parking at Any Time."

Every afternoon when traffic is at its worst at this corner, a fruit peddler pulls up in front of this sign with his truck and starts peddling fruit. The removal of his truck would permit another lane of north bound traffic. By what right does he park there, hindering traffic? T. H. SMUSON.

TOLL ROADS ARE MENACE TO CAR OWNERS—A. A. A.

Free Highways Should Be National Policy.

The battle cry of freedom, as far as the highways of the United States are concerned, resounded in a declaration of national road policy recently issued from the headquarters of the American Automobile association.

The statement was a reaffirmation of the policy to fight all proposals to foist toll roads on the car owners of the country.

Free highways, continuation of government and state cooperation under the federal aid policy, express highways as needed but under state control and owned by the people, it stated, must be the fundamental conception underlying and motivating the road policy of the nation.

Toll Highways Threat.

"The agitation of private interests for charters for toll highways threatens all these principles," it said. "It offers a particular threat to the federal aid principle which has made possible our great interstate highways.

"The states must not lose sight of the fact that money to build new roads can be secured by the state itself at a much lower overhead cost than it can be secured by private interests, while at the same time the capital floated by the state on sound financial principles is a bulwark rather than a competitive threat to the hundreds of millions of dollars of state road bonds now outstanding.

"Many of the projects advanced for toll roads savor of real estate ventures, which would strike at the very foundation of America's investment of ten billion dollars in highways in less than ten years. Of this amount, the car owners have contributed more than five billion in taxes and have thereby gained a right to be heard when any road policy is involved.

Few Such Roads Abroad.

"Widely advertised profit to be reaped from toll bridge franchises and the steady increase in the number of motor vehicles has led to this agitation for toll highways. There has also been advanced the success of toll roads abroad, but as a matter of fact, the development of such roads is negligible. There are two such roads operated in Italy. Others of limited mileage are under way. The conception of the Italian 'autostrada' is primarily a road reserved for motor vehicle traffic, an outgrowth of the prevalence of slow moving, animal drawn traffic and pedestrians. Such conditions do not prevail in this country.

"Likewise in England there are a few toll roads, but these are old and there is nothing to justify the belief that England will grant franchises for private toll roads on an extended scale."

Pacific Coast Highway Has 1,590 Miles Length

United States highway 99, so designated by state and federal authorities, is the longest continuously improved highway in the country. Beginning at the Canadian line, near Blaine, Wash., it passes through Washington, Oregon, and California, and runs practically to the Mexican border.

Its entire length of 1,590 miles is improved, and, with the exception of some ninety-five miles of gravel surfacing in northern California, just south of the Oregon line, and a few miles of its southern terminus in the Imperial valley, it is surfaced throughout with the highest types of pavements of concrete or asphalt.

Warns Against Oil Use Upon Automobile Clutch

Oil as a silencer has a deservedly fine reputation. But that does not mean that it does not have its limitations in this respect. One of the commonest is the clutch. In applying a lubricant to this unit to give it silence it must be remembered that unless sparingly used oil will get on the plates, where it will cause severe damage.

If the noise is the product of a lack of alignment it is better to have the unit realigned than to try oil.

400 Private Toll Bridges Found on U. S. Roads

There are about 400 privately owned toll bridges in the United States, many of them on the federal aid highway system.

REDUCING GLARE USUALLY CUTS RANGE OF LIGHT

Inherent Limitations to Improvement.

BY W. D'ARCY RYAN.

Headlight glare, a menace in present day motoring, is a temporary blindness. The eye has a great range of accommodation and the iris can contract to 1-64 of its greatest dilation and always adjust itself to the brightest point in the line of vision, and closes down so as not to admit more light than the eye is capable of utilising for clear visibility. After the light becomes more intense than the eye is capable of taking care of, then we experience glare, which makes it impossible to see even a well illuminated object which might be directly outside of the source of glare or beyond it.

Glare is the most disturbing and menacing factor in night driving, producing nervous strain, hypnotic sluggishness and frequently headaches. This is also caused by rapid shifting of the line of sight from bright to dark areas where there is sharp contrast to the beam distribution. This is particularly true with headlights having in their characteristic a relatively small and intense bright spot, which, until recently, was considered by some as good practice in automobile headlight design.

Glare in the ordinary automobile headlight is coincident with range. Some have tried to diminish it by using a colored lens. In this way you can diminish glare but you also diminish range. Your light has to filter through a tinted curtain. Another disadvantage with a tinted lens is that it neutralises or changes the distinctive color characteristics of objects on the road. There's no way around it—the only light that accommodates all the colors of the spectrum is a white light and this gives greatest revealing power under all conditions.

Many kinds of devices have been marketed to diminish glare without diminishing range. Many are merely psychological in effect. The fact is there are inherent limitations in ordinary headlights which make it impossible to eliminate glare without eliminating range.

Lenses won't do the trick. For the most part they improve the horizontal distribution of light, but when backed by a parabolic reflector they are not adequate to the needs of the vertical plane which is important from the point of glare.

In the early days of the automobile lenses were not required and then you got glare so unbearable you could not look into it at all. The intensity of the glare, of course, is caused by the concentration of light by the reflector; lenses are used to direct or to modify the distribution and glare; usually at the cost of range. It's a singular thing that about the first electric automobile lights had parabolic reflectors and in all these twenty odd years parabolic reflectors are still in general use in most headlights.

Skyscraper Garages Only Parking Place Solution

With automobiles at a high state of perfection, improvement in motor transportation must come about largely through the betterment of car facilities. Of the hindrances to motoring comfort, one of the most irritating and prevalent is the absence of parking places.

Seventeen American cities have curb parking space for only 6 per cent of the 1,425,000 automobiles that enter the business districts daily according to a recent survey of the National Association of Building Owners and Managers.

This proves what the forlorn motorist has long suspected. Further, it calls to mind that parking cannot be properly banned unless some place is provided for cars. Many cities have established parking areas at nominal fees on unoccupied land. Frequently private land owners use vacant property to good advantage by selling parking privileges.

Still Inadequate.

But all these steps, although helpful, are inadequate. If full use of the automobile in downtown areas is to be made in both large and small cities, downtown garages must be built.

Typical of the garages that will soon be found in great numbers in downtown sections, is the Hill garage of Los Angeles. Ordinarily the 78 by 155 foot building site would provide space for but six dozen or so cars. But with the erection of a 12-story garage, this ground area permits 850 motor owners to store their machines.

The first two floors of the Hill garage are reached by ramps, sloping runways, up which the cars are driven. The upper floors are attained by special elevators equipped with turntables so that the cars may be taken from the elevators and shifted about in any of three directions without waste of space.

Skyscraper Garages.

Skyscraper garages are coming into style also with several in service in larger cities. The Chicago Tower building will have equipment for handling 1,100 cars. Fortunately not all of the 25,000 tenants of this building will drive to work in cars.

One-third of all automobiles are in towns and cities of over 25,0000 population. On Saturday night there are even more. At present there is neither street nor garage space for these cars near their destinations.

BIG INCREASE OF WOMEN DRIVERS WORRIES BRITAIN

Two-Car Families Add to Congestion.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON.—The number of cars in England, and particularly in London, is increasing so rapidly that the already difficult traffic problem shows signs of becoming insoluble in another few years. And the women are blamed for the increase.

The proportion of woman drivers to man drivers is rapidly increasing. There are 100,000 of them now, and they are taking out hundreds of licenses every month. If they keep it up for any length of time, London will soon have more women driving than men.

Baby Cars Popular.

England doesn't take to the family car idea quite so readily as America. Each member of a family wants his or her own car. This accounts for the popularity of the "baby" cars, the tiny models which cost about $500 new, and which run on hardly more gasoline than a motorcycle. Statistics just issued by the ministry of transport show that the proportion of these cars to larger models is on the increase, and this phenomenon is probably connected with the increase of woman drivers. Two large cars would be a big drain on the average family purse, but when a wife wants a car of her own she can often afford one of the little models.

There are at present 850,000 motors in use in Great Britain, of which 100,000 are in London. Judging by present rates of increase and the ability of the population to buy cars, some predict that fifteen years will see the number raised to 2,000,000.

New Cars Registered.

In the first three months of 1929 11,000 new cars were registered in London, the figure for all of the United Kingdom being 58,000.

In 1926 the number of private cars in use in Great Britain was 650,000. That figure swelled the following year to 775,000. By the end of May, 1928, it had reached 832,000 and now it is 950,000.

Traffic experts, regarding these figures dismally, are wondering whether it will be necessary to build double deck streets and tunnels to take care of London's traffic, already more than the roads can comfortably carry, or whether it will be necessary to legislate against private cars in congested sections of the city.

TOURING MADE EASY BY UNIFORM ROAD MARKING SYSTEM

Nation-wide touring has been simplified by the institution of the United States highway system, which comprises 89,000 miles of highways logically linking all sections of the country.

The uniform road marker in this form permits tourists to travel the roads without confusion.

Standard signs designating dangerous hazards also are included in the system.

By the end of 1929 virtually the entire country will have important highways so placarded.

Winter Attention Urged for Shock Absorbers

Winter does not change the fact that some hydraulic shock absorbers need periodic attention as to the amount of oil and its quality. The greater roughness of snow covered streets and highways gives the shock absorber more to do, consequently there is more friction or heat, and the likelihood of a greater loss of oil.

CLASSIC ART deliberately utilized in motor car design

NOTE how the dynamic symmetry of Chrysler fender contours and wheels expresses the very essence of life and motion, just as do their counterparts in the "wave border" of the classic masterpiece of architecture and design.

THAT Chrysler motor cars are so different in appearance from all other motor cars is not to be wondered at in view of the unique plan by which their remarkable beauty has been attained.

Chrysler engineers recognized, as no others had recognized, that true beauty in automobile design must come, not from a chance inspiration of individual designers, but from a conscious and deliberate plan.

Guided by glorious precedents in art, architecture and design, they applied the authentic forms of beauty which have come down the centuries unchallenged and unsurpassed and translated them into terms of motor car utility and beauty.

It is because Chrysler style and beauty have this secure artistic foundation that they have won the admiration and enthusiasm of thousands upon thousands the country over.

And motorists may depend upon it that Chrysler style and beauty will always be finer, because they draw their inspiration from the recognized principles of classic art.

AUTO VACATIONS NOT CONFINED TO SUMMER MONTHS

Northerners Drive South to Escape Winter.

BY PUTNEY HAIGHT.

Greenville, Miss., Feb. 9.—The auto tour vacation apparently is becoming less confined to the summer months, and also, apparently, the winter vacation tour this year is reaching its peak to date throughout the entire lower tier of states.

In a day's run about Tennessee, Mississippi, or Louisiana, and certainly in the Florida region and in California, the license plates of northern states are as common as those of the locality in which they are seen. Is just what volume, comparatively, the winter touring is to be found is a guess. But it is safe to say that in this time of all weather roads and all weather automobiles a heavy representation among northern motorists are doing their extensive traveling in winter and staying on the job in summer, with week-end or over-night journeys in their own immediate localities to break the hot weather monotony and perhaps with a view of enjoying beauties of the northern summer right in the midst of it.

Heavy Tourist Travel.

At any rate there is heavy tourist travel, even in midwinter, from the central northern states. They head for the warmer states and apparently anchor there. Illinois highway 4 toward St. Louis and highway 1 to Evansville, and the Indiana routes leading to Ohio crossings further east are carrying traffic that is comparable to summer months. The license plates identify those from Wisconsin, Minnesota, Ohio, Indiana, Michigan, and Iowa, as well as Illinois, among this south bound army.

With ice two or three inches in sheets upon pavements in Chicago and on the highways leading in and out of the city, it seems incredible that hardly thirty miles southward—somewhere in the region of Wilmington—concrete pavements are bare and dry, permitting maximum speed with such safety as may be found in our two lane roadway.

Pavements Are Clean.

There is snow scattered about as far south as the Ohio river, it is true, but below Bloomington the pavements have been as clean as a ballroom floor. The most stupendous inconvenience confronting a touring recruit from Chicago is getting out of the city and the next is, perhaps, the chilly ride that faces him for some 400 miles. After that the touring proposition becomes one of most gratifying quality. Compared to the conditions existing in the dead of summer, the tours of the winter months in southern regions simply reek with comfort and convenience.

There is a great deal of evidence that the "one shot" winter tourist is not dominating this year. By that is meant the motorist who picks his winter sport on the gulf or in California and with a grand flourish hurls his car through at breakneck speed from the point of embarkation to destination, with hardly time for a bite or a good sound sleep. His travel experience consists of a fleeting glimpse at a strip of muddied panorama reaching from the great lakes to the gulf or elsewhere, with perhaps a Justice court receipt or two for a souvenir.

More Leisurely Travel.

There appears to be a much more leisurely sort of travel prevailing this winter. And as a result small town hotels are perking up and putting forth an effort toward making this sort of dropping in an attractive experience.

Another impressive bit of evidence is the prevalence of large, roomy, trunk equipped cars in the caravans. It indicates that some attention is being paid the wayside and it also holds out a gratifying promise to the producer of the larger type cars who has been studying the tendency of the mass of motorists to put up with the low price range of motor vehicles to the tune of an estimated four million for the current year. Such of the smaller cars as are seen in the touring parade are not loaded down to the gunwales with kitbags, bed clothing, stoves, tents and camping gear, as of yore, but on the contrary have lost many of the characteristics of amateur moving vans.

There may be an explanation of the slowing up of the "one shot" tourists, as well as the increase in travel volume, in the fact that much of the terror of the middle southern states belt is removed by completion of a number of north and south thoroughfares. Time was when the trip south brought on cold shudders at the very thought. Adventuring through the mires of Kentucky, Missouri, Tennessee and Virginia was an experience dreaded by all excepting the Daniel Boone type, and the general run of motorists who determined to "have a car" when they arrived went at it on the theory that the quest of the Holy Grail was a pipe.

Today there are few spots which really bother motorists on the north and south routes either via Kentucky and Tennessee or Missouri, and there is almost solid pavement down the Atlantic coast. The result, as has always been predicted, is a vast increase in use of these facilities, which now is developing into a general changing of vacation time from summer to winter among northern folks.

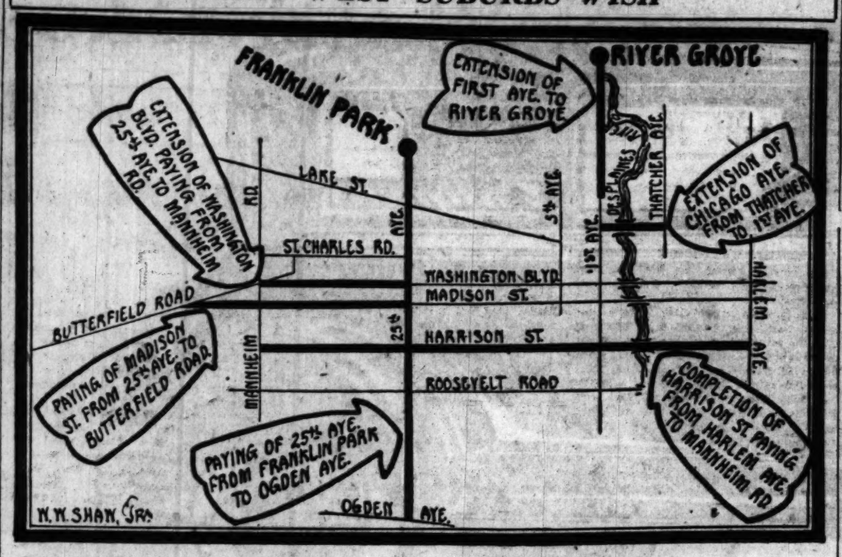
Brakes Which Stick May Prove Expensive

The average motorist who buys brake lining for his car usually is so eager to equip his brakes with a product that will not fail him that he overlooks the risk of using something that will cause the brakes to hold too well. Sticking brakes are a direct result of the use of inferior lining, and they frequently prove costly.

PLAYGROUND FOR MOTORISTS.

Grounds of 550 state parks or similar areas are now reserved in 43 states in the Union for motor tourists. The recreation grounds and motor camps have a total area exceeding 2,500,000 acres.

WHAT WEST SUBURBS WISH



Pictured herewith are the road requirements of suburbs west from Harlem avenue, between Ogden and Chicago avenues, and as far north as River Grove. J. E. Dittus, chairman of the West Suburban Improvement association, has committees engaged in studies of the various pavements indicated in the map. When completed these projects would join with west bound arteries through the city to the west limits.

NEWS AND VIEWS

Automobile row received a surprise recently when Thomas J. Hay, Inc., was announced as the new distributor of the Willys-Knight line, manufactured by the Willys-Overland company of Toledo. For the last 16 years Mr. Hay has represented the Chandler Motor Car company as distributor.

According to Mr. Hay, he plans to maintain the same dealer organization which has been handling the cars and fill in with others in the open territory.

The company has a complete line of new models, and recent developments in the body design department at the Toledo factory have brought out cars of outstanding beauty.

George Bird of the Bird-Sykes company, Chicago distributors for Graham-Paige again denied rumors concerning automobile mergers affecting the company. Nothing could be gained by mergers, he said. The company has a complete line, lacking in no types and is strongly intrenched financially.

Edward A. Blumenthal of the Gabriel Snubber company announces a widespread interest on the part of motorists in the performance of the new triple hydraulic shock absorber recently brought out.

The Nash Motors company reports an increase in shipments for January 77% greater than for the same month last year.

James L. Holmes and associates have taken over the Chicago distributorship of the Elcar line and under the name of Holmes-Elcar, Inc., will succeed the Rochford Motor company at 2209 South Michigan avenue.

H. R. Levy, president of the Studebaker Sales company, reports an increasing popularity in smart four passenger convertible enclosed cars. At the automobile salon held in New York, he said, 31 per cent of the cars displayed were of the convertible type.

Hudson-Essex retail dealers in this district report that the sale of cars in Cook county in January was 30 per cent better than in the corresponding month last year.

Engineers Dream of Road System of 750,000 Miles

The motorist's dream of seeing a hard surfaced highway leading off from every bend in the road is not likely to come true for many years, according to federal experts, who say it is better, after a certain point is reached, to increase the capacity of existing highways than to lay down new ones.

It is the present aim of highway engineers to complete the construction of approximately 750,000 miles of surfaced roads and then to direct their efforts chiefly to increasing the traffic carrying capacity of roads in existence. This is the trend as stated by experts of the United States bureau of public roads.

3,000,000 Miles of Road.

"Highway construction is not a question of simply building more and more hard surfaced roads," declares one of these experts, "but rather is a question of having enough roads to take care of the volume of traffic which passes over them. At present there are slightly more than 3,000,000 miles of roads of all kinds in the United States, excluding city streets.

"As to surfaced roads, 10 years ago we needed more highways than we have now. The popularity of the motor vehicle grew so rapidly and touring gained such general favor that the demand for surfaced roads soon exceeded the supply. Since then building has been going ahead speedily in an effort to catch up with the need. When the present goal has been reached, highway builders will be able to breathe more freely."

Whatever may be the number of motors in existence, the heaviest part of the traffic will be going to the same places, it is pointed out, so that the chief object is to provide good roads leading to places where the traffic goes. The need does not fall upon the construction of new roads, but making the present roads and those that are planned capable of handling this greater density of traffic.

Many Roads Needed.

"Our present highway programs are not based upon the actual need but upon the economic possibility of obtaining the necessary men, money and materials for the work, without injuring other necessary activities, both public and private," a bureau expert explains.

"The need for improved highways has been and still is so great that the money actually lost in operation over poor roads would more than pay for good roads. This, however, is a necessary evil, as it is impracticable to upset the labor market or unduly increase taxes."

In 1921, it is shown, there were 387,760 miles of surfaced roads in the United States, and by the end of 1926 this figure had increased to approximately 560,000 miles. Of the total 3,000,000 miles of roads, there are 2,000,000 or so which, because of the lightness of their traffic, never will require surfacing.

Engineers Learn Much.

During the last ten years highway engineers have learned much, and with this greater knowledge of their work they are able to proceed in a more intelligent manner than formerly. They are being aided materially by various research laboratories, and the highways built during the last decade also have acted as tests for proving the best material and the best type of road. Politics and personalities also are being eliminated from road construction, as the automobile user and taxpayer more and more demand full value for funds expended.

With the completion of the surfacing of 750,000 miles of roads one-fourth of the highways of the United States will be of an improved variety, stretching into every section of the country. This figure, of course, is not definitely fixed, for there is no doubt that there will be some further construction.

BUYERS OF CARS FAMILIAR WITH MERITS OF AUTOS

Automobile salesmen no longer are dealing with neophytes when they go to see the average prospect. In many cases, sales managers assert, it is true the prospects may know quite as much about the mechanical capacity of an automobile as the man who sells it.

Accordingly, the salesman who once was able to do most of his selling before the demonstration actually began, now must meet a growing "show me" attitude on the part of the prospective buyer. The motorist does not need to know the technical side of the car to be well up on performance, and he demands a demonstration that puts the car through all of its paces.

Although he may not know what makes a car fast, powerful, safe, easy to handle, and economical in operation, he wants to be sure that it has all these qualities.

To the credit of the automotive industry, it can be said that the manufacturer has given the salesman a product that he does not have to argue the skeptic into buying.

PEDESTRIAN GETS BREAK IN BOSTON WITH AUTO CAR

For years the automobile has been steadily crowding the humble pedestrian from the nation's roads and highways—but now the walker has begun a counter attack.

Increasingly, in recent years, Boston pedestrians have challenged unofficially the right of automobiles to monopolize the roadways in the downtown shopping streets, especially Washington street.

But this year they have received official sanction from the street commission to step down from the curb and appropriate a part of the road adjacent to each sidewalk.

This sanction is temporary, being a concession on the part of the street commission to the importance of the enormous pedestrian traffic during the winter shopping season. The commission has temporarily deprived motorists of 5 to 6 feet of the roadway on each side of Washington street between Winter and West streets, and has given the space to those on foot.

SERVICE DEMAND IN SUMMER.

The peak of demand for service comes between spring and fall. But it does not cost any more to have the job done in the winter, and delay usually turns out to be expensive.

AMERICAN CITIES NEGLECT STREET PAVING PROBLEM

Accurate Record of Costs a Great Aid.

Four-fifths of American cities are neglecting fundamental street problems to an alarming degree, declared Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, assistant engineer commissioner of Washington, D. C., in a recent address. Capt. Whitehurst, who has charge of street construction at Washington, compared the streets of the capital with those of Chicago.

"Washington has an annual repair program requiring the expenditure for paved streets of approximately $400,000 for minor repairs and $800,000 for replacement of worn out streets," Capt. Whitehurst said. "Inasmuch as Chicago has six times the population of Washington and about six times the street mileage, an adequate program for Chicago should be worked out with six times Washington's expenditures.

"Chicago should maintain her mileage for approximately $3,600,000, with the replacement program absorbing an additional $4,800,000."

Don't Keep Cost Records.

The seriousness and scope of the street problem was stressed and it was pointed out that there are in all cities of the United States more than 20 billion square yards of improved streets, over which traffic volumes varying from a few hundred to thousands of cars daily. Reports and estimates of new construction undertaken during 1927 indicate a total expenditure of over $400,000,000 for street roadway and alley paving to which must be added more than $100,000,000 for upkeep.

"Despite the importance of the street problem, few cities keep accurate cost records," declared Capt. Whitehurst. "Some cities have records of labor and material but only a few can give accurate cost data of various operations. Without these, how can we compare methods, how can we say we are operating economically, or how can we say we are getting the most out of our appropriations? If such records were available over a period of years and the repairs of a certain kind were costing twice as much in Chicago as in Washington, your engineer would want to know why—without such figures, accuratae and honestly made, we go pounding on in the dark.

Poor Inspection.

"One of the greatest problems confronting the American city is that of building streets properly, which in itself eliminates considerable future maintenance. I dare say 90 per cent of failure of streets and roads are due to poor inspections, lack of field control or improper maintenance.

"We inspect carefully qualifications of applicants for design and field engineering positions, spend thousands of dollars in preparing plans and specifications, and then turn the work in the field for construction over to men who oftentimes fail to carry out either the spirit or intention of the work, either through incompetency or neglect. I have recently examined the paving specifications of some 70 odd cities. While there are provisions in some I do not agree with, there is not a single one that, honestly and properly carried out, would not assure a reasonably good pavement for the purpose intended."

BILL TO ABOLISH AUTO TAGS MEETS WITH OPPOSITION

Police Commissioner Charles D. Gaither of Baltimore is opposed to a bill now pending in the Maryland legislature which would abolish the use of parking tags.

Commissioner Gaither explained that the use of the tag system for summoning offending motorists to the traffic court was adopted for the motorists' own convenience.

If the tags were abolished, he explained, the policeman would have to seek out the driver of the offending car or wait by his machine until the driver came to get it.

Then, the commissioner continued, the policeman would have to take the offender at once to a police station or the traffic court, where the defendant would be required to deposit collateral.

The bill was introduced in the house of delegates by a Baltimore delegate. He said, in explaining the purpose of his bill, that some motorists now steal tags from other cars and put them on their own machines on the theory that a machine already tagged will not be tagged again by the police.

6,000 AMERICANS TOOK MOTORS TO EUROPE IN 1928

The number of Americans who toured Europe in their own cars in 1928 showed an increase of forty-five per cent over 1927 and all indications point to unprecented travel abroad this year, according to the foreign travel division of the American Automobile association.

More than 6,000 motor touring parties went abroad in 1928 and spent more than $40,000,000 as they traveled through the scenic and resort points of the old world.

The estimate of the trans-oceanic movement is based on the cars handled by a foreign travel division, which was created to facilitate shipment of cars, handle customs documents and to generally extend services through the affiliation with the Alliance Internationale de Tourisme, embracing all of the European touring clubs.

FAIR PROMISES FOR REALTY ARE UNFAIR – ALBERT

Warns Against 1933 Subdivision Boom.

BY PHILIP HAMPSON.

Dr. Allen D. Albert, assistant to the president of the Chicago World's Fair committee, sounds a word of warning to prospective purchasers of real estate who may be confronted by glib salesmen promising huge profits to result from the city's great centennial exposition in 1933. Dr. Albert recalls the boom in 1893 when subdivisions were opened, some of which are still vacant, and he predicted that the city may expect only the normal gain in population during the fair year.

Dr. Albert's remarks were made at the sixth annual banquet of the Chicago Regional Planning association at which 400 members and guests were present. He placed special emphasis on the danger of oversubdividing in the days prior to the exposition.

"Not one single man will have to be imported to carry on the construction work for the World's Fair," Dr. Albert asserted, pointing out that the fifty-three months remaining to be utilized permit of planning on a sound basis. "Each unit of the exposition is being planned in detail, to be built on a given schedule, so that only labor now resident in the Chicago region will be needed. This period of more than four years, in contrast to the twenty-one months in which the World's Columbian exposition was created, will permit more beautiful as well as more permanent buildings."

Recalls 1893 Boom.

Basing his statements on the experience of 1893 and other expositions, Dr. Albert pointed out that only the normal expansion in population and business need be expected in 1933.

"Just prior to the Columbian exposition," he continued, "there occurred a most unfortunate boom; unfortunate because, as late as 1928, thirty-five years after, many of these subdivisions are still vacant, either having reverted to farm use, or remaining unused in the Skokie or other uninhabitable areas.

"Such a deplorable wasting of money and effort, diverted from constructive channels, must be guarded against in 1933. Summarizing the records of the extensive subdivision of lots in the five counties bordering on Chicago—Kane, Cook, Du Page, and Will in Illinois and Lake county in Indiana—you will be astounded to learn that approximately 270,000 more lots were recorded and sold or offered for sale than were absorbed in those world's fair years, and if no more lots were platted for nearly 27 years after 1893, or until 1920, there would be counties without the addition of one single lot or subdivision.

Predicts Normal Gain.

"This prevailed on account of the mistaken idea that there would be a permanent influx of people into the Chicago area as a result of the fair, or because of the desire of land subdividers to persuade many lot purchasers that such would be the case."

Comparing this speculative expansion with the Florida boom, Dr. Albert said a new boom in expectation of the 1933 centennial was already gathering momentum, mentioning advertisements he had observed which referred to the money to be made in real estate because of the forthcoming event.

"Statistical analysis shows," affirmed Dr. Albert, "and if the experience of other great celebrations is of any value, the Chicago district need prepare only for the normal population increase of 120,000 annually. Thus we must guard against the economic aspects of a boom, taking land out of cultivation so that it will lie idle and unproductive.

"The ideal we must strive for is a measure of self restraint on the part of real estate men and an effort to allow only sound development with actual improvements in and paid for and the land thus made readily habitable."

PAYS $175,000 FOR 4 HOUSES ON EAST CEDAR

George W. Doran on behalf of a syndicate has purchased from Mrs. Minnie Butts the property at 59-65 East Cedar street, 82x71.7 feet, for a reported $175,000. There are four four story residences on the land which were recently remodeled and furnished and given the name Cedar Shore Apartment hotel. It is stated the buyer will operate the hotel for the present, having no immediate plans for development. Mr. Doran also purchased from Sigfried Levy 50x114 feet of vacant at $34-36 Castlewood terrace for a reported $20,500. Mr. McCauley of the First Realty company was broker in both transactions. Isidore Vise and John Daniel Wild were attorneys in the first deal.

FARM AND GARDEN

MANAGERS ARE MAKING FARMS PAY DIVIDENDS

Twelve Yield 6% Interest to Owners.

BY FRANK RIDGWAY.

Apparently it is not necessary for a farmer who wants to preserve the family unit system of farming to have a thousand acre farm in order to make money. Managers are becoming increasingly important in making farming pay. Many farmers are getting rid of the false notion that they trade pride for profit if they turned over their farm to be managed by an expert.

Some feel that the alleged independence of owning and operating a farm is somewhat of a myth under the present scheme of things. Brains, brawn and time are all important factors in the profitable operation of a farm, and farmers are coming to realize that the growing and the marketing of crops is often too big a job for one man on a good sized farm, even if he has the ability and the muscle to handle all angles.

Average Returns Doubled.

There has been much guessing lately on the size a farm must be in order to hold down overhead expenses and leave a profit. O. G. Lloyd, head of the farm management department, Purdue university, Lafayette, Ind., has figures on a group of farms managed by an expert to indicate that there is no particular advantage to the lawnowner in having a farm with more than 480 acres.

Mr. Lloyd's report on a group of farms in Indiana skillfully handled under an expert management plan brings out facts that should encourage other farmers to put their land in the hands of a good manager. In this report he shows that twelve farms under the management of one man paid the owners approximately six per cent interest on their investment or double the average returns to farmers in the United States. This return was paid during the crisis period following the war from 1921 to 1927 inclusive.

During the same time the farm operators have received more than double the labor income of the average farmer in the United States, or approximately $2,000. They have been able to save more than three times the savings of tenants in three representative townships of Newton county, Ind., or more than $800 annually, according to Mr. Lloyd.

One-Third Profits Plan.

It is explained that the farms are managed under what might be called the one-third profits plan and consist of a group of twelve farms with twelve farm operators and one general manager. The farm operators furnish only the man labor and get one-third of the net profits. The land owners furnish the manager, the work horses and machinery, all capital to buy feed, live stock, etc., and all real property, and get two-thirds of the net receipts.

Mr. Lloyd's report says that the farms are in Newton and Jasper counties in Indiana and the returns are figured on the price of land in 1922, when five of the twelve farms were bought. Seven of the farms were valued at $175 an acre, the others at prices ranging from $65 to $125 an acre. The higher priced farms have made the largest returns on the investment, due to greater economic productivity.

"General live stock farming has been consistently followed on these farms," Mr. Lloyd said. "The sale of fat cattle, after subtracting the purchase price, represents less than one-fourth of the total farm receipts. The production of pork is the largest single enterprise and approximately as much feed is bought as is sold off the farms."

Reasons for Success.

The Indiana plan used on these farms makes it possible for the manager to keep in constant touch with the markets for farm products. In this case the manager is an excellent judge of live stock. Another essential in the plan is that it makes working capital available at low risk because it is under competent management. The third essential in the plan is that both the manager and the farm operator have the strongest incentive to be industrious and frugal, for the earnings depend upon the profits from the business.

The plan is one of the Purdue station's projects where a farm operator, his family, and hired help are entitled to the living from the farm, with but few exceptions, free of charge. Settlement is made once a year and Mr. Lloyd says that it is not uncommon for the byproducts of the farm, such as poultry, dairy, etc., to so largely pay the living and labor costs that the renter is able to deposit the larger part of his share of the profits when settlement is made.

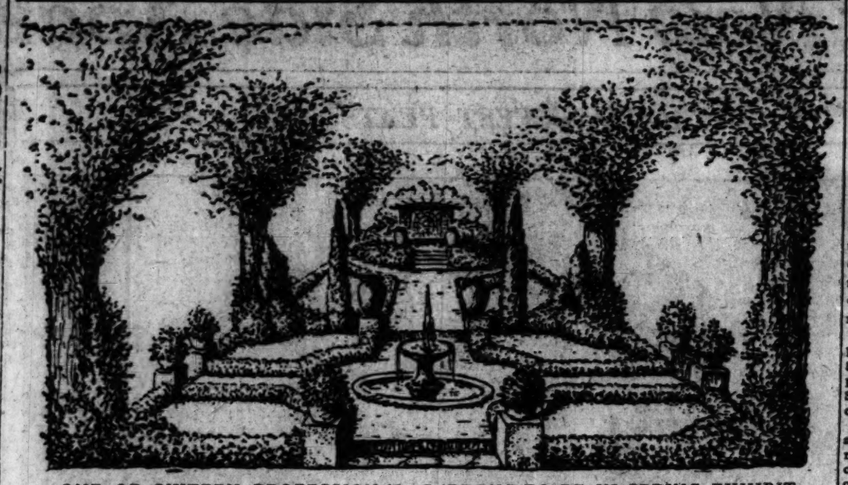
Averaged 551 Acres per Farm.

Farmers who are looking for an answer to their question on what is the minimum number of acres a man should operate to produce crops economically may find some valuable information in the following facts concerning twelve Indiana farms: They averaged 551 acres per farm. The smallest one, 280 acres, pays a little higher average return than the average of all farms. There seems to be no particular advantage to the land owner in having more than 480 acres in his farm.

Corn, oats, wheat, pork and beef are produced at low costs and sold at a relatively high price due to the large scale production, which enables the farm operator to give most of his time to growing crops and feeding them to live stock.

The manager of these farms, according to Mr. Lloyd, not only assists in getting the work done, but gives most of his time to the marketing end of the business. This division of labor is in no small way responsible for low production costs of the kind of products which the market demands and the sale of these products when the markets are most favorable, says the report.

CHICAGO FLOWER SHOW EXHIBIT



ONE OF SIXTEEN PROFESSIONAL GARDENS TO BE IN SPRING EXHIBIT—Formal and architectural effects will be featured by professional landscape gardeners at the Chicago Garden and Flower show which is to be held at the Sherman hotel Feb. 23 to March 3. Garden fountains and ornaments will be illustrated and elaborate effects will be worked out with flowers and evergreens.

The above formal garden will be displayed in the central aisle of the exhibit hall at the Sherman. Spring flowering bulbs will be chiefly used in the design.

Farmer Novelist Urges Unity in Transportation

Steamboats and locomotives fail to work together as good neighbors in Harvey J. Sconce's new novel, "To Market," dealing with the need of a unified system of transportation. In fiction form the author has dramatized the story of modern transportation, showing the desirability of relaying the nation's freight over rail and water routes.

SCONCE.
[Moffett Photo.]

Mr. Sconce would rejuvenate "Old Man River" and call upon this veteran to pack a share of the transportation load. Rivers and railroads afford two ways of going to market and the writer of this story attempts to prove that the two systems working in unison and harmony would revolutionize the present transportation system and its excessive cost. Under his plan, trains would run to the water's edge, where steamboats could dock at the tip end of the steel rails and exchange cargoes.

In his novel Mr. Sconce fights for an ideal, believing that a fight for an ideal affords as good dramatic material as a fight for a million dollars. For thrills, surprises, and sketches of real life necessary to drive home a point, the author takes the reader down the Mississippi, over the plains of Texas, across the fields of an Illinois farm, and on a university football field.

The human interest part of the story is carried through the 261 pages by two young college men. The book is published by the Stratford company, Boston, Mass.

Mr. Sconce, owner of a 2,500 acre farm near Sidell, Ill., working in cooperation with T. C. Powell, president of the Chicago and Eastern Illinois railway, has formulated a report looking toward the working out of an equitable arrangement between railroads and the operators of the inland waterways of the United States.

EGG EATING HENS.

My hens have been eating from six to nine egs a day. Can you give me any information as to the cause of egg-eating, and is there any cure for it?

M. M.

REPLY.

Egg eating among hens usually occurs in the winter time where hens are kept indoors and cannot get out into the sunlight. Hens that are kept indoors and are not fed cod liver oil frequently produce thin shelled eggs that are easily broken, and egg eating is commonly the result. L. M. Hurd of Cornell university says that a lack of lime in the hen's food may help make the eggshells thin, even though cod liver oil is fed and the hens are exposed to direct sunlight. Once egg eating is started, he says, it is difficult to stop. To help break hens of the egg eating habit he suggests darkening the nests, padding them with plenty of material, and frequent gathering of the eggs. Give the hens lime, in the form of oyster shells or limestone grit, at all times, and one-half of 1 per cent of cod liver oil in their daily feed if they do not have access to direct sunlight.

BLOOMLESS DAHLIAS.

Last spring I planted dahlia tubers that grew rapidly and reached a large size, but the plants did not bear a single blossom. They are now over six feet tall. I should like to know if anything can be done to make them yield flowers.

A. D.

REPLY.

Dahlia roots planted in this part of the country about the middle of May usually have plenty of time to produce blossoms. Pruning is practiced to increase the size of the blooms. By pruning the side shoots, larger and better flowers are produced. Disbudding also helps. Dahlia tubers are tender and for that reason they must be dug up and stored where they will not freeze. They are dug in the fall after the first killing frost and kept in sand or sawdust, stems down, and where the temperature is around 45 degrees Fahrenheit.

FOOT, MOUTH DISEASE FOUND AT WHITTIER

Authorities Quickly Check Its Spread.

An outbreak of foot and mouth disease has occurred among cattle and hogs near Whittier, Cal., in Los Angeles county. The disease first broke out in a herd of hogs on Jan. 18 and federal veterinarians killed and buried the entire herd of 3,500.

The outbreak was apparently suppressed when it reappeared in a herd of cattle about eight miles away, near Downey, in the same county, according to a report from the federal government. The report says that there is grounds for optimism, however, in the fact that within a period of two weeks new infection has been found only in one case just reported, following searching inspections over nearly 100 square miles of surrounding territory.

The government is taking no chances. When the disease first appeared veterinarians experienced with this malady were assigned to the outbreak area in Los Angeles county. Veterinarian officials in all states and nearby foreign countries were notified by Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the federal bureau of animal industry, concerning the outbreaks. This was done so that appropriate safeguards might be established to prevent unnecessary spreading of this extremely infectious live stock disease.

All herds in the outbreak area are being kept under close observation. The grounds and buildings where the original outbreak occurred are being carefully cleaned and disinfected. The movement of motor trucks and trailers used in handling live stock in the locality is under supervision, and these vehicles are being systematically cleaned and disinfected.

The Union stock yards of Los Angeles likewise are under special veterinary inspection, and commission men there have voluntarily agreed to make no shipments of feeder stock from the yards.

The source of the outbreak, though still under investigation, appears to have been infected garbage from a ship that had visited a foreign port and that later docked at San Pedro, Cal.

REPORT REVEALS SUCCESS OF NEW LEASE SYSTEM

Progress Made in Ending Moving Day Jams.

Progress in the move to do away with the old time hectic moving seasons at May 1 and Oct. 1 through the instrument of staggered lease dates is reported in the third survey made by the Chicago Homes Economic Council since the inception of the movement.

On the first check, which was made last May, it was shown that there were 5,058 leases which were signed to expire at dates other than April 30 and Sept. 30 before the council started its campaign to popularize the plan.

There were 13,025 leases written around May 1, 1928, for 13, 14 and 15 months, which brought these leases out of the old May peak. On the council's second check, which was completed Aug. 10, 1928, it showed that 11,647 leases were written from May 1 to Aug. 1 to expire at dates other than April 30 and Sept. 30. On the third check, which was completed Jan. 12, 1929, it showed that there were 23,955 leases written between Oct. 1 and Jan. 1 by the renting agents in Chicago. Of this number 11,600 were written to expire at dates other than April 30 and Sept. 30, which is 48 per cent of the total leases written during this period.

Results of Check.

The following is an itemized report of the three checks of renting agents conducted by the council:

The council has completed a survey of when families moved in Chicago into unfurnished apartments. Most people are of the opinion that families move in Chicago around May 1 and Oct. 1. A check of the council's survey for 1928 shows that this opinion is erroneous. The following table will show when families moved into unfurnished apartments during the year 1928:

January	16,487	July	36,283
February	19,676	August	33,143
March	35,917	September	44,356
April	50,323	October	34,463
May	35,277	November	23,523
June	30,816	December	14,964

Moved during year, total, 357,426.

Moved April and September, 94,493, less than 27%.

Moved March, April, August and September, 156,637, less than 44%.

Moved other eight months, 200,789, over 56%.

The council estimates that 48 per cent of all leases are written in months other than March, April, August and September. During October, November and December, 1928, 23,955 leases were written by renting agents. Of this number 52 per cent, 12,355 leases written to expire April and September and 48 per cent, 11,600 leases written to expire at dates other than April and September.

94,579 Families Move.

There were 94,579 families moved into unfurnished apartments during April and September. This is less than 27 per cent of the families that moved into unfurnished apartments during the year 1928. The balance of the families, or 73 per cent, moved in the other ten months of 1928.

During the year 1928, 50,343 families moved into Chicago either from out of the city or from hotels and furnished apartments. There were 307,093 families that moved from one unfurnished apartment to another unfurnished apartment. Fifty-six per cent of these families moved in months other than March, April, August and September.

47TH STREET LEASE.

The Silver Dollar Stores, Inc., has closed a fifteen year lease with Robert M. Levy on the premises at 342 East 47th street. This is the fourteenth store to be leased by the company in a year. Benjamin C. Rose was broker. Isaac Rothschild and Krinsky, Levitan & Glassner were attorneys.

The purchase by the State Bank of Chicago from the Field Museum of Natural History of the Temple building and the leasehold interest in the ground occupied by it at the southwest corner of La Salle and Monroe streets was the most important transaction in many months. The sale marks the end of efforts made by Mrs. Mathilda B. Carse, who conceived the idea of its construction, to save it for the Women's Christian Temperance union. The bank paid $550,000 for the building and leasehold interest and will tear it down for replacement by a more modern structure. The ground is owned by the children of Marshall Field Jr.

MRS. MATHILDA B. CARSE.

Frank D. Chase, Inc., industrial engineer, has leased from the heirs of Abram Poole the Poole homestead at the southeast corner of Michigan avenue and Erie street at a reported term rental of about $25,000. The Bowes Realty company was broker.

The sale by W. D. Kerfoot to John J. Glessner of the T. H. Harvey residence and grounds at 1707 Prairie avenue for $30,000 was arranged during the week. Mr. Glessner will tear down the present house and erect two fine residences, one for his son and the other for his daughter, on the ground. The lot has a frontage of 102½ feet, with a depth of 177, and the house covers an area of 55x90 feet. The Harvey house is one of the finest in the neighborhood. It is three stories high.

Leon Mandel has purchased from George and Thomas G. Dyer an undivided fifth interest in part of the land occupied by Mandel Brothers at the northwest corner of Wabash avenue and Madison street, 71.7x150 feet, for $150,000. The purchase gives Mr. Mandel an undivided two-fifth interest in the land, the remainder belonging to Butler Brothers. The entire property is under lease to Mandel Brothers for 99 years from 1899 at an annual rental of $23,500.

HOME BUILDING AND REMODELING

FLAT WALL PAINT GIVES PLEASING EFFECTS IN HOME

Lends to Room Feeling of Artistry, Rest.

(Next week will appear an article on "When Remodeling—Insulate."

BY LOUISE BARGELT.
[Home Builders Editor.]

Consider your walls! Paint is a pliable medium. In decorative fields it possesses many interesting treatments which may be called into play and which effect a desirable harmony between furnishings and walls.

LOUISE BARGELT. [Hutchinson Photo.]

In considering the remodeling of a home it is probably that most of the interior walls will be redecorated. And in considering the various possible wall finishes it is well to remember that there are no rooms in the home—excepting perhaps the bath and kitchen—where the soft, mellow artistic color effects possible through the use of good flat wall paints do not offer a pleasing and suitable and economical wall finish.

Soft toned walls treated properly lend spaciousness to a room. They may be depended upon to give add illumination, warmth of tone, decorative beauty and at the same time provide a restful background for the interior furnishings and draperies.

Moreover, a proper paint on a wall possesses many practical virtues besides that of artistry and decoration.

Clean and Sanitary.

Offering scant lodgment for dust and dirt they are clean and sanitary. They are also economical because, when necessary, easy washing takes the place of redecorating. Again, when refinishing is deemed desirable, the cost is small.

Flat wall paints as a class are well known through actual experience in service.

Obtainable in some score of colors, these paints may be chosen which imitate nature in their soft tones; yielding the rich mellow haze of nature's distances and giving to rooms so decorated that atmospheric quality known as "repose."

The size and type of a room determine to a certain extent the color selection.

Where a room is large and high ceilinged, a formal room, the deeper richer colors are more suitable to give it warmth and intimacy. Where a room is smaller and more informal, the delicate and mellower shades are artistically fitting.

Illusion of spaciousness.

Many homes which are being remodeled today are small homes, and walls treated through this medium of soft, flat paint, emphasize the architecture of the room, creating the illusion of greater spaciousness by rendering the wall less striking.

There are flat wall paints in many colors which are essentially oil paints. This type of paint penetrates the surface and is therefore immensely durable.

Sometimes a two tone effect is used in a room. This combining of two colors may be done in living room or dining room, library or boudoir. Naturally the two colors chosen are those which blend well together and which have been included in the room's decoration.

Too much emphasis cannot be given the preparation of all surfaces to receive paint.

If the house to be decorated has been freshly plastered, that is if it is a new house or one which has undergone extensive remodeling, it should be well heated and ventilated before it is painted.

Treatment for Faults.

"What can be done to overcome plaster suction and plaster salts?" is a question often asked when the time comes to apply the paint coats.

Special treatment for these ailments is not necessary if the plaster has been well seasoned or aged, and if a properly designed paint has been used according to directions.

In cases of excessive amounts of free lime the preliminary treatment of plaster with zinc sulphates wash—four pounds zinc sulphate crystals in a gallon of water—is to be recommended. This treatment changes the free lime to inert gypsum and after drying the plaster is in excellent condition for the paint.

Filigreed effects are used in many combinations, and are simple and economical to achieve, as the tools used for these effects are the simplest—sometimes a sponge or a crumpled newspaper.

Whether to use the plain flat wall finish or one of its variations and newer treatments depends on the character of room.

Plain Flat Paint.

Where a room is period one might use a plain flat paint, slightly tinted, on a smooth or rough-textured wall. Or take a colonial bedroom—here the two tone effect would be charming.

Where walls of this type have become dusty it is a simple matter to clean them, using one gallon of hot water to one pound of pure soap chips and one-sixteenth of a gallon of kerosene.

Whether the home owner is considering extensive remodeling or merely redecorating, or perchance contemplating the building of an entirely new home, he will find that a study of the merits of the outstanding flat wall paints today reveals their many virtues—their decorative value, their restfulness, their economy of original cost and also in upkeep, and their extreme durability

FORMING BACKGROUND OF BEAUTY

Plain painted walls in soft medium tones form a background of beauty for charming pictures as well as lovely furnishings.

ASSERT U. S. WASTES BILLION ANNUALLY IN HEATING HOUSES

Faultily built dwellings are expensive to their owners. Thermal engineers who have studied various insulating methods by which warmth may be retained in houses, figure that home owners in this country are spending around a billion of dollars a year—needlessly spending this—to heat poorly built and poorly protected homes.

The United States bureau of standards states in a recent publication that nearly one-third of every dollar spent for heat escapes through the roof and walls and 15 per cent of that same dollar escapes through doors and windows not adequately protected.

Incidentally it is estimated that in many cases the living rooms receive only about 50 per cent or 60 per cent of every dollar spent for coal. It goes through the chimney or into the ash pit in the shape of unburned coal.

Here is where good heating plants can save the buyer more than their cost over poor ones and careful firing can also help to eliminate this waste.

Adequate insulation of walls and roof also is a big help in reducing the escape of the heat dollar. Hence its importance and the reason for its phenomenal rise in popularity in the last few years.

Adequate protection of windows and doors by weather stripping and storm sash is still another heat saver.

According to the bureau of standards, again, it is claimed that weather stripping can save from 15 per cent to 20 per cent of fuel otherwise burned and by using storm windows in addition one can save 25 per cent to 30 per cent.

Glaze Porch and Brighten Their Parlor

Improve Their Parlor.

Whiting, Ind.—Three years ago we bought a small cottage. We have five rooms, all well lighted and airy except for our parlor, which always seemed dark and dreary. We decided to use up part of our front porch for a sunroom, putting in more windows, thereby giving our parlor plenty of light and air.

We made a room 11x7, putting three windows in the south side and one window in the west side. The entrance door is at the east side of the room and we have a small porch which we intend to screen in for the summer.

Our parlor is now very well lighted because we have a case opening between the two rooms. We are enjoying our parlor and sunroom all the year around, whereas before we remodeled we could, only enjoy our porch in the summer months and parlor in the winter.

We have improved our property to the extent of about $400, whereas it only cost us about $85 to remodel, and it gives us great pleasure to hear our friends admire our home.

MRS. E. KLOBUCAR,
1194 Reese Ave.,
Whiting, Ind.

WAY TO REDUCE TRIPS NECESSARY TO FEED FURNACE

How about the comfort of firing only two or three times a week these cold winter months? Not so bad?

There are boilers on the market which insure the home owner freedom from constant firing—which does grow a bit tiresome even to a patient soul.

The magazine is fed usually two or three times a week. As the fuel burns away at the bottom gravity feeds more coal from the top.

In extremely cold weather the magazine may have to be coaled up once a day, but no more. And usually two or three times a week is sufficient.

Incidentally, another asset claimed for these boilers is the fact that they cut the family fuel bill.

NoMatter HowTiny Garden Is, Lily Pool Is Possible

Even though a garden is small there is room in it for a water lily pool, or at least for a simple sunken tub garden. Some of the most charming of water lily pools are located in small gardens, handsome effects being obtained by surrounding a sunken tub pool with rocks and aquatic plants. There are firms which give free information on how to build lily pools, describing for the home owner's benefit the various types of water lilies and how to take care of them.

HECHT REVIEWS YEAR'S WORK ON TORRENS SYSTEM

Tells of Possible Saving to Realty Owners.

Emphasis on the saving to property owners through the recording of their land under the Torrens system is made by John F. Hecht in the annual report of the Torrens committee of the Cook County Real Estate board. Mr. Hecht is chairman of the committee, which also deplores the comparative lack of interest shown in the system during the year 1928.

"Every time a large tract of land and under the Torrens system is made by John F. Hecht in the annual report of the Torrens committee of the Cook county real estate board. Mr. Hecht is chairman of the committee, which also deplores the comparative lack of interest shown in the system during the year 1928.

"Every time a large tract of land is registered it means the saving of many thousands of dollars to the future home owners," the report states. "For example, a tract containing 1,100 lots, when fully improved with residences, flats, or bungalows, would, if registered under the Torrens system, be the means of saving many thousands of dollars to those buying, selling, or making loans on such properties in years to come.

"Under a private title system, to secure owners and mortgage guarantee policies, there might be a saving in the course of time of from $50,000 to $100,000 in one such subdivision. This advantage is being emphasized more and more. Only recently the patrons of the private title companies were advised that the charges for the usual continuation of titles would be increased from 33 1-3d to 50 per cent.

To Sound Bond Houses.

"As the Cook county real estate board has been so successful in securing the names of 207 leading banks in Chicago and Cook county which have agreed to accept Torrens certificate of titles when making loans on real estate, it is now the purpose of the "Torrens committee during the coming year to secure a list of the leading bonding houses who will make loans on large apartment and hotel buildings, registered under the Torrens system.

"The year 1928, generally speaking, was a quiet year for the Torrens system. Much to be regretted, the movement of new or initial registrations was exceedingly slow. In 1928 there were only 589 new registrations, the lowest number in the history of the Torrens office since 1909, or about half as many applications as were filed during 1916, the last year of Joseph F. Connery's administration.

In the year 1916, 12,696 instruments were filed under the Torrens system and 53,522 in 1928.

"No less than 100,000 individual real estate holdings, exceeding in value $1,000,000,000, are now registered under the Torrens system. The Torrens system, in spite of all obstacles has been growing steadily during the years. For every transfer made under the Torrens system in 1916, there were 11 made under the recording system.

"In 1928, 86,146 transfers were made under the recording system and 16,253 under the Torrens system, showing an increase of Torrens transfers as compared with the old system in the proportion of 1 to 5 3-10. The steady increase of the number of large acre tracts registered under the Torrens system is the most hopeful aspect of the situation. Our new president, Earl George Gubbins, has recently caused to be registered "Gubbins & McDonnell's Edgebrook Golf Additions" comprising 346 fifty foot lots.

FOREIGNERS ON BUYING SIDE OF WHEAT HERE

Corn Prices Finish Lower on Board of Trade.

BY CHARLES MICHAELS.

Increasing uneasiness over the outcome of the new winter wheat crop is noticeable, not only in the United States but also in Europe. Foreigners were on the buying side of wheat futures here and at Winnipeg yesterday, the general run of commercial news from abroad being more in favor of holders. Aggregate trade was not large, but the market showed a firm undertone, and closed with net gains of ⅛@⅛c with March, $1.24⅛; May, $1.27⅝, and July, $1.29⅛@1.29⅝. Winnipeg was up ⅛@⅛c for the day.

Corn showed an easy undertone, and while firmer early with wheat the finish was ⅛@⅛c lower with March showing the most decline, closing at 94⅞c, while May was 98⅛@98⅝c. Oats were ⅛@⅛c lower with March, 51⅜c, and May, 52⅛@52⅝c. Rye gained ⅛@⅜c with March closing at $1.10⅝, and May at $1.10⅜.

Grain prices fluctuated rapidly within relatively narrow limits during the last week, but the average was lower, and at the last wheat was off ⅝@⅞c; corn, 1@1⅜c, and oats, ⅛@1c for the week, while March rye was ⅛c lower, and the deferred futures ⅜@⅝c higher. Lard closed ½c higher to 2½c lower, ribs unchanged to 7½c higher and bellies, 27½@32½c higher for the week.

Fear Damage in Europe.

Numerous cables were received from abroad expressing apprehension of damage to the new European crops as the result of the unusually severe winter, and a lack of snow covering was claimed in some sections. American grain men returning from abroad were quoted as talking bullish on the general situation in messages from New York. Many operators are finding it hard to reconcile famine reports from various countries and the fears of crop damage with the complaint of low prices in North America, especially when considered in connection with the prospects of a general crop scare

SHADOW OF HIGH BANK RATE IS OVER ENGLAND

London Markets Are Weak and Slow.

BY SIDNEY CAVE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, Feb. 9.—The shadow of a higher bank rate hung over the city at the close of the week's business, with a general weakness accompanying an all round marking down of prices. The event was not unexpected, it being generally agreed that a higher bank rate was the only method of stopping the perpetual drain of gold from England to America.

Since September the Bank of England has lost over $130,000,000 in gold withdrawals, and although Germany is primarily the principal buyer, the latter is all going to the United States. The directors of the Bank of England have hitherto been against increasing the rate and Montague Norman's visit to New York and daily conferences with officials of the Federal Reserve bank emphasized England's reluctance to raise.

It is understood here that New York authorities, in view of conditions prevailing there, could not give assurance that further gold withdrawals would be avoided and were forced to admit they are powerless to check the cheap borrowing on the London market, which has helped the continuance of the remarkable speculative boom of Wall street.

Sterling Recovers.

London stock exchanges have had an unprecedentedly long run of cheap money—a five and one-half per cent rate—not previously in force since 1921, when war inflation was existent. The current conditions were somewhat similar. There undoubtedly has been an excessive inflation of industrial and other speculative shares, which would be impossible except for the huge gold supplies owing to New York.

Little exists in the general trade situation here justifying the extravagant premiums of many boosted shares. The gambling game has gained an enormous hold on the public quite aside from professional operators, the speculative idea being fostered by the high cost of living and heavy taxation. But the general position here is not so much out of hand as in America. Dearer money will certainly check speculation and experts are not looking for a renewal of old time buoyancy for some time.

One of the immediate effects of the rise is the recovery of sterling exchange, which closed weak, just above the point where it would be profitable to export gold to America. Experts, however, are arguing that the improvement will not be maintained, asserting that a higher bank rate still will be required as a really effective check on America's gold withdrawals.

Although the market is decidedly weaker on monetary developments the bank rate raise has not caused a severe break, a situation denoting a mentality quite different from that which provided scenes following the change of 1 per cent in pre-war days. Some encouragement is derived from the fact that there was no advance in the New York rate. The chief sufferers momentarily are the international Anglo-American issues and British government securities.

Foreign Bond Market.

A large volume of selling is not actually encountered, dealers lowering quotations more as a precautionary measure. British funds closed exceptionally weak at worst, substantial falls being registered in war loan fives, funding loan, victory bonds, and conversion loan. Incidentally the raising of London's bank rate in the personal absence of the governor was unprecedented. The court of the bank has been in session this week, both by telephone and cable.

Until the bank rate raise the stock exchange maintained a respectable measure of activity this week without depending greatly on New York. The volume of traffic between Throckmorton street and Wall street slackened considerably, although one or two new features, chiefly electrical, developed. The foreign bond market experienced another persistent demand for issues with moderate yields, the demand being difficult to satisfy owing to the high levels of prices.

Several Greek loans hold earlier rises, while one or two Russian loans appreciated in the speculative buying coincident with rumors of the resumption of negotiations on Anglo-Russian trade agreements. Brazilian loans are again strong, while investment support assisted several Japanese loans. Chinese, however, being erratic.

With the stabilization of the Roumanian lei, Roumania's new seven per cent stabilization loan is expected to be issued early next week.

PARIS PROFIT TAKING

BY HENRY WALES.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, Feb. 9.—Action of the Bank of England in raising the discount rate weighed heavily in the Paris market, the bourse Thursday being entirely under the influence of the rise, causing a fall in shares over which London has control. All operators who had not yet taken a profit on the prices of a fortnight ago are hastening to sell.

The profit taking which began Saturday continued stronger in volume Monday, being the normal result of last week's general rise, until Wednesday, when it gave way. Sight bills remained almost stationary, and the proportion of gold holdings to sight commitments rising from 41.28 per cent to 41.33 per cent. Unsatisfactory reports from London and New York Friday resulted in a certain amount of profit taking, with trading dull and irregular, but the market fundamentally sound, showing firmness.

Cites More in 'Who's Who' of U.S. Aviation

Transportation facilities keep in advance of demand in pioneer stages. Financing of transportation agencies is still further ahead.

This was true of the early railroads. Rails were scattered over the landscape in a seemingly aimless fashion—from nowhere to nothing, the saying was. Cities and counties often aided in building their own. Eventually the country built up to the roads; possibly without them it could not have been built up so far, and certainly not on the same lines.

Aviation financing is performing the same duty today. The money is ready for any development that is necessary. And this public demand to be allowed to get in on the ground floor of the air business is just getting in swing, to all appearances. Only in the last few months have the bigger consolidations, the bigger financiers, come to the front with their plans.

Many of the concerns now most prominent were not in existence a year ago. Few of the others are as they were. Nearly all have refinanced to expand or have been allied with other units. A short time ago some of the strong companies in the field were discussed. Here are others that seem to belong in a Who's Who in Aviation.

Is Holding Company.

The United Aircraft and Transport corporation was announced on Dec. 15, 1928, as a holding company for several concerns already successfully operating. Among these are the Pratt & Whitney Aircraft corporation, the Boeing interests, both in transport and airplane making, the Chance Vought corporation and the Hamilton Aero Manufacturing company. Stocks of these have been acquired completely or arrangements made to do so. The United also has more than 70 per cent of the stock of Pacific Air Transport.

Consolidation was made under the auspices of powerful banking houses, the National City company and the Pacific National Bank of Seattle. On Jan. 31, 1929, the National City company offered 150,000 shares of preferred and 60,000 shares of common in blocks of ten preferred and four common for $1,000 a block. The common has been selling on the New York curb on a when issued basis around 92 and the preferred around 75.

The Universal Aviation corporation, formed in September, has its stock also on the curb. Its object is to acquire stocks and finance all branches of aviation. All stock of these concerns is held. Universal Air Lines, Universal Air Lines Terminal company, Northern Aeronautics, Inc., and Robertson Aircraft company of St. Louis. Universal Aviation also controls Fokker Aircraft corporation of America and Robertson Aircraft corporation.

About 440,000 shares of the stock, according to statistical reports, are listed on the curb and the price per share has been from 23 to 25. This company's assets are about $4,000,000.

Amount of Plane Sales.

Douglas Aircraft company, makers of planes, is another curb stock that is selling from 26 to 27. Sales of ships in 1928 were around 2 million dollars and it has been reported that orders for a production of $2,350,000 worth in 1929 are already on hand.

The Fairchild Aviation corporation has been in existence since late 1927. It is holding company for the Fairchild Airplane Manufacturing company, the Fairchild Flying corporation, and the Fairchild Caminez Engine corporation, and has a Canadian subsidiary. Its stock on the curb has been selling at 29 to 34¾.

National Aviation is a financing corporation with stock also on the curb, selling around 70. This concern has an impressive list of directors, including Howard A. Coffin, David Sarnoff of the Radio corporation, and officers of a number of the larger aviation companies.

Transcontinental Air Transport, of which C. M. Keys is president, was formed last May with assets of 5 million dollars. Last October it was announced ten planes had been purchased at a cost of $80,000. Interested in the concern, it is reported, are the Pennsylvania and Santa Fé railroads with a project for joint air and rail travel. The corporation has no funded debt and stock has been selling on the curb from 25 to 26.

Chicago Hide Market Sags to Levels of 2 Years Ago

Demoralization was still much in evidence in the hide market last week, prices sagging to levels not reached in almost two years, it is asserted by the Chicago Daily Hide Report. Even at bargain counter values, demands were extremely narrow and there continues to be a lack of confidence in the future prospects over the next few weeks. Operations throughout the week carried the conviction that prices were only attractive to tanning shoemakers, whose desires to maintain continuous tannery operations induced them to protect supply lines. The inventory loss of independent tanners assumes tremendous proportions.

Bond Salesmen

One of our clients, a large conservative bond house with offices in Chicago, New York, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Minneapolis, Seattle, Denver and San Francisco, is creating a national sales organization for the distribution of high grade investment securities, and is seeking security salesmen [bond and stock] who desire to increase their earnings and broaden their field of endeavor by association with a house that has had a consistently steady growth, and at present is extending its activities in the investment field to meet changing conditions. Serious minded security salesmen will find an unusual opportunity here to make rapid and profitable progress. They have a comprehensive statistical department that will assist greatly in building up a valuable clientele. A drawing account of $500 per month or more to apply against an unusually liberal commission system makes this position exceptionally attractive to salesmen who can produce. Replies giving experience, general earnings, class of securities sold in past and other qualifying information will receive attention and be held in strict confidence. Arrange interview through

RESERVE BOARD'S CRIES OF "WOLF" OVERDONE, CLAIM

Chicago Traders See Exaggeration.

BY GEORGE HAMMOND.

Traders and brokers rested yesterday after the debacle in the stock market during the last part of last week and took inventory of the nation's credit situation as indicated by figures of the federal reserve reports.

After due reflection the opinion prevails in Chicago market circles that the cry of "wolf" from members of the reserve board in Washington was a trifle exaggerated. That the values of some stocks, particularly among the fast performers, have become inflated is not denied. Such conditions, they say, are usually righted in due course of time by the market itself.

At the same time the country has become marketwise as a result of the general prosperity. Interest in security markets has become almost as common as the housewife's acceptance of the corner grocery store. La Salle street feels that this condition alone will keep up a bigger turnover in stocks compared with preceding years.

Most Active Stocks.

The week's transactions on the Chicago Stock exchange were predominantly on the minus side. Net losses ranged up to almost 30 points, while a few issues managed to climb higher on what was mostly unobtrusive buying. Total sales for the week were 1,516,000 shares, compared with 1,706,000 shares in the preceding week and 343,000 shares in the corresponding period of last year. Total sales for the year to date stand at 2,108,000 shares, against 2,456,000 a year ago.

The fifty most active stocks of the week dropped $31,024,762, or about 4.6 per cent, in market value. The total value of these stocks stood at $643,585,231 at the close of the week Friday night. This compares with $674,607,993 at the close on Saturday, Feb. 2, according to a compilation by Lage & Co. The analysis shows that eighteen of the fifty stocks were listed a year ago. The market value of these issues stands at $208,746,400, against $115,551,121 a year ago.

General List.

Radio and automotive issues bore the brunt of the selling last week. U. S. Radio suffered a net loss of 29¾ points over the week while Ceco Radio was down 19 points. Atlas Stores declined 11 points and Zenith Radio eased 5¼. Pines Winterfront led the automotive list with a decline of 21 points.

BOND OFFERINGS FOR WEEK DECLINE; ACTIVE DEMAND REGISTERED

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 9.—A total of $139,073,500 in new bonds, embracing securities in almost all the major classifications, was publicly offered in the week ended yesterday, against $136,594,000 offered last week and $149,193,000 in the corresponding week of last year. Investment banking houses continued to report an active demand for new issues, and the offerings were well absorbed by the investing public.

The offerings, by groups, of this and last week follow:

	This week.	Last week.
Public utility ...	$ 52,942,500	$ 12,350,000
Investment corps.	40,000,000	35,000,000
State & munic'p'l.	18,141,000	9,210,000
Industrial	12,715,000	7,500,000
Foreign	4,100,000	15,750,000
Territor'l poss. ..	1,175,000	.....
Railroads	.....	56,784,000
Total	$129,073,500	$136,594,000

Industries in various parts of the country raised capital through sale of bonds, particularly in the public utility field. The largest issue in that group was one of $25,000,000 of the Central Public Service company.

Largest among the industrial offerings was an issue of $6,500,000 by the Winchester Repeating Arms company.

Investment bankers are waiting to see the effect on the bond market of the federal reserve board's criticism of the diversion of credit into speculative channels. One effect is expected to be larger purchases of bonds by many who retain profits in the stock market and also a larger volume of foreign loans as the spread between money rates in New York and Europe narrows. Half a dozen important foreign loans are now nearing completion.

EXTRA, INITIAL DIVIDENDS FOR STOCKHOLDERS

New York, Feb. 9.—(AP)—Directors of the Atlantic Refining company, Philadelphia, today declared an extra dividend of 25 cents on common stock. Two initial quarterly dividends of 55 cents each were declared on the new preferred stock of Warner Brothers Pictures.

Class A stock of S. R. Dresser company, Bradford, Pa., was placed on a $3 annual dividend basis through declaration of an initial quarterly dividend of 75 cents. An initial dividend of 37½ cents was declared on class B stock, placing it on an annual $1.50 basis. Merrit-Chapman & Scott corporation declared an initial quarterly dividend of $1.62½ a share on the series A 6½ per cent preferred stock, and an initial quarterly dividend of 40c a share on the common.

Home-building Slumps As Stock Speculation Rises

BY O. A. MATHER.

The present vogue for speculation in securities appears to have been putting a crimp in home building. The decline in building has been particularly noticeable in residential construction and in the larger cities, where stock market speculation is most rampant. These conclusions are drawn from the current review of the Illinois department of labor, issued yesterday.

"Building in Illinois declined sharply during January, according to permit totals of 44 leading Illinois centers," the review says. "Comparable totals for twenty-eight cities, which are responsible for more than 85 per cent of the state's building program indicate that the month's building was also less than that of January, 1928. The present year's monthly total of $15,902,668 is to be compared with $32,349,036 for a year ago, and also falls short of the figure for the first month in 1927.

Permits Fall Off.

"The principal reason for the present month's downward movement is a sharp decline in residential construction, for which permits for only $7,768,750 have been issued during the last month. Last year the comparable total was $21,310,000.

"The fact that the decline in construction in Illinois during the last year has been due principally to a fall in residential building may indicate that an unfavorable bond market cannot be held responsible for the drop. With the exception of the larger hotels and apartment houses, residential building is scarcely affected by the bond market. Perhaps prospective investors are finding stocks so profitable that the funds have been temporarily transferred from building to speculation.

"Permit totals in Chicago have been especially low. The January all-building total of $11,527,000 is only slightly more than the amount which is often spent on apartment house construction alone. In the nonresidential lines, three permits have been issued for the construction of amusement halls and theaters, the estimated cost of which is $2,350,000 and $763,000 is called for to be expended in the erection of factories.

Other Cities Follow.

"Many other cities within the metropolitan area followed Chicago with a downward movement, although a number of important exceptions have been reported. Oak Park's program has risen and Winnetka also reports an increase. But large reductions are noted for Evanston, Cicero, Kenilworth, Park Ridge, Wheaton and Wilmette. As is true for the state as a whole, the decline in these centers is due largely to a falling off in residential construction. Cities outside the area participated in the general slump from the levels of either December or a year ago."

PRICE OF EXPORT COPPER IS GIVEN ANOTHER BOOST

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 9.—The price of copper for export has been lifted to new heights, Copper Exporters, Inc., increasing the price to 18¼ cents per pound. The domestic rate is 18 cents per pound for deliveries until the end of May. This advance is the third within three days and has been caused by continued heavy demand.

Foreign sales this month are reported at 61,000,000 pounds for large producers with the probability that independents sold about 4,000,000 pounds more. If buying continues at the present rate it is possible that the price will go to 19 cents a pound or higher.

Czecho-Slovia to Erect Largest Radio Station

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 9.—The Czecho-slovakian government has ordered the largest radio broadcasting station in the world from the International Standard Electric corporation through its Prague branch it was announced today. It will have a power of 120 kilowatts in the antenna, as compared with 50 kilowatts in the largest of the broadcasting stations now operating in the United States. The broadcaster will contain eight vacuum tubes of 20,000 watts each in parallel. While the location has not yet been definitely decided, it will probably be built in Prague.

Forecast Uniform Charges by Big Brokerage Houses

New York, Feb. 9.—(AP)—A uniform minimum commission charge, possibly applicable throughout the country, by big brokerage houses is expected to result from discussions by members of a number of leading commission houses in New York, Chicago, Cleveland, Philadelphia, and other cities. The increasing burden of handling odd lot orders led to the discussions. A general increase in margin requirements also is expected in brokerage circles.

Finds Electrical Business at Satisfactory Level

New York, Feb. 9.—(AP)—General business in the electrical industry continues at a satisfactory level and the outlook for February is decidedly good says Electrical World. From the standpoint of volume, power company requirements appear larger than those of manufacturing industries. Middle west railroads are providing a substantial portion of the business.

PONDER CREDIT MOVES' EFFECT UPON WALL ST.

Ultimate Outcome Still in Doubt.

All principal stock exchanges were closed yesterday. They will open tomorrow, but will be closed again Tuesday in observance of Lincoln's birthday.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, Feb. 9.—The stock exchange being closed for an extra holiday today and other home stock markets with it, there was no business in securities. Banks were open, however, and sterling exchange was quoted lower, going at one time under $4.85 for sight bills and selling ½ cent under Friday's highest rate. The London open market was slightly firmer.

In some regards the spectacular incidents on last week's markets were a surprise, in others not. Every experienced observer knew that, in the credit situation which had been created, both the federal reserve and the Bank of England would be forced to move. It has been the prevalent impression, however, that reserve banks would raise their discount rate and that the London bank, as a result of Mr. Norman's visit to New York, would arrange an American "gold credit" to control the sterling market. Under certain circumstances the first of these expectations may conceivably yet be fulfilled, but the Bank of England has taken effective action.

Ponder Outcome.

The larger effect of either action is still to be determined. Probably the emphatic rise of bank rate and money market rates at London—the most drastic change of the sort since the crisis of 1920 was coming into sight—means higher money throughout Europe, and perhaps the ending of the outside world's easy money period. For this result the American stock speculation is plainly enough responsible. As to how the slow and painful recovery in British trade will be affected it is more difficult to predict. Nothing but fear of hindering effect in that direction could have made possible the long delay in taking an action which has for many weeks seemed to be inevitable. It is possible that these apprehensions have been overdrawn, but in any case the step could have been postponed no longer.

Nobody seriously supposes that a

What Is the Outlook for Aviation Securities?

Of all our newest industries, aviation holds forth the brightest promise. It is, in truth, a romance industry. It fires the imagination of man. Its pioneers are heroes whose deeds have been acclaimed the world over.

Aviation is no longer a sickly infant. It has sprung, almost magically, into strong young manhood whose unconquerable spirit yearns for new worlds to conquer.

Aviation has come to stay. It quickens the movement of industrial life. It saves time—and time is money. It is a straight line—the shortest distance between two given points.

Aviation today occupies a position similar to that held by the motor industry several years ago. And, like the motor, the aeronautical industry will have its failures. Those concerns that are not aggressively managed, do not have superior engineering and designing staffs, and are not financially well buttressed, will disappear.

Thus, it behooves the investor to exercise the closest discrimination in buying aviation securities.

Our current Stock Market Bulletins analyze the possibilities of the following aviation stocks:

Wright Aeronautical	Fokker Aircraft
United Aircraft & Transport	Curtiss
Fairchild Aviation	Keystone Aircraft
Sikorsky Aviation	North American Aviation
Transcontinental Air Transport	Aviation Corp. of America

Supplies of hogs on the week-end session were only moderate, but prices were forced down 10@15c, with extreme top off 25c at $10.15 and general average 10c lower at $9.90. Prevailing quotations are mostly 10@20c above the previous Saturday and 40@50c above the lowest day last week.

Traders look for a slightly larger marketward movement of stock during next week, despite the fact that roads are reported impassable in many parts of the principal hog producing states. The second Tuesday in February a year ago was credited with 102,340, the second largest on record for all time.

Hog receipts during the past week were considerably larger than the previous week, but with demand broader than usual, prices established new high levels for the season. The week's extreme top soared to $10.40 Friday, with the week's general average price at $9.80 highest since week ending October 13. Hogs a year ago averaged only $8.15, but two years ago averaged $12.00. Total receipts at eleven markets at 720,000 compare with 609,000 a week ago and with 803,000 a year ago.

The weekly average price of cattle dropped to $11.35, a new low since September, 1927. The average shows a loss of $4.50 since the high week last September, being $1.95 below the corresponding week a year ago. Cattle two years ago averaged $10.50. Further reduction in wholesale prices of fresh beef failed to improve the demand from retailers and packers complain that coolers are filled.

Fresh beef is selling ½@1½c per pound below a week ago and 2@2½c below a month ago. Supplies of live cattle are running unsalleist in years. About 30 per cent fewer cattle than a year ago are being shipped back to the country for future markets. Choice 1,440 lb steers topped the market last week at $15.00, the lowest weekly top since June, 1925. Top steers last September sold at $18.60 and late in 1927 up to $19.00.

Use Care When Investing.

Don't rush blindly into an investment.

Too many investors do this to their sorrow.

Too many are carried away by enthusiasm engendered by a glowing account of big profits predicted for them by a high pressure salesman.

They do not stop to think. (He gives them no time).

They do not wait to consider or investigate.

They are spellbound by his eloquence and promises and often, before they realize it, they have subscribed for the security he is selling.

He is there to make a sale and he does it.

He may be a stranger; he may be dishonest or he may merely be overenthusiastic himself.

But he gets the money and the investor has improved on faith in his promises.

There are certain rules of procedure to which the amateur investor will do well to adhere.

Nowhere is caution more necessary than in investing one's money.

Before even considering an investment one should make sure of the house through which the security is to be purchased.

Investigate this carefully.

Make sure beyond a doubt that the house is a reliable one with an established reputation for honest dealing—that it handles a good class of securities—that it is not a bucket shop.

A reputable house will welcome investigation because it has nothing to hide.

After having made sure of the investment house, the investor should decide what kind of securities are best adapted to his needs and means.

If his means are limited he may require the greatest safety.

If he has a good steady income and some surplus funds with which he feels he can afford to take some chances, he may want something where the element of safety is not so great, but where the speculative possibilities are greater.

One who wishes to speculate should always figure the possibilities of a loss and be prepared to accept one if necessary.

He should never speculate with more money than he can afford to lose.

We do not recommend speculation.

When the kind of investment desirable has been determined upon, the investor is ready to look over the securities of this kind that the investment house has to offer and to accept suggestions of several issues of the type he wants. These should be carefully analyzed and compared.

Independent expert advice should be sought if the investor is not thoroughly familiar with such matters.

THE TRIBUNE'S Investors' Guide will be glad to render this assistance at all times.

If this course is pursued and only those securities selected which come up to the required standard, the causes for worry over the investment and the chances of loss will be largely eliminated.

LINCOLN AND HIS FAMILY—Born 120 years ago next Tuesday, the Emancipator was with his wife, Mary Todd Lincoln, and three of his four sons, in this painting by an artist of the Civil war period. The sons were: Robert Todd, at the left, the last of the immediate family to bear the name, and the only son to reach maturity; Thomas ("Tad"), with the drum, and William Wallace.

THE DEATH OF LINCOLN—J. H. Littlefield's conception of the final scene in America's first presidential assassination. At the deathbed, as identified by the old-time artist, were, standing: Governor Farwell, Secretary McCulloch, Governor Oglesby, General Farnsworth, Vice President Johnson, Judge Otto, Speaker Colfax, Postmaster General Dennison, Dr. C. A. Leale, Maj. John Hay, Robert Lincoln, Dr. C. S. Taft, Senator Sumner, Attorney General Speed, Dr. Crane, Rev. Dr. Gurley, Secretary Usher, General Halleck, General Auger, Secretary Stanton, and General Meigs. Seated: Secretary Welles, Dr. Stone (on bed), Mrs. Lincoln, and Surgeon General Barnes.

This Fine Old Ginger Ale

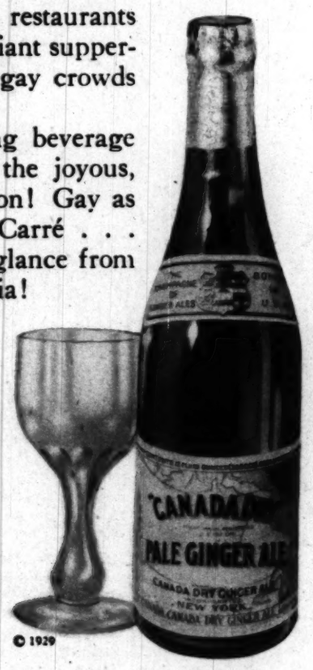
REVELERS IN OLD ROYAL STREET, NEW ORLEANS

IN NEW ORLEANS, from Twelfth Night to Ash Wednesday, the spirit of carnival reigns. Rex and his court . . . Mereus and his Krewe . . . Momus . . . Proteus . . . the Elves of Oberon.

Parades by night . . . parades by day . . . laughter . . . dancing . . . grotesquerie . . . romance!

And from famous French restaurants in St. Louis Street to the brilliant supper-tables of the elite Rex Ball, gay crowds are drinking "Canada Dry."

Here is a joyous, bubbling beverage which keeps company with the joyous, bubbling spirit of the occasion! Gay as the laughter in the Vieux Carré . . . sparkling as the eyes which glance from balconies covered with wisteria!



© 1929

Why does the Mardi Gras favor "Canada Dry"? The answer lies in the same reason that calls for it at the Ritz in London . . . the Houses of Parliament in Canada . . . in the far reaches of East Africa . . . in thousands of homes throughout this country. "Canada Dry" is a drink of distinction!

The flavor of "Canada Dry"? You can tell it, always! For like some rare old wine, it is made with the care and the lore of long years of experience.

A ginger ale of high quality and a purity unexcelled

Basic excellence gives "Canada Dry" its marvelous flavor. Only the purest ingredients are used. High-quality Jamaica ginger contributes to the final result. Never-varying proportions prevail in the process of blending and balancing and hourly check-ups prevent variation from those proportions. A striking feature of "Canada Dry" is its secret method of carbonation. It retains its sparkle long after the bottle is opened. So pure is "Canada Dry" that leading physicians prescribe it and leading hospitals serve it.

A beverage which adds festivity to any occasion

Serve "Canada Dry" with dinner tonight. Offer your friends a glass when they drop in to call. Its sparkle adds zest to any meal. Its gaiety adds joyousness to any party. Its purity makes it safe for the children. Order it in the Hostess Package of 12 bottles; handy when unexpected guests run in. You can find no more delightful or refreshing ginger ale.

A short comment on the painting will be given during the Children's Special Concert hour from 5:30 to 6 o'clock this afternoon by Eleanor Jewett, art critic of The Tribune, over W-G-N, The Tribune's radio station. What a cigarette meant there and history moves thrillingly across the silver screen. But on the movie lot, how tense the days of strain! And how gratefully welcomed those hard-won moments that mean rest, relaxation . . . and a cigarette!

The actors play their part—

What a cigarette means here

They play their part, too—
these buyers of Chesterfield tobacco.

Thousands of pounds auctioned each day; distinct types of leaf—twenty grades of "bright" tobacco alone; important distinctions of curing; differences in texture, color, size, in the natural sugar which means natural sweetness—and Chesterfield quality to be maintained.

Our buyers do their part. In New York or Manila, Paris or Alaska, our billions of Chesterfields taste the same. The same wholesome fragrance, the same natural mildness, the same satisfying "body," because our buyers know exactly what they want — and whatever it may cost, they get it!

A MONUMENT TO NOBODY is this Unknown Soldier's memorial in Afghanistan. There was no such World War soldier in that country, inasmuch as Afghanistan did not get into the war. But King Amanullah liked the idea, and before he was deposed he built the tomb, to the annoyance of various countries that really did fight. (Photograph from Underwood & Underwood.)

WINTER HAS NO ALARMS for girls at Wellesley college. Two of them—Susan Andrews and Dorothy Woods—proved it with this bit of revelry known as ski-joring. SALAD SUPREME, with crabmeat dressing—Flake the contents of a tin of Three Diamonds Fancy Crabmeat, and mix with mayonnaise or cooked salad dressing, to make crabmeat sauce. Season to taste, being careful not to lose the delicious flavor of the crabmeat. Use this sauce with vegetables you may have in refrigerator—cold asparagus tips, string beans, beets, tomatoes. Serve on crisp leaves of lettuce. One ½-pound tin of crabmeat will serve 6 persons.

With this

crabmeat you can make a variety of delightful Lenten treats

Three Diamonds Fancy Crabmeat comes in large whole meaty pieces, free from annoying bits of shell. It is cooked, ready to serve simply, in all of its delicate flavor. Or with it you can make a number of more elaborate dishes to add tempting variety to the diet during Lent.

Three Diamonds Fancy Crabmeat is meat of the Taraba-Gani . . . huge deep-sea crabs found only in the icy waters of the North Pacific Ocean. As soon as the crabs are taken from the sea, their meat is packed in parchment wrappers and sealed in lacquered tins of approximately ½-pound and 1-pound sizes. This is done on the fishing grounds at sea, so that Three Diamonds Fancy Crabmeat comes to your table in its original tender white texture, with all its matchless flavor. The entire process is controlled by the famous Mitsubishi Company of Japan. Your grocer sells this crabmeat or he can easily get it for you. Mitsubishi Shoji Kaisha, Ltd., New York.

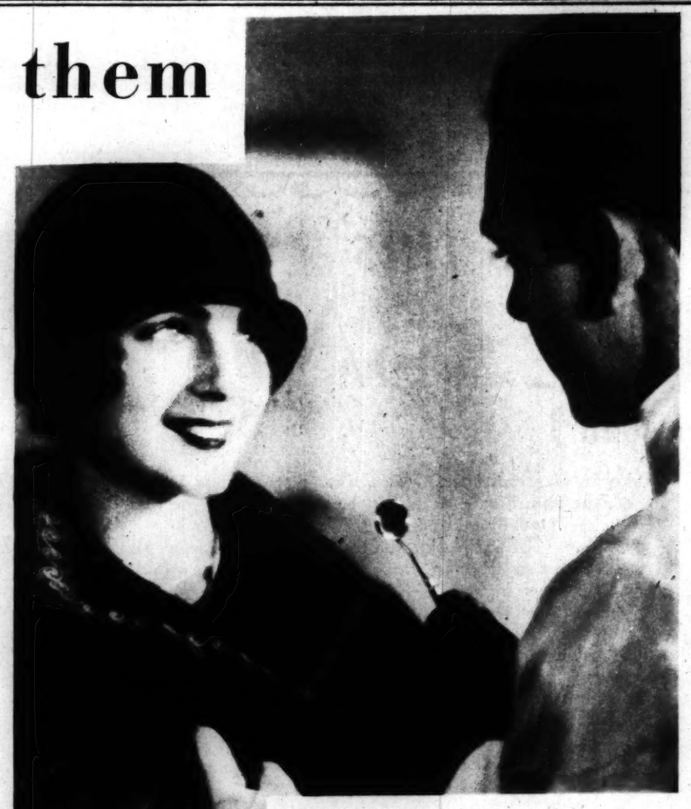
"Just keep them CLEAN"

—that is the one important thing YOU can do to safeguard the natural beauty of your teeth



And if you keep them clean with Colgate's, your dentist will heartily approve.*

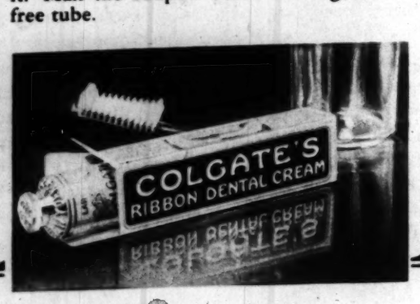
For Colgate's contains the world's greatest cleansing agent!

When brushed, this cleansing agent instantly bursts into a sparkling, snow-white foam that surges over teeth and gums . . . penetrating tiny fissures and crevices where the toothbrush cannot reach . . . dislodging clinging food particles and mucin . . . sweeping away these impurities in an irresistible "detergent" wave.

In this foam is carried a fine, soft powder which polishes the enamel safely—brilliantly. Thus Colgate's cleans and beautifies . . . purifies and refreshes the entire mouth, restoring natural loveliness of teeth and gums.

Because of its unique ability to penetrate where the toothbrush cannot reach, Colgate's achieves results which ordinary, sluggish toothpastes can't. Is it any wonder, then, that more dentists recommend Colgate's than any other dentifrice?

If you have never used Colgate's, please try it. Mail the coupon below for a generous free tube.



—and Only 25c

Colgate made the original 25c tube of dentifrice. It is today the largest selling toothpaste in the world. Due to enormous volume production, and to the resources of a hundred-million-dollar business, Colgate commands the finest materials and the widest scientific research to safeguard quality. And, as far as we know, Colgate puts more dentifrice into the famous 25c tube than is found in any other make priced at a quarter. That's value!

*AUTHORITY—"The dentist of today believes that there is very little curative or medicinal value in the average dentifrice. The chief function of a toothpaste is to clean the teeth . . ."

From Berlin comes this

[Schlankheitsbad]

THE famous Slim Figure Bath that became the sensation of Europe almost overnight, is now on sale in America! It brings to you the same pleasant, harmless method of reducing your weight that has proved so amazingly successful abroad.

German and English Physicians Pronounce It Absolutely Harmless

Before the first package was sold in Germany, tens of thousands were used in clinical tests by prominent Berlin physicians. The moment Dr. Paul Mueller, official Chief Chemist of the Berlin Chamber of Commerce, and Dr. G. Braun pronounced it absolutely harmless and effective, a wave of Slim Figure Bathing swept over the whole Continent. Millions of packages have been sold in a very few months. In England, the medical profession openly endorses it.

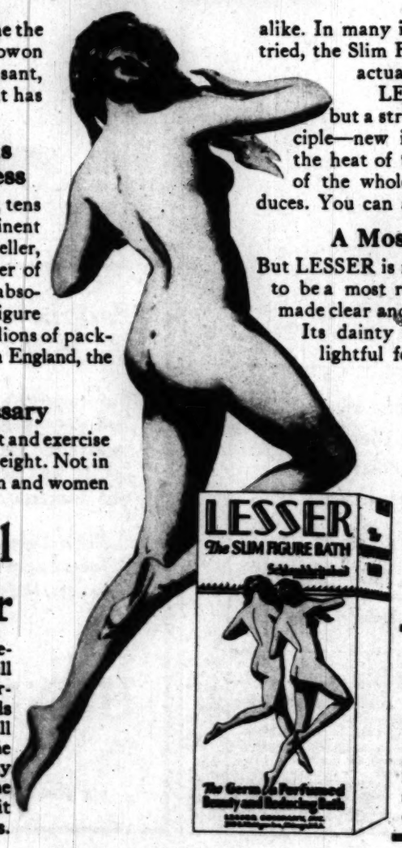
No Dieting or Exercise Necessary

This strange, new, non-salt bath that scorns diet and exercise to get results, immediately began taking off weight. Not in a few cases, but in hundreds of thousands. Men and women alike. In many instances, where other methods had been tried, the Slim Figure Bath was the first and only one to actually take off fat.

LESSER, the Slim Figure Bath, is not a salt—but a strictly cosmetic preparation. It is new in principle—new in action—new in effect. By conserving the heat of the body and by encouraging the action of the whole inner system, it invigorates as it reduces. You can ascertain this reduction after each bath!

A Most Exquisite Beauty Bath

But LESSER is more than a reducing bath. It has proved to be a most remarkable skin beautifier. Sallow skin is made clear and lovely. Thousands use it for that alone. Its dainty scent lingers on the body, giving a delightful feeling of sweet cleanliness.



Proved in American Hospital

LESSER, the Slim Figure Bath, was given thorough scientific testing in one of America's foremost and best equipped hospitals. The average loss of weight was nearly two pounds per bath—and in no case was any possibility of harm observed. Try Lesser Bathing yourself—today—and let your scales measure its benefit!

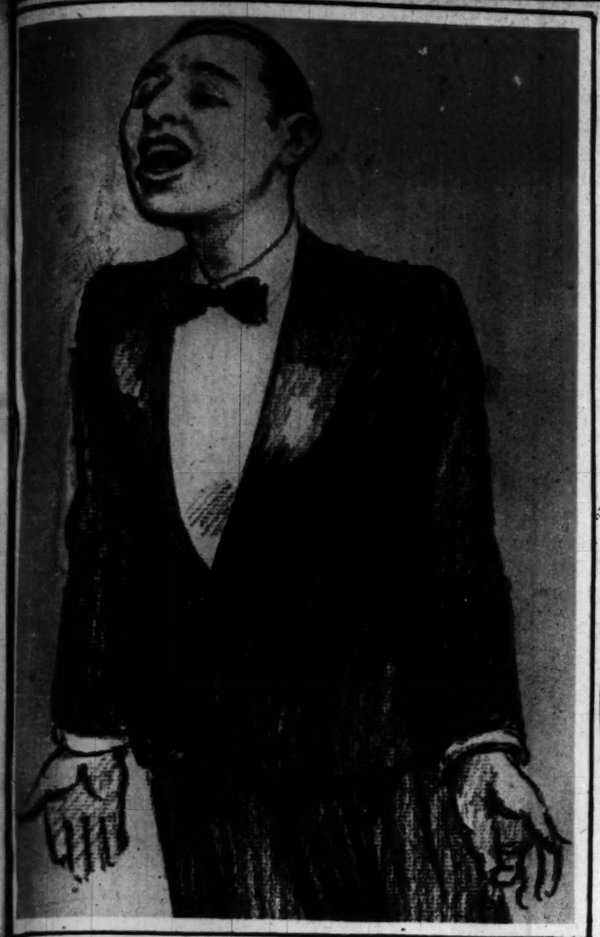
The Mammy Song

By W. E. Hill

[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]



The Old South. There's a touch of the old pre-war days down in Dixie when Louie Ginsberger warbles about the little cabin down Georgia way and the old Mammy waiting in the door. Shut your eyes and you can almost hear the corn pones and the 'possums making whoopee on the plantation.

The Harlem Blues. Bessie, the hot streak of jazztime, is doing her big number, "I Want to Go Back to My Hot Harlem Mammy," in the brownskin revue, "Jamborees of 1929."

Not all the Mammy songs are in vaudeville. Even grand opera has a few hidden away in the scores. Here's a scene from Carmen, with Micaela singing to Don Jose about his mother, and making him feel pretty bad, too.

The Sob Film. Minnie and Lena have been to a swell film, all about a Mammy singer who had to sing his stuff even though his own Mammy was being sent to the penitentiary that very day, having committed arson. O, it was so sad, him saying good-by to his ma with the tears streaming down his face just before he had to go on the stage to sing "Mammy." Minnie and Lena have cried and cried, but they will be all right by the time they get home. And when their mother asks them where they've been and who they've been with, they will say, "O, shut up, ma; you ask too many questions."

The old time quartet. Meet the Dublin singers, who will now sing "An' Will Ye Tell Yer Mither O'er Much, Maggie Mine?" an Irish Mammy song very popular in the days of Shamus the Powerful and the Banshees.

The Diseuse. Eva Evans Pursey is what they call a diseuse. She does Sunday evening recitals of folk songs culled from the wilds of North and South Carolina and part of West Virginia. While not the kind of songs Mr. Jolson would care to try out, they are all about pickaninnies, cotton fields, bayous, and Mammy "croonin' sof' an' low," so they come under the head of Mammy songs.

In the home circle. Many persons can only do real justice to all the nuances of a Mammy song in a nice hot bath, which is the real home of American folk songs, some say.

Mother India. Mme. Yehooma Baboo will give a whole program of Hindoo folk music and think nothing of it. She has no jazz band, not even a baby grand as accompaniment for her Hindoo Mammy songs—only her claymoo, a long elongated mandolin with only one string. Mammy songs are very gruesome in India. Before starting a song Madame Yehooma will explain a little. "Next," she will say, "I will sing you a little tale of a child who asks his mother to sing him to sleep. She rebukes him, saying, 'Is it, my lotus bud, that thou wouldst acquire fixity of purpose according to the Yoga? Hearken then.'"

THE outcome of this impartial canvass is overwhelming evidence of Calumet's dependability. It is unquestionable proof of the fact that a more satisfactory leavener cannot be obtained, regardless of the price you pay.

Bakings that are properly raised by the double action leavening power of Calumet, are rich with vigor-building elements—they mean perfect digestion and health.

There is Leadership in the Apparel Industry

In every branch of business there always comes a time when individual organizations find further development increasingly difficult. Modern business has proved that the greatest development comes by the intelligent association of the leaders in any industry. General Motors took the lead in the motor world. Standard Oil, U. S. Steel, and many others have done likewise. So the directors of leading apparel companies saw an opportunity to perform a great service by forming Associated Apparel Industries, Inc. The names listed below (and there will be others) manufacture and sell exquisite and varied creations of women's apparel. This organization is now in the position to offer distinct advantages and better values to the merchant and his customers.

GERMANY'S NEW SUPER-CRUISER, now under construction at the Kiel yards, will look like this. Outwitting the signers of the Washington disarmament treaty, Germany has stolen a march on the naval powers with the mystery man o' war, to be christened the Von Spee. By welding plates instead of riveting, nearly 1,000 tons are saved on the 10,000-ton craft. It will have an armament of six 11-inch guns, eight 6-inch guns, four sky guns, and six torpedo tubes, and the cruising radius will be 10,000 miles at 20 knots. It will cost around $20,000,000.

Big Business Is Moving North

LEADING WOMEN'S MAGAZINE moving to Palmolive Building. Mr. Edmund Carrington, Western Manager of "Delineator," is here signing the lease which will locate his staff in "the new advertising capitol" of Chicago. Many other publications are wisely following his example. In fact, the building at this date is over half rented.

BROR G. DAHLBERG, DYNAMIC PRESIDENT OF THE CELOTEX COMPANY, approves the office arrangements of the several floors which his company will occupy in the Palmolive Building. Left to right: C. G. Rhodes, Treasurer, and T. B. Munroe, Vice-President, Celotex Company; Mr. Dahlberg, and Carl E. Olin of Ross & Browne, Renting and Managing Agents for this towering structure.

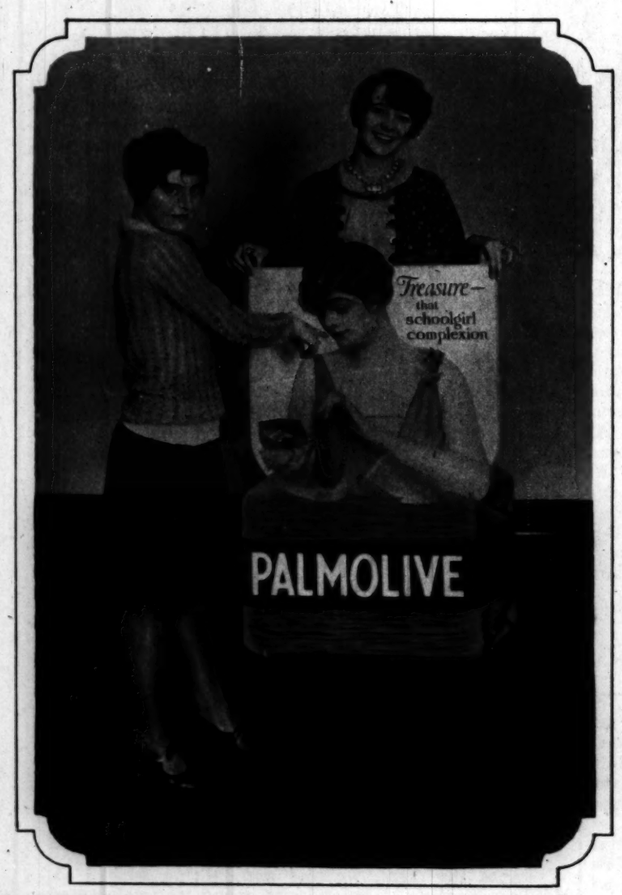
MONUMENTAL ENTRANCE TO CHICAGO'S BUSINESS DISTRICT—the Palmolive Building. Tenants who live North will be able to reach their offices quickly, without wasting valuable time in the usual morning jam around the Loop's edges. Imagine the magnificent views of Loop, lake, parkway and city which will be enjoyed by the fortunate tenants of offices in this new building!

THE IRON BANDS OF THE LOOP ARE BROKEN. This recent airplane view shows clearly the steady march Northward of office structures, North on Michigan, over the river, to the Palmolive Building, rising at the corner "where Michigan Avenue becomes Lake Shore Drive."

WALKING DOWN TO WORK. Dr. Otho F. Ball, publisher of "Modern Hospital" and "Nation's Schools," knows well the value of a brisk morning constitutional. Shown leaving his home in Ritchie Court, a six minute walk down Lake Shore Drive will bring him to the Palmolive Building, where, after April 1st, his publications will be officed. "Live near your office, work near your home" can now become a reality for executives living on the Near North Side.



TREASURING "THAT SCHOOLGIRL COMPLEXION" will be easier for Ruth Leonard and Frieda Constance Cook, Colgate-Palmolive-Peet Co. employes, when, after April 1st their company moves its offices Northward to the new structure. Assurance of day-long daylight, sootless, dustless surroundings, are powerful aids to big business in attracting the better type of office worker.

LIKE A GERMAN MOVIE—this distorted camera-view of the Palmolive Building, rising 37 stories (468 feet) above the corner of North Michigan Avenue at Walton Place. Note the series of six "set-backs" which will forever assure tenants of ample day-long daylight, no matter how tall the structures which may in the future be built around it.

JULES BELASTO MAKES MODELS—in wood. This one, of the Palmolive Building, is nine feet high, modeled exactly to scale, and took two months to complete. His daughters, Margaret, Theresa and Stephane, assist him after school hours. "It keeps them out of mischief," says their talented, internationally known father.

"My Dreams Will All Come True"

AL KVALE, star and master of ceremonies in Balaban and Katz "Norshore" Theatre stage show, composed the music for "My Dreams Will All Come True." Everybody remembers Al for his antics when he was with Paul Ash at the B & K "Oriental." Since he took the leadership of his own band at the "Norshore," his popularity has spread over all Chicago. Howard Lipstone, general musical director of Balaban & Katz, who formerly held a similar position at the Chicago Theatre, wrote the lyrics for this latest Tribune song hit.

IN TODAY'S TRIBUNE!

(2) TRIBUNE LUMBERJACKS. French-Canadians all, four of the thousands of lumberjacks who start your morning Tribune on its way from the timberlands to your doorstep.

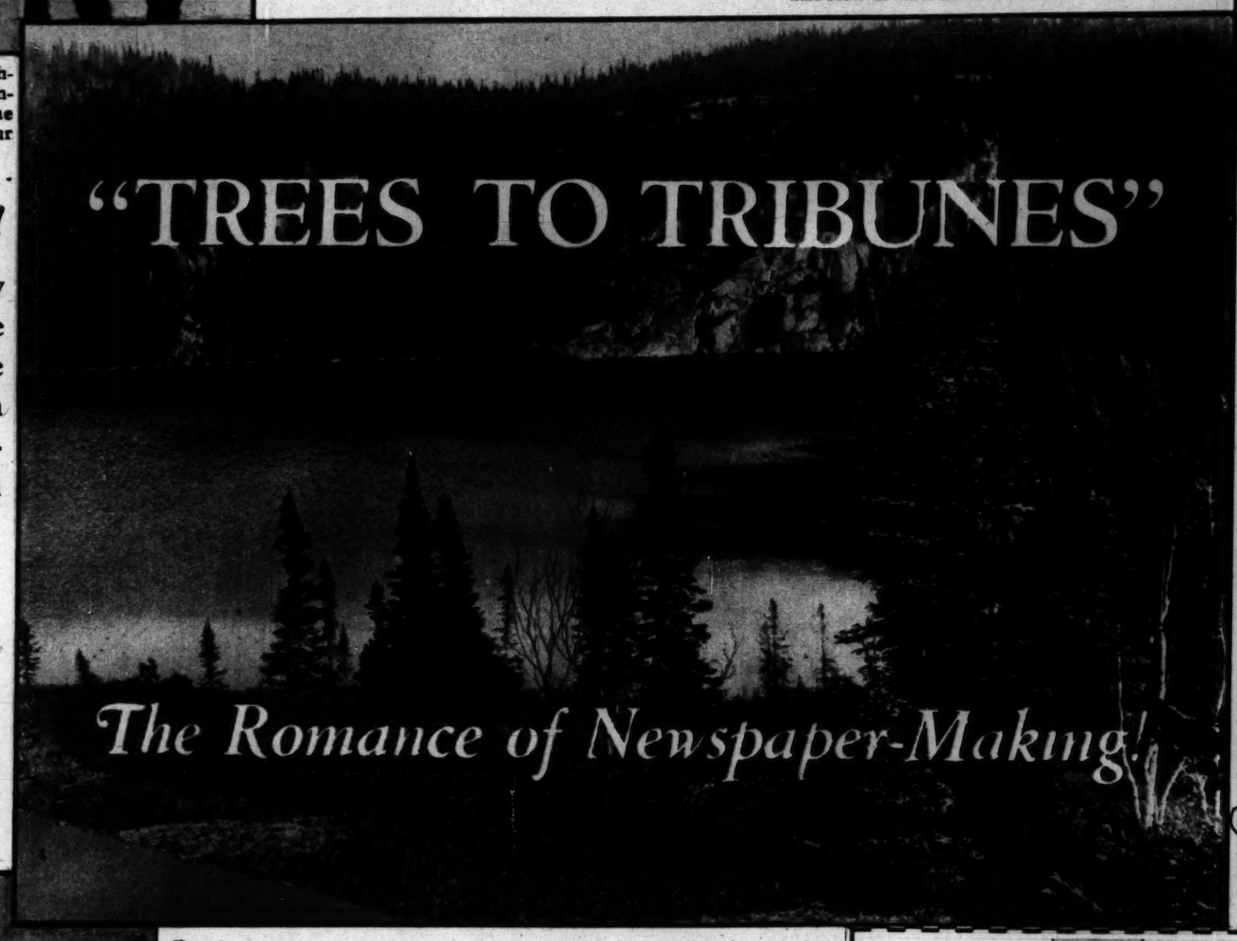
(4) WALKING COSTUME. Here are two Tribune woodsmen ready for a cruise through the timberlands. They are wearing "cossacks," made of canvas, which break the icy blasts that blow down from the north.

(5) A NORTH SHORE TRAPPER. Though the timber operations have driven most of the wild game farther north, trappers still find a pelt or two in the land where the axes ring. Here's the cozy retreat of a trapper on Thirty Mile Lake, with the host at home.



On the Radio . . Tonight!

QUIN RYAN will amplify the story contained in these photographs, describing the life of a lumberjack, the thrill of a ride behind the dogs, and gripping story of this struggle with Nature for pulpwood.

Tonight at 9:45 o'clock!

From trees to Tribunes! Follow the story of the Tribune on its way from northern forests to your breakfast table in these pages of pictures every Sunday!

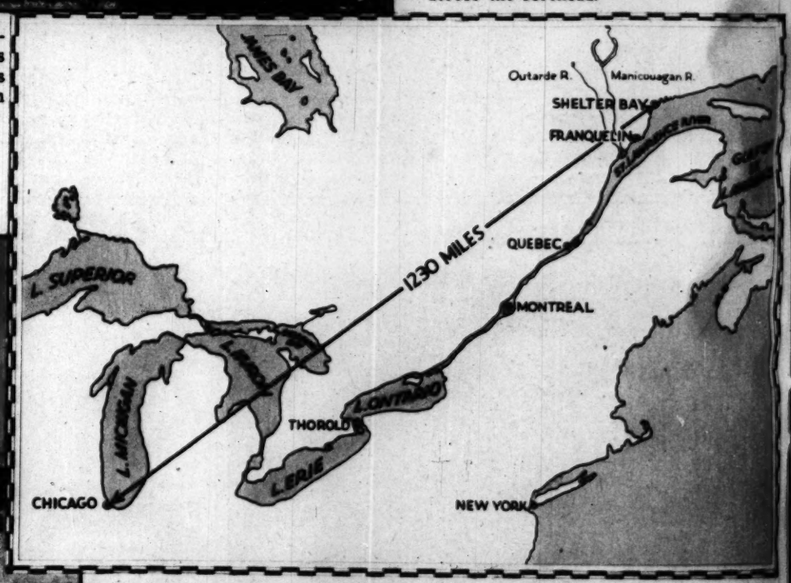
(8) THE HOME OF TIBASSE. Where Shelter Bay's Indian patriarch makes his headquarters. Here is where Tribune men first set foot at Shelter Bay.

(1) A TIMBER HIGHWAY. The Franquelin river, flanked by timber-studded slopes, on its way to the St. Lawrence. At its mouth stands the village of Franquelin, base of supplies for timber operations along the river. Logs floated down the Franquelin are loaded on the pulpwood boats at this Tribune village.



(7) CHANGING TIMES. It's a far cry from the log-cabin at the right to the modern intricacies pictured in the Shelter Bay power house (lower right), but the change has taken place in eight years. The old cabin was one of the first buildings erected in Shelter Bay. Modern dwellings, steam heated and electrically lighted, have replaced the cabins.

(9) A CABANAGE. Tibasse's relatives are numerous, and when Mrs. Tibasse hangs out the S. R. O. sign, this cabanage, or tepee, takes care of the overflow. Walled with canvas, and floored with balsam boughs, it provides a snug retreat.

(10) CURING A BEEF-HIDE. Fur and shreds of skin have been carefully scraped off, and the hide will dry and toughen until next winter when it will make moccasins for the Tibasse brood.

For Loveliest Lashes Be Sure It's Maybelline

Fashion decrees it excellent taste to bring out the hidden beauty and expression in the eyes by accentuating the lashes. At the same time Fashion insists that the lashes be kept natural looking.

Genuine Maybelline is, therefore, the correct beautifier to use, because it instantly imparts the desired appearance of length, density and darkness to the lashes without even a hint of artificiality. It's the easiest eyelash beautifier to use, too, and is, of course, perfectly harmless.

3 MINUTES twice a day for teeth

. . . that is ample to protect the beauty of your smile

TODAY, practically every woman knows that to preserve youthfulness and charm, it is health that must be guarded. So they pay strict attention to details of diet, of exercise and (as they believe) to mouth hygiene.

Unfortunately, the old-fashioned method of brushing the teeth with a "good cleansing dentifrice" has been proved inadequate. That is why so many people suffer from tooth decay and gum irritation in spite of faithful care. Think of it! To lose beauty and perhaps health, not through neglect, but because of erroneous, old-fashioned practices . . . because it is not understood that while ordinary brushing is quite effective as far as it goes, it does not go far enough.

This is the danger

No tooth-brush can reach into all the pits on the grinding surface of your teeth, or between your teeth along The Danger Line—the tiny V-shaped crevices where teeth and gums meet. As a result food particles collect there. They ferment. Acids are formed. Unless these acids are neutralized, they cause decay or dangerous gum infections such as pyorrhea.

Since mere brushing alone cannot protect you fully, your dentifrice must by containing a trustworthy antacid.

Squibb's Dental Cream contains more than 50 per cent of Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. When you use it, it not only neutralizes the acids at The Danger Line, but enough remains there to protect your teeth and gums against acids for a considerable time after use.

Let Squibb's protect you

Why should you be content to entrust your teeth and health to a dentifrice less certain to give full protection? The use of Squibb's Dental Cream for three minutes twice a day is ample to guard your health and beauty against the dangers of tooth decay and gum irritations. As an additional precaution, visit your dentist twice a year.

You'll find Squibb's Dental Cream mild and delicately flavored. Children delight in it. Get a tube today. Use it on the gums with a soft brush. It will keep them in healthy condition. It contains no grit, astringents or abrasives. Nothing that can hurt the most delicate tissues—only the finest cleansing ingredients and Squibb's Milk of Magnesia. At druggists—40 cents a large tube. Copyright 1930 by E. R. Squibb & Sons

Where the crown of each tooth projects into the mouth, the extremities of the gums meet it in a thin, knife-like edge. That's The Danger Line—where the dangerous tooth decay and gum irritations often start.

Consider the hours the average woman devotes to her hair, her complexion, her nails. Then remember that the freshness of youth, charm, beauty itself depend on health above all. Surely it is worth a few minutes a day to protect your health from the threat of tooth decay and gum irritations.

SQUIBB'S DENTAL CREAM

SQUIBB'S MILK OF MAGNESIA, from which Squibb's Dental Cream is made, is a pure, effective product that is free from the usual earthy taste of other products. It is therefore much more pleasant to take. Its unsurpassed antacid qualities and mild laxative action make it truly valuable in helping to promote proper alimentation. It is recognized the country over as The Standard of Quality.

The Waist, Reminder of Gay Nineties, Is Back Again

Gone Are the Broad Shoulders, However; a Feminine Droop and Dainty Tucks Take Their Place.

By Lolita.

NEW YORK.—(Special Correspondence.)—Those of us who have the misfortune to remember the gay nineties realize that in those days the shirtwaist was as integral a part of any young lady's life as was a pompadour, passe partout frames, and a cosy corner with an inlaid tabaret. Thirty years have gone by since then and now once more we have returned to the shirtwaist.

O, yes, this garment has gone through transitions. We all know that. We realize that there is as much difference between an up to date 1929 model and its ancestress as there is between the John Held girl and the Gibson favorite. Yet, oddly enough, now in this zealous renaissance of the shirtwaist we see a bit of parallelism. Today, after many seasons of pitiless exposure, our shirtwaist has gone in for partial retirement. In other words, the tuck-in is once more to the fore.

But, of course, this type of blouse is reserved more especially for the tailored and sports costume, and even when it does prevail it is a far cry from that tailored pique or linen affair of the nineties. O, yes, indeed! But if we really wish to know how much water has flowed under the bridge of fashion all that we have to do is to look at the dressy blouses of our present era.

First of all, let us regard the shoulders. Where are they now—the epaulet junior and all the other contrivances that made the Gibson girl's great burly shoulders look as if rowing pianos were one of her less taxing exercises? They are gone. They have given way before a fixed consideration of the shoulders of the Empress Eugenie. Look at the lovely sloping neck line of the most picturesque figure in one of the world's most romantic epochs of dress history and you will see plainly enough what we are trying to get at. We are trying to look delicate, feminine, as if we never in our lives had done anything more violent than croquet. And, upon my word, we are almost succeeding!

Now, what is one of our chief resources in putting on this new feminine play of the Narrow Shoulder? Well, it is a group of fine tucks on the shoulder. That takes away, you see, from that O, so unrefined, look of breadth and the extent of its vogue may be measured from the fact that three out of the four models at the top of our page show blouses treated to these shoulder tucks.

But there are other ways, too, of making our rude muscular shoulders look sort of frail and Victorian, as if at any moment we might favor the world with a romantic Camille-like cough. One of these is represented by the draped scarf. Still another is the shirt bosom front which is noted on so many of our tailored tuck-in models. In fact, it seems to be just anything which cuts the shoulder line and thus diminishes its sense of breadth.

Now, there are all sorts of fabrics employed for the modern blouse, but one of the notable phases of the moment concerns itself with jersey. Is the jersey blouse confined to the golf links and to the country club? Is it paired off with jersey or tweed or other substantial skirt material? Not at all. For, though it may serve in these capacities and in this companionship, it's as free as a girl with her own latchkey. It can go to the Rits or the matinee and it can be worn with a skirt of satin or silk crêpe.

Just what a jersey blouse can do if it has a mind to dress up is indicated in our third figure at the top. Here it is ready to meet even our husband's old sweetheart—this formal creation of vivid red jersey. The particular tone used is lacquer and there is probably nothing more favored just now in models of satin and crêpe. Indeed, many of the printed blouses make use of this tone for either background or part of the design.

This blouse of red jersey fastens at the side with self-covered buttons and its belt is of the same matching silk which achieves the draped scarf collar. A word about this collar. Like so many of the present day scarfs, this one demands a free hand, somewhere. Consequently, although it is cut in one with the garment in the front, it is detached in the back to form an errant point.

There is really no such thing as being sufficiently impressed about the scarfs of our new blouses. Here they are entrenched as firmly as they are in every other province and here one encounters the same protean shapes. Among these is to be mentioned the scarf which is encrusted in the back to form a yoke effect.

But then, too, one's scarf may be a tramp affair and not belong to any blouse. This brings us to the cravat pictured at the lower left of our page. It is of black satin and it is one of the very newest things to do about the neck line. Yes, no longer does it have to be "The Old Gentleman in the Black Stock." At the present time The Very Young Lady may be that accessory's chief beneficiary.

Of course, the all-black cravat is of outstanding novelty, but there are numerous other scarfs which, made in the long narrow shape illustrated here, include both printed and monotone effects in color. Any one of these dresses up a blouse, a suit, or an ensemble as does nothing else.

Now, to go back to our jersey models. This represents the formal mood of this material, but in considering it one must not forget the numerous forms which do their duty by the golf links. At the present moment some of our smartest golfers at Aiken, Sulphur Springs, and other rendezvous of the tantalising, tormenting game wear jersey blouses of one tone combined with jersey skirts of another. I am sure I have already mentioned this fact, but the validity of the mode deserves emphasis.

For formal styling there are more than the usual number of printed crêpes on display. Many of these figured blouses show the very small floral or geometric motifs so prevalent in frocks, but the model illustrated second from the left at the top represents an effective variant of this rule. That is to say, it is a large design of yellow on black which is employed for the popular peplum finish. The jabot, so prominent in today's mode, is worthy of your special attention, for it is formed of two diamond shaped pieces each bound in plain yellow crêpe matching the design. This line of narrow yellow is repeated on the sleeves and follows the neck line's banding of plain black. Incidentally, one must refer to the fact that nearly always are these printed blouses bound with plain material of harmonizing tint and that often the binding is extended into plaited jabot or other frill.

To say that a blouse is much in the limelight is today literally true. One refers to the greens inflected with yellow which are so much used for crêpe and satin mixes. It is in this color of yellow-green lime that we find our first model, a mode which otherwise points to three important phases of the mode. One is the vogue of the satin back crêpe of which it is achieved; the second is the surplice line of closing, and last is that tucking so often seen nowadays on the hips. (You will find it at the sides of our jersey blouse, also.) For the rest, the blouse fastens with brass buttons and you will see these buttons cleverly utilised at the neck line in the small back view.

In the lime tint as well as in the limelight is our first blouse at the upper left. Made of satin back crepe in this favorite tone, its surplice closing is marked by bright brass buttons, and fine tucks on the shoulders are expanded into the individual tucking at the hip line.

Next, a stunning model of printed crepe in yellow and black shows a peplum and an original jabot bound in plain yellow.

The vogue of jersey for formal wear is next indicated in a model with effective scarf collar and self-covered buttons. This blouse is in the modish lacquer red.

Last, a gray frost crepe shows much tucking, silver and gold buttons and scallops fringed in self material.

Skirts indicating the tendency towards yokes and some form of fullness are represented respectively in striped flannel with godets, a heavy silk crepe and a wool jersey.

One of the popular tailored tuck-in blouses of handkerchief linen with the popular bosom front is illustrated here in white with mannish tab embroidered in black.

Rickrack de luxe—here in gold—edges the smart sleeveless jacket of black satin embroidered in gay floral motifs, and last we have a printed scarf tied in a new way to accompany a hat of red bakou trimmed with grosgrain ribbon and hinting at the tricorne influence.

HOW TO USE THE PATTERNS

SMOOTH fitting lingerie is essential these days, when wrinkles aren't permitted through the hips or under the close fitting bodices that are sometimes worn. And this design, Pattern No. 223, should be a great favorite, with its well fitting camisole, deep, pointed and smooth fitting hip yoke and the lower part cut circular to give ample fullness at the hemline. This combination can take the place of a slip, if desired.

The camisole is cut in two pieces, and a dart each side of the center—both in the front and back insure a smooth fit. The yoke is also in two pieces, the front at the center ending in a deep point. To this yoke the circular lower parts are attached, and short darts at the top allow these sections to be attached to the yoke without any gathers. This garment can't be slipped over the head as so many are, but it fastens down the left side of the camisole and yoke. The back edges may be finished with an extension hem and the front with a faced hem. Snaps will be the proper fastening.

One word of caution about the fitting—let it fit really easily. If the lines are true it will be perfectly smooth and wear and look much better than if it fits in too snug a manner.

For every day occasions washable silk radium, flat silk crêpe, or batiste will be practical, while for other occasions georgette crêpe, plain or flowered chiffon voile, and crêpe satin and the crêpe de chine that is sold for this purpose are lovely fabrics. Naturally these garments may be made quite simply or they may be made more or less elaborately, trimmed with lace, or some design embroidered, as is suggested in the sketch.

The bottom of the drawers may be simply finished with a narrow hem, or a rolled hem may be used, whipping to this a lace insertion and edging. The more hand work on these garments, the lovelier they can be made. Felled seams make the flattest and best finish. Shoulder straps are used, these being made of the lingerie material or ribbon. If you use the material, it should be seamed together on the wrong side, then a tape needle inserted in one end, and the needle sewed to one single edge. Then push the needle down through the strap and you will have it right side out in a jiffy.

Novel ideas are frequently seen on frocks for the younger generation, and in the pattern, No. 875 we see the separate blouse made with an inserted chemisette, with the lapping edge in a scalloped outline and finished with buttons. Then, too, the two piece skirt is made with plaited insets, with pockets set in at the top, and these pockets finished with smart little laps, button trimmed. The long, close fitting sleeves are finished at the wrists with turned back cuffs, having scalloped edges matching the chemisette.

It is most interesting work, making children's and young girl's clothes, and when you count the saving effected it should be a great satisfaction. In this dress the waist and skirt are cut separately, the skirt being attached to an underwaist, and the lower waist edge being set into a narrow, fitted band. And it will be decidedly chic if something contrasting in color is used for the chemisette, collar, cuffs and pocket laps.

It is an ideal design for the classroom as well as for general every day occasions, and wool challis, wool crêpe, crêpe de chine, rayon, plain and plaid woolen, blue and beige jersey, French blue linen with white for the contrast, and printed and plain sateen are all smart materials for its development.

For those who are anxious to appear as slender as possible, pattern No. 143 will be a good design to choose. Its slender line is emphasized by the surplice closing front, finished with applied bands, and the one sided fullness in the skirt, achieved through soft shirrings. The narrow belt is fastened with an ornamental buckle worn right above the shirring. The long, close fitting sleeves are finished at the wrists with flaring cuffs, and it will be chic to make the cuffs, belt and applied bands of a contrasting color. The vestee is made of the dress material and finished across the top with an applied band. This should also be of the contrasting color.

223—Woman's and misses' combination. Sizes 16, 18 and 20 years and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 2 yards of 40 inch material. The embroidery design, No. 11119, comes in blue and costs 15 cents extra.

875—Girl's dress. Sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14 years. Size 8 requires 1⅝ yards of 40 inch material with ⅝ yard of 36 inch contrasting and ⅝ yard of lining.

143—Woman's and misses' dress. Sizes 16, 18 and 20 years and 36, 38, 40 and 42 inch bust measures. Size 36 requires 3½ yards of 40 inch material with ¾ yard of 36 inch contrasting.

Charting Your Own Mind -1-

Are You a Thinker and Dreamer or a Born Mixer and Go-Getter? These Questions Will Ferret Out the Answer.

ARE you interested in knowing whether you are an introvert, an extrovert or a neutral?

If you're planning an early descent upon intelligentsia quarters, you'd better be informed, because their language this year is quite peppered with "verts" of one or the other kind.

Perhaps it is not fair to adapt a serious psychology study, as is the one we are going to present for your analysis of yourself, for so light a cause as being-in-the-know with the conversation of the so-called intellectuals. Less, perhaps, is it justice to the professors of Northwestern university to use the test chart, which they put to such serious usage as trying to determine the adaptability of a man to a vocation, as a Sunday evening pastime.

But what does intrigue any one of us more than being asked questions which give us the pleasure of indulging in the very, very personal? Nothing—we answer if we're honest. What else is it that suddenly transforms us from a bored guest into a keenly alive one when a person is discovered in our midst who can read a palm or flip a legacy out of a pack of cards?

Neymann-Kohlstedt Test.

The test that the psychology department of Northwestern university at Evanston has worked out to determine whether a person is fitted for a particular job is known as the Neymann-Kohlstedt test. Dr. C. A. Neymann, associate professor of psychiatry; Prof. K. D. Kohlstedt, psychologist in the medical clinic, and Dr. John J. Morgan, associate, formulated the following fifty questions, which reveal whether you are an extrovert, an introvert or a neutral.

An introvert, you may want to know, is a dreaming sort of person, quiet, and a thinker. Creative, executive or inventive jobs are supposed to be his forte.

The extrovert is the opposite type of character—a born mixer whose realm is the sales world, politics, or what is colloquially determined as "glad-hand" business. His ready wit and good nature are the assets upon which success is built, although he may be quite capable of serious, deep and constructive thought.

The extrovert will answer "No" to questions 1, 3, 5, 6, 8, 10, 12, 13, 15, 17, 19, 24, 25, 27, 30, 32, 34, 36, 37, 39, 41, 42, 44, 46 and 48 and "Yes" to all the others. If the answers are the reverse he is an introvert. If "Yes" and "No" run about equal in numbers he is a neutral. Now for the questions—

Here Are the Questions.

"Do you:

1. Like to be by yourself a great deal?
2. Think of life in terms of pleasure?
3. Always feel calm and collected?
4. Have a great deal of confidence in others?
5. Think or dream of what you'll be five years from now?
6. Like to stay at home during a social affair?
7. Like to work with many people around you?
8. Like to do the same kind of work all the time?
9. Enjoy social gatherings just to be with people?
10. Think a great deal before deciding anything?
11. Accept suggestions rather than work them out for yourself?
12. Like quiet rather than exciting amusements?
13. Dislike having people watch you?
14. Like quite a tiresome task?
15. Save money rather than spend it?
16. Seldom analyse your thoughts or motives?
17. Indulge in reverie [daydream] or thought?
18. Like having people watch you do things that you do very well?
19. Let yourself go when angry?
20. Work better when people praise you?
21. Love excitement?
22. Like to be a leader at a social affair?
23. Like to speak in public?
24. Do the things that you dream about [daydream]?
25. Rewrite social letters?
26. Get things done very quickly rather than being slow but sure in movement?
27. Think a great deal?
28. Like to be able to express your keenest feeling (joy, sorrow, anger, etc.)?
29. Seldom pay attention to details?
30. Like to be exceedingly careful in meeting people?
31. Seldom think about yourself?
32. Do you like puzzles?
33. Act on suggestions quickly rather than stop to think?
34. Read about rather than do a thing?
35. Enjoy the story more than the way it is written?
36. Keep a personal diary?
37. Keep quiet when out in company?
38. Act on the spur of the moment?
39. Have nothing to do with people holding views opposed to your own?
40. Dislike anything about yourself?
41. Seldom change an opinion already formed?
42. Change from one type of work to another frequently?
43. Avoid trouble rather than face it?
44. Believe that rumors are important?
45. Confide in others?
46. Distrust people you have just met until you get better acquainted?
47. Study others rather than self?
48. Spend your vacation at some quiet place rather than at a lively resort?
49. Seldom plan out work before you begin it?
50. Take an active part in all conversations going on around you?

Women the World Over

ENGLAND has twenty licensed women airplane pilots.

Of the 140 persons who received Nobel prizes, six have been women.

There are now 172,187 women members of the communist party of Russia.

About one woman in ten in the United States goes through life without marrying.

Of the eight women in the foreign service of the United States department of commerce, two of them started as stenographers.

Prominent women and social workers in New York City are planning a "circulating toyery" on the same system as public libraries circulate books. It is the plan of the women interested in the movement to gather a supply of durable toys and lend them to children for a stated length of time. The need of a "circulating toyery" is keen, the sponsors say. Many children are brought to court every year for stealing toys, they assert, and if toys can be lent to these children it would mean a decrease in the number of Children's court cases.

In Paris, France, there are 243 women doctors, 145 of them married, and only thirty-seven of the latter practicing their profession.

Women live longer, but men are healthier, in the opinion of Dr. Hugh Cumming, a British physician.

English women of prominent families "adopt" one orphan each year at the Princess Mary Village home, in Addlestone. The little waifs receive a small weekly allowance from their benefactresses as well as birthday and Christmas gifts.

Personality!

When Ziegfeld selects them, you can be sure they have personality. This lovely New York girl, now appearing in "Rio Rita," has talent—and beauty, too—enhanced by wonderful skin and the softest waves of dark brown hair.

"When friends ask me what I do to make my hair so soft and gleamy," says Miss Hargrave, "I have to think twice to tell them, because I give so little time to it. The method I use is very popular among New York girls. I just put a little Danderine on my brush each time I use it. I am letting my hair grow; but you'd never know it, Danderine keeps it so soft and easy to arrange and holds it in place so wonderfully. It gives my hair such a silky, soft and lustrous appearance, friends are always commenting on it. There isn't a trace of dandruff left now that I'm using Danderine regularly. And it keeps my hair and scalp so clean and comfortable that I don't shampoo half as often as I used to."

Danderine quickly removes that oily film from your hair, brings out its natural color, gives it more lustre than brilliantine. It makes the hair easy to dress; keeps it in place. It usually checks dandruff. It isn't oily; doesn't show. All drug stores have the generous 35c bottles. A delicately fragranced necessity for the well-groomed girl!

Reduce, but Do It in Silence

Why Count Your Calories So the Whole World Knows What You're Doing? The Patient Male Is Beginning to Rebel

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—At a certain home dinner table one of the male members of the family the other eve burst out with: "For the luv of Mike, cut out the reducing talk! I'm sick of it. Reduce if you must, but keep quiet about it!"

I suppose that that outburst reflects the male sentiment toward diet talk in thousands of homes at this minute.

"Reduce if you must and keep quiet about it" is a pretty good piece of advice for the sake of the male; also, for the sake of the woman herself. It is my observation that the women who do the most talking are actually the least active in their attempts to recover the silhouette of youth. They expend too much energy on resolves to carry them out conscientiously, I fear.

There is an author known to me who wouldn't any more unravel a plot before it is worked out completely on paper and ready for his publisher than he would dream of murdering his wife and family.

"There's a jinx on talking about the work you're planning," is the belief of a number of writers.

It's a Private Matter.

For the sake of the poor suffering males of the household, who by now ought to be let off with an ovation and a banquet did one of them rise in his wrath and still forever the tongue that wouldn't stop counting its calories aloud, let us assume there is a jinx. Let us assume, if you have to reduce, it is a matter of as much personal interest as tooth brushing and tubbing and, therefore, all reference should be confined to secluded sections of the house.

We'll permit one occasion when the voice may be raised above a whisper—that is when the deed is well done and applause is deserving.

Perhaps you think I might take a little of the advice too, myself and shut off my own loud speaker. But how can I, with such a preponderance of reducing queries reaching me daily? Time does not wither nor dress custom stale the infinite variety of reducing queries.

On one of these I feel we've been a bit neglectful. We've talked of leg reduction methods, arm and bust exercises, waist and hip shrinkers, but there is an area not so small as to be overlooked, which somehow has slipped the notice of otherwise keenly figure-observant women. It is the bulging diaphragm, or as one correspondent puts it: "that part where you bloat rather than lay on fat." The soft, puffy adipose misleads the woman into thinking it couldn't be just fat.

Anyway, it is a spot of the anatomy that a watchful eye had better be kept on. It just escapes the waist measurement, also the bust, coming as it does between waist and bust. But it doesn't escape notice either on front view or profile, although it is with the latter view one may become fully conscious of its disfiguring proportions.

Diaphragm Must Be Flat.

To our present day figure, no matter how desirable a curved arm, bust or hip may appear, that part of the torso we speak of must be flat. Youth, even when it fattens on chocolates, is not nearly so much affected in this particular area as when an older woman is dealt with. In fact, it has come to be assigned as indisputable insignia of age—like a "crepy" neck or a drooping jowl.

So, when you're giving your figure the once over for corrective treatment take a slant at the side view in your long mirror. If the diaphragm is bulgy, lay the rest of the reducing worries aside for the moment and concentrate on this area.

As I have pointed out before, you see quite a number of women a bit advanced in years whose legs and ankles are a delight, whose hip lines are neat, but whose profile resembles nothing so much as the little round men known in nurseries as Brownies.

A good corset may do a great deal toward flattening this part of the anatomy. The corset manufacturers are conscious of the need and so some of them added an extra layer of material to bind the puffy flesh down. But a poor corset often exaggerates the diaphragm extension. A corset which begins with a band around the waist—rubber or cloth—and girdles only the lower part of the figure is the poorest form of concealment of all. Unless the band is very loose what happens is that more puffy flesh is forced up and outward, further rounding the silhouette where it is most desirable to be flat.

On women of good carriage you rarely see this disfigurement. As a test of how they manage to avoid it, you have but to draw yourself up tall and high with your left hand over the diaphragm. You can feel what seems like two or three inches of flattening, and which may, indeed, be all that number of inches of diaphragm reduction.

Deep Breathing Helps.

There's another reason why the one of fine, erect carriage escapes the age insignia. She breathes deeper, fuller, better. And in breathing she raises, expands and contracts those muscles unconsciously any number of times a day so that fat hasn't much chance to settle.

I can recommend you nothing better than an improved posture, standing, sitting and walking, and deep breathing exercise as correctives of the condition we're talking about.

An appetite for more than actual body needs, of course, contributes to the puffed out diaphragm. But it is one of the parts of the body on which surplus fat can be exercised off with the most satisfactory results.

The familiar old bending exercises are excellent. Touching the toes with finger tips a dozen times each morning and night; then touching the opposite toe with a right and then a left hand as many times a day.

Follow the bending movements with two other old timers.

Lie on your back on the floor, come forward and touch your toes from this position. Then give the body a good stretch from shoulders to toes and bring the feet up over the head, touching (or aiming to touch) the floor over your head.

No other exercise movements are needed than these four. If you'll do them every morning and night for a month I'll be willing to place a wager that your silhouette in profile is improved a thousand per cent. It isn't much to do, either, for such an improvement, do you think?

ANSWERS TO BEAUTY QUERIES

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat-chested or flat-footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you, and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

MISS C. K.: YOU MAY FILL OUT the hollows in your neck by deep breathing and swimming. Massage is good, but when coupled with exercise the results are arrived at sooner. Swimming is especially good, as it necessitates emptying and filling the lungs with air. Send a stamped, addressed envelope for the deep breathing exercises.

M. T. L.: THE LINES RUNNING from the nose to the mouth corners are known as parenthesis lines. Massage daily with a good cold cream on the finger tips, working from the mouth corners outward and upward toward the cheek bones.

A. G.: IF YOUR EYEBROWS ARE thin rub yellow vaseline into them before brushing. With an eyebrow brush or a small fine tooth brush, brush the eyebrows night and morning. It promotes their gloss and trains them into shape.

RUTH H.: APPLY COLLODION to the hangnail, giving it a chance to heal. Send along a stamped, addressed envelope for my booklet on the care of the nails.

IF KIDNEYS ACT BAD TAKE SALTS

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it may mean you have been eating foods which create acids, says a well-known authority. An excess of such acids overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and logy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges.

Either consult a good, reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids in the system, so they no longer irritate, thus often relieving bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink. Drink lots of good water.

"No boiling needed" says Miss Theresa Buckley of Allston

"I learned about Rinso from a neighbor. She found me scrubbing one day and said, 'You must enjoy scrubbing clothes, or else you'd let Rinso soak out the dirt.'

"I thought she was exaggerating, but I tried Rinso anyway—and my! what a surprise. All the dirt and stains seemed to float right off and my wash was the whitest ever!

"And it's great the way Rinso saves the clothes, now that they don't need to be scrubbed or boiled."

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

Two-Color Styles Come Up to Paris from the South and Foreshadow the Spring Modes.

By Bettina Bedwell

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Styles that are coming out in sunnier climates offer us a lot of constructive hints for northern springtime usage. Fashions from the Riviera, as well as those from Palm Beach are valuable as forerunners of future styles. But not all of them. Some styles that go south never live to come back north again. Whether you go south to look them over or read the broadcast news of what the smart southern resorter is wearing, you will need to disregard the sensational and look for the true, honest to goodness fashion element.

There is the question of color. There are hundreds of extemporaneous prophets naming "the" color of the southern season. No such thing exists. Colors, yes! Color, no! This spring more than any of the previous ones demands that you be a good color mixer if you would be chic. Southern style color schemes are—most of them—arranged for the natural, or synthetic, bronzed complexion. The girl who keeps her lily white skin in a northern climate has to look out for such shades. They certainly aren't intended to enhance her untanned beauty.

Take the new yellowish and bronze greens. These are undoubtedly smart southern resort colors. They are, however, solely for the woman who has acquired a tan in one way or another. If you can wear them, these odd shades will be extremely smart. White, too, is good, and it is kind to most complexions, particularly when it is mixed, as Paris does it, with one or two lively colors.

Yellow is glorious for southern sunlight, but if you are a true pale face, keep this color for artificial light. Almost the whole gamut of blues appears on the list of fashionable tones. Black, brown, and beige are distinctive colors when they are mixed with other shades.

Moderation is essential to successful color combining. Keep your color scheme to the rule of three, and remember that your own natural coloring counts as one color. Really distinguished women—those who dress so well that your heart aches with pure pleasure when you look at them—are wearing a great deal of white under the palm trees these winter days. They are not taking their white straight, but, as I said before, they are mixing it with one or two lively tones. White and red, white and green, white and orange, white and blue are smart. Black or beige may harmoniously make a third and add to the chic of these color duets.

When this color mixing idea, which Paris has launched, reaches the north in the spring, you will see such tones as black and red, green and brown or beige, blue and beige, gray and black, beige and black, and such combinations. They will be worn by fashionable women, who either have an eye for color harmony, or who employ some one to do this mixing for them.

Putting two colors into one dress, suit, or ensemble will be done chiefly in two ways. The first of these will be the combination of coat and dress of contrasting colors, or coat and jacket, or waist and skirt of contrasting tones. The second will be by patterned or printed materials in two or more colors. Modest, but effective color contrasts can be achieved by a one color dress or ensemble with scarf, hat, shoes, and bag in some contrasting shade. An excellent instance of this is a brown costume with the accessories in green or beige.

It is absolutely necessary for accessories to harmonize with each other, and to at least contrast pleasantly with your clothes, if you are to achieve anything resembling real chic. A great many printed or patterned materials will be worn this spring. Such fabrics demand plain accessories. This means one color hats, shoes, bags, and gloves. A rainbow is about the only phenomena that successfully combines all colors. Certainly the costume cannot do it without resembling something out of a circus.

Our first sketch illustrates a successful two color costume, which is one of the smartest ensembles seen on the Boulevard de la Croisette at Cannes. The dress is made of one of the new wavy striped djersas from Rodier in green and beige. (This, translated, means a fine jersey.) The dress and scarf are in this material. The long straight coat, with its important revers and unimportant collar is made of plain green jersey, and the belt of the dress is made of the same green jersey. Shoes and stockings are in two tones of beige, the hat is green to match the coat, and the bag is beige to match the shoes.

Our second sketch shows a short coated ensemble which illustrates one of the smartest of two color schemes for the southern resort. The short plain jacket is of rich claret red jersey, while the frock is made of beige tweed. London Trades make the jacket plain, and give the dress length and grace by V shaped bands which form the blouse portion, the lowest bands descending to make two large box plaits which give fullness to the front of the skirt. The scarf is beige and red, the hat is beige, and stockings and gloves are beige. The bag and shoes are red to match the jacket.

Our third model is a suit from Lucien Lelong, which combines black satin with gray crêpe de chine. The smart jacket with its rounded corners, its small roll collar and yoke and sleeve motifs is made of black satin. The skirt is also of black satin and is flared by a godet at the center front. The blouse, which is tucked with large notched tucks and small clusters, is made of gray crêpe de chine. Gray crêpe de chine also makes the flower. The correct shoes and hat are black. Gloves and stockings are beige to match the skin of the wearer.

In general, it is a wise thing to match your hose and your gloves to your own skin tint. If you do this you will find that they are in harmony with any costume you wear.

Color mixing in the evening frock is often more daring than is allowed for daytime clothes. Two and three shades may be used in alternating bands for the smart after dark dress, as is shown in our fourth sketch. This youthful robe de style from Jeanne Lanvin is made of taffeta, which is cleverly arranged in wavy tiers of white, light and dark blue. The bodice is closely fitted and comes scarcely an inch below the normal waistline. The flaring skirt shows the proper lengths to which a bouffant evening gown may go.

Green and beige wave-striped djersa makes the dress and scarf of this Lucien Lelong ensemble, shown at the extreme left, while the coat is in plain green jersey.

Second, a one-piece frock of beige tweed, and a short, plain jacket in rich claret red jersey, make another smart version of the two-color ensemble. Model from London Trades.

Third, Lucien Lelong chooses black satin for the jacket and skirt, and gray crepe de chine for the blouse of this afternoon suit.

Two shades of blue and white are cleverly arranged by Jeanne Lanvin, in this taffeta robe de style, sketched last.

An Attractive and Unusual Guest Room

WHEN it comes to the selecting of furniture and decorations for guests' rooms, fancy may be given a free rein. Comfort, of course, should not be subordinate to a striking arrangement of colors and furnishings. There must be good springs on the beds, a well stocked desk and dressing table, comfortable chairs, and a lounging unit, if possible, and, above all, convenient and good lighting equipment.

With these fundamental requisites established in their proper places the decorations and style of furniture may take any direction which may seem auspicious to the hostess. Schemes which might prove tiresome for a bedroom of everyday use, may be carried out with the greatest success in rooms of "occasional" character. The guest room should be one which will be vividly and happily remembered by each and every guest.

In our home harmonious the guest room measures ten feet six inches by fifteen feet. There are two double windows, one facing south and the other west. Three doors across one side of the room open on the hall, a commodious closet, and a bathroom. A study of the floor plan shows that all the necessary furniture has been pleasingly and sensibly placed.

Color scheme and furnishings are unusual and attractive. Walls are painted a pale mauve and woodwork is a little deeper. The furniture is made of hardwood and satinwood, with inlays of Macassar ebony. Twin beds, shown in the main illustration, have rounded headboards and no footboards.

Strips of mirror framed in narrow moldings painted to match the woodwork, are placed between the heads of the beds and behind each of the small tables. These strips reach from the baseboard to the molding. There are similar strips framing the doors and windows. It is suggested that these narrow panels might be filled with silver paper instead of the mirror, if expenses must be cut down, though the mirrors give an unusually distinctive note to the room.

Covers on the beds are made of a lustrous rayon, resembling heavy satin. They are vivid violet in color and hang to the floor in graceful folds at the sides and ends of the beds. The small tables are conveniently placed to hold those various incidental pieces which make for comfort. A pair of dull turquoise pottery lamps have striped silk shades, with lemon yellow as the dominant color. Side lights, one of which is in the center of the panel between the beds, are made of dull silver and frosted glass.

At the windows, as shown in the third drawing, glass curtains of pale mauve gauze hang straight to the floor. Overdraperies are of violet rayon, matching the bed covers. These are joined together in the center, seven inches down from the top, and then are caught back just above the baseboard, after having been drawn down tightly, so that they form interesting lines and angles.

Decidedly comfortable and convenient for lounging purposes in the guest room is a chaise longue. This one is upholstered in black velvet, and is fitted with a down filled cushion. Here the guest may enjoy a few moments of peaceful rest between festivities. Gay extra cushions are of various colored silks. The round table beside the chaise longue holds smoking accessories and several amusing modern figures and bits of pottery. A reading lamp of polished steel has an odd, lemon yellow shade.

Accompanying the dresser, which stands in the opposite corner from the chaise longue, is a modern arm chair upholstered in a three toned violet and gray material. This chair, in conjunction with the chaise longue, makes a delightful ensemble for "visiting" and talking over events of the day.

No guest room is complete without a well equipped desk. Invariably, whether visitors come for a month's stay or merely for a week-end, they find need of writing to some particular friend or relative. Stationery, pens, ink, blotters, a calendar, pencils, a good lamp, and a stamp box containing one, two, and five cent stamps for letters to Europe, as well as several special delivery stamps, should be provided for the convenience of the guests. It is attention to such small details as these which marks a woman as a most gracious and successful hostess.

In this guest room the desk is placed directly in front of a window overlooking the garden, making it always a pleasant place for writing. The seat of the accompanying chair is upholstered to match the arm chair. Almost entirely covering the floor is a black chenille rug, speckled all over with silver gray.

Activities of Women

Mrs. Matilda Stevens, one of the three women sheriffs in Texas, carries a gold-plated six-gun when she goes after bad men.

Clara Jacobo, who recently made her debut with the Metropolitan Opera company, is the daughter of an Italian grocer of Lawrence, Mass.

More than 9,000 Irish girls have joined in a crusade against alcoholic drinks, attending improper motion picture shows, immodesty in sea bathing, and from improper dancing. Smoking is also forbidden among the members.

Each Drop Like a Whole Vegetable!

FRESH vegetables would give us all a state of health, if only we would eat enough of them. Few of us do. But here is a little secret about assisting the peristaltic action so vitally important to our health; there is enough in one spoon of plain syrup pepsin to fill a market basket!

Several factors affecting sound health are often ignored in the average person's daily diet. But add a little syrup pepsin now and then, and watch what happens! Your appetite improves; so does your digestion, and elimination. Lots of folks who thought they were in perfect physical condition see a tremendous change after ten days with syrup pepsin.

When a scientific, vegetable corrective can put you in fine physical form so quickly, and keep the whole alimentary tract cleansed and sweet and free from need of powerful purges—it surely is worth trying! An actual test can be made in ten days. In this short space of time your stomach, and liver and bowels can be in shape to handle anything that's eaten!

Children thrive on almost any diet when pure pepsin syrup is given just occasionally to help assimilation, and make elimination thorough and regular. Elderly people have a far easier time, too, where this ideal combination of laxative herbs and pure pepsin is appreciated. Dr. Caldwell discovered this innocent means of keeping bowels normally active in 1875. Now, you couldn't find a drugstore without this famous prescription, all put up with directions enclosed.

Horoscope Says This Is an Ideal Day for Every One

By Jupiter.

A BENEFICENT aspect between the moon and Jupiter today make this an ideal Sunday. All religious interests are favored and social and fraternal affairs are well aspected. This will be an especially propitious day during which to marry, or become engaged.

If this is your birthday you will have an interesting and exciting year. Many new projects of unsuspected magnitude will come to your attention and you may decide to become interested in some line of work other than that you are following at the present time. But whatever your decision, you are coming under pleasant and satisfactory conditions.

A child born today will be sensitive, kind, mediumistic, retiring, sympathetic, fond of animals, luxury, beauty, and constantly desirous of a change in environment.

He will like reading, dancing and music. He will have to assume responsibilities of others. He must learn to finish what he begins and to be peaceful, methodical and creative.

Monday, February 11.

In spite of conflicting vibrations, this is a good day for constructive effort. By guarding the temper and using consideration in dealing with others, this day of excessive energy can be turned to good account.

If this is your birthday there is an active and prosperous year before you. Money comes to you from many places and you will find your plans eagerly backed by conservative and reliable men. A most fortunate and happy birthday, indeed.

A child born today will be forceful, outspoken, nervous, aggressive, ambitious, enterprising and courageous. He will meet with much criticism and have many obstacles to overcome but he will learn to surmount these and avoid criticism by living within himself and refusing to discuss his intimate affairs.

He must guard against losses through signing papers or through fraud.

Tuesday, February 12.

Between the moon's adverse aspect with Saturn and an oncoming conjunction with Uranus today promises to be enlivened with outbursts of all kinds. People will do the most unexpected things and Saturn's influence can be recognized in an unusually severe attitude or some uncalled-for criticism. Not a good day to attempt important undertakings.

If this is your birthday, good fortune should come to you through women and friends. Those in superior positions will help you to advance and to prosper, but a lawsuit may cause you considerable worry. However, the general outlook for you for the entire year is one of success and prosperity.

A child born today will be selfish, original, erratic, intuitive, refined, philanthropic, and courteous. He will be fond of dress and the opposite sex, and a male child born today must be careful of a too hasty marriage. He will travel and succeed financially, but must learn not to worry and always to be just.

Wednesday, February, 13.

This is such a splendid day that every one should get started at his most important task and stick to it as long as he can keep his eyes open. Good aspects operate throughout the day and far into the night, making it possible to accomplish a great deal of work. The evening will be favorable for social affairs, romance, and domestic matters.

If this is your birthday you have a bright, romantic year ahead of you. For those who are not limited by years, an exceedingly happy courtship is predicted, but for all those born on this date 1929 stretches ahead, twelve months of pleasure and friendship.

A child born today will be emotional, optimistic, neat in matters of dress, refined, and attractive. He will be fond of music and all the arts. He will travel extensively and will have many love affairs and a wide acquaintance. He must learn to be detached, impersonal, universal in thought, and to overcome feelings of jealousy or envy.

Thursday, February 14.

This is one of those good Thursdays you have heard about. All the aspects which operate between early morning and midnight are favorable. It is a splendid time to make every effort toward advancement.

If this is your birthday you will benefit during the coming year through the renewal of old friendships. Matters connected with real estate will bring prosperity to you. Promotion is forecast for those who were born today.

A child born today will be conservative, prudent, energetic, sober, careful and not much given to gaiety.

Friday, February 15.

An adverse aspect between the moon and Mercury suggests caution with all communications, conversation, agreement and literary matters. After noon the remainder of the day is good for routine work only.

If this is your birthday, 1929 should bring you an increase in finances and advancement in your position through your superiors. If you are in government work this is the time to put forth every effort to win promotion. Enemies may attempt to prevent you from getting your rewards, but you will win in spite of them.

A child born today will be intuitive, resourceful, benevolent, friendly, humane, hopeful and popular. He will acquire money in signing papers or making promises, for there is a tendency to be careless about legal technicalities and too trusting. He will have to shoulder many responsibilities and must learn to be a good listener, tactful, poised, and careful about details.

Saturday, February 16.

Financial affairs and all matters related to liquids, chemicals, oils, drugs, anesthetics and stimulating beverages come under an unfavorable away today. It is advisable to be cautious in eating anything which comes out of a can, especially preserves.

If this is your birthday, you will probably take a great many more journeys than you have for a long while. Anything which has to do with buying or selling, particularly in small goods or novelties, will bring you financial gain. It is an especially good year.

A child born today will be ambitious, selfish, sensitive, venturesome, emotional, psychic, nervous, talkative, critical, and subject to melancholia. He will travel and have many strange experiences in life, which he will keep to himself.

Maiden Meditations

By Sara Moore.

A New Ocean Chanty.

Sing ho for the lassies that take to sea
On the first class cabin plan,
Who rough it in rug draped steamer chairs
As only bridge fiends can . . .
Ah, travel can make any back roads deb
Seem cosmopolitan.

Sing ho for the life on the salty deep
In ships (of course) de luxe . . .
With cargoes of counts and dowagers
And movie stars and crooks . . .
With a swimming pool and a brass railed bar
And a corp of rare French cooks.

Sing ho. But hum it beneath your breath
Lest ghosts that haunt old spars
Might stir, in their seamen's scorn, a gale
To rattle your placid stars.

The Right and Wrong of Wedding Formality

This Questionnaire Will Test Your Knowledge of the Ins and Outs of Etiquette

By Persis Standish

Miss Standish will be glad to answer questions on etiquette on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope. Address Persis Standish, Chicago Sunday Tribune.

IN response to requests, here are more questions and answers about the right and wrong of wedding procedure:

1. In addressing invitations, is it proper to send them "The Misses Jones?"
2. Is it proper to send them to Mrs. Smith and family?
3. How should wedding presents of silver and linen be marked?
4. Should a bride mark her linens with her husband's initial?
5. When should wedding announcements be sent out?
6. How does a widow announce her wedding?
7. A divorcee?
8. Are wedding presents called for by wedding invitations?
9. By announcements of weddings?
10. Is one obliged to give a present at a second marriage?
11. What sort of gown should a widow wear when she remarries?
12. A divorcee?
13. When a bachelor marries and brings his new bride to a small community from some strange place, what should be the attitude of his neighbors toward her?
14. What should she do on her part?
15. How should a bachelor so situated let his friends know of his intention to marry?

Answers.

1. It is not proper to address invitations to "The Misses Jones." Each Miss Jones should receive a special invitation.
2. The same applies to the Smith family.
3. Wedding presents of silver or linen should be marked with the initials of the bride.
4. No, the bride should mark her linen with her own initials only.
5. Wedding announcements should be sent out as soon after the wedding as possible. The same day or the day after.
6. If a widow has a mother or father or any near kin, her wedding is announced just as a wedding of any unmarried person, except that her married name is added. For example, "Mr. and Mrs. Thomas James announce the marriage of their daughter, Florence Smith Brown."
7. A divorcee has her wedding announced the same way as any other married woman. In case where neither the bride nor the groom has any kindred, they sometimes announce their own wedding as follows: "Helen Burke Henderson and Charles Francis Brown announce their marriage on December Second at Chicago, Illinois."
8. Wedding presents are not necessarily called for by invitations to weddings, but one would hardly give a wedding reception if one had not the grace to send the bride some little gift.
9. Wedding announcements only call for presents in the case of very close friends, when they would naturally be sent, anyway.
10. No one is obliged to give presents at a second marriage. The list of presents originated in a wish to furnish things for the new home.
11. A widow should never wear white, nor a veil at her second marriage. She should wear a simple frock or, better still, a tailored frock.
12. This applies also to divorcees.
13. His neighbors should call on the new bride at once and invite her shortly afterwards to their houses to dinners or other entertainments.
14. The bride, on her part, should return calls immediately, receive all her husband's friends with graciousness, and in her turn offer them the hospitality of her new home.
15. A bachelor should tell his friends that he is to be married, and ask them to his wedding even though he knows they cannot make a journey to attend.

Parties

Tell us about the nicest party you ever attended and we'll pay $1 for each letter printed. Address Parties, Chicago Tribune.

Helping Others.

The nicest party I've attended was a short time ago when a group of friends who had been playing bridge together for some time decided that the time was wasted, so one of the girls suggested that the next time we met instead of bridge we would do something worth while. Also, there was to be no gossip, no unkind remarks about any one.

In two weeks we met, each person bringing food of some sort which was to go given to some deserving family. We also sewed on baby things furnished by the hostess and gave them to a family in need.

Every other meeting is now devoted to just such work and we are all happier. F. K. L.

Shakespearean.

The oddest party I ever attended was given in commemoration of Shakespeare's birthday.

The guests came attired as characters of his immortal plays. We all spoke in the old Elizabethan manner, and each person violating this rule was severely penalized.

Supper was served in the "banquet hall," each person sitting on a high backed arm chair. Entertainment was provided by court jesters, bards and musicians.

We played many games, the best of which was guessing the sources of various quotations from the more popular Shakespearean plays. The party was concluded with a stately minuet, after which each brave knight escorted his fair lady to her dwelling. A. F. R.

Turning Back the Time.

Mother and dad were to entertain their dinner club, and to make the affair unique they set their table to correspond with a dinner table twenty-five years ago. Corned beef and cabbage was served on a red and white checkered tablecloth with an old-fashioned silver castor, butter dish, napkins, silverware, etc. To make it complete they dressed in old-fashioned clothes.

But their secret got out and, to their surprise, the dinner guests arrived attired in full dress suits, high silk hats, décolleté dresses, with diamonds in superfluity.

It is needless to say who the joke was on. Nevertheless, the evening was a huge success. H. H.

A Dollar for Your Dreams

Have you ever had a dream which later came true? If you'll mail us an account of your prophetic dream we'll pay $1 for every dream published. Address "Dreams," Chicago Tribune.

Shoes Were Lost.

One morning on my way to business college I left a pair of shoes at one of the leading shoe stores for repairs, and was told they would be ready for me the following Thursday. At the appointed time I called for the shoes but was informed they were not ready. For ten consecutive days I went in the store, and every day was given the same answer to my inquiry: "Your shoes are not ready."

On Sunday night, 11 days after I had left my shoes at the store for repairs, I dreamed that I called at the store the following day and a tall blonde man I had never seen came forward, and when I asked for my shoes he said: "Miss E., we have lost your shoes; our records show that you brought them in for repairs, but we have searched the place thoroughly and are unable to find any trace of them. You may select any pair of shoes in this store, or if you prefer cash, name your price and we will pay whatever you ask."

After school on Monday I called for my shoes and was met by the man of my dream, who told me of the loss of my shoes as I had dreamed. I named a cash price and was paid for the lost shoes. O. E.

Waved Good-by.

I had a twin sister to whom I was devoted, but we were both married and obliged to live many miles apart. One evening while seated on a bench at the station waiting for the train I went suddenly into a sleep and saw my sister standing at the door. She smiled, waved me a kiss, and disappeared.

I instantly awoke and was glad to see that no one had noticed my lapse into unconsciousness. I scarcely reached home when a telegram arrived announcing my sister's sudden death due to an accident. She was killed while I was asleep. W. G. R.

Saved from Robbery.

This summer while staying in our summer cottage my first dream came true. As we know every one who lived around us we took no trouble in locking our doors at night. This particular evening I had lain down after dinner for a nap and thereupon dreamed of a robbery in our cottage.

That night for the first time I locked the doors while every one laughed at me. Nothing happened then, but the following morning as soon as breakfast was over our neighbor hurried over to ask if we had also been robbed. It was then we heard of the prowler who had robbed several cottages, but had left after finding our doors locked. G. E.

Three Gold Coins.

During the first year I was married my husband and I moved to Arizona and bought a piece of land which formerly belonged to an old prospector who had lived there alone for years. We rebuilt the house immediately, but the ground around it was not cleared as yet, and there were several old tree stumps which had to be removed from the yard.

One night I dreamed that when we took out a certain one of these stumps we found buried close to it some old ragged garments under which was a pot of gold. I told my husband about the dream the next morning, but he only laughed. The men came to clear the land and when they took out the stump I had dreamed about, surely enough, we found old rags buried near the foot of it, under which was not a pot of gold, but a tiny leather bag with three gold coins in it. R. C. E.

Illinois Mother Finds Best Plan

When Nature fails you, try and help yourself by the most natural method! That's the advice of leading authorities nowadays; and for over fifty years it has been the plan of the makers of California Fig Syrup. The quick, easy way this pure, wholesome product relieves children of those symptoms of stubborn bowels, such as headaches, biliousness, coated tongue, bad breath, no appetite or energy, etc., and make them strong, energetic and rosy-cheeked again shows there's no use drugging a child with harsh purgative medicines. And Fig Syrup helps give tone and strength to weak, flabby stomach and bowels so they continue to act of their own accord and you don't have to keep dosing them. Its popularity is shown by its sales record of over four million bottles a year and by the praise thousands of mothers are fairly showering on it. An Illinois mother, Mrs. M. E. Hamilton, 6331 Parnell Ave., Chicago, enthusiastically declares: "My big, fat boy, Merrill, is now almost three. He is strong and energetic and always romping. I give California Fig Syrup a lot of credit for his condition. I have used it with him since he was a few months old, for every cold or upset spell. It always regulates him quick and starts him to eating right and improving in every way."

Your protection against inferior substitutes is the word "California," which always appears on the carton of genuine California Fig Syrup.

Mercolized Wax Keeps Skin Young

DO you know that just beneath that soiled, discolored, faded or aged complexion is one fair to look upon? Nature causes the normal skin to peel off in tiny, unseen, flour-like particles, a little each day, renewing the complexion of youth naturally, but there comes a time when this skin shedding slows up. Worry, overwork, sickness, inactivity are reasons that cause the face to be blotchy, discolored, pimply and old looking. The thing to do, if you wish to look your prettiest at all times, is to assist nature in the process of absorption by using pure Mercolized Wax. Get an ounce at any drug store or beauty counter and use as directed. It gently but surely peels away the outer scarf skin, removing freckles, pimples, blackheads or a muddy complexion. The underneath skin, now in evidence, is clear, pink, fresh and velvety, and the entire face looks years younger. Mercolized Wax brings out the hidden beauty. To quickly remove wrinkles and other age lines we recommend a face lotion of unusual merit. One ounce powdered saxolite and one-half pint witch hasel.

FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown.

I want to be the medium through which the friends in deed and the friends in need may be brought together. It may be you have some discarded article, which has not outgrown its usefulness, that will make some less fortunate one happy and you would gladly give it if you knew how to go about it. Write to me and I shall be happy to be of service to you. Please write on one side of the paper.

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send articles to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

Offers Women's Shoes.

"I have several pairs of women's shoes to give away which I think might fit some of your readers. They are: two pairs of black satin slippers, sizes 7 and 8 D; several pairs in size 4½ AA—pumps, oxfords and green satin evening slippers; one pair of patent leather slippers, size 7½A; two pairs of high brown shoes, sizes 3½ B; 1 pair of high topped laced shoes, size 5½. Mrs. E. H."

The sizes and styles in this group of shoes are varied enough to take care of the needs of several of our readers. If you are in need of new footwear, select your size and the type most suited to you and write me about it; please do not telephone.

Business Helps.

"I have a set of books on 'Business Commerce and Finance' which I shall be glad to give to any one who can make use of it. F. D."

This interesting and enlightening set of books should be a splendid aid to the young man embarking on a business career. If you'd like to own these volumes, write me for them; please do not telephone.

Invalid Would Like a Songbird.

"My brother is an invalid and extremely fond of birds. He is anxious to have a singing canary and I am unable to buy one for him. Do you think one of your readers would have one to give? J. N."

Wouldn't you like to send one of your pet canaries out on a mission of happiness, warbling a little sunshine into the drab life of this invalid? You don't know how happy he would be to get it.

Can Make Over Clothes.

"I sew for and practically clothe two girls, aged 9 and 12 years, who live in a small town not far from Chicago, and I am wondering if some of your readers might have clothes to give them which are no longer needed. I can make them over if they do not fit. Mrs. C. S."

Every family with small children is sure to have clothing, still serviceable, which has been outgrown. Won't you help this woman help her two young charges by sending on the garments your girls can no longer wear?

Spaniard Is Making Collection.

"I am a Spaniard making a collection of things from my country—shawls, knives, firearms, costumes, coins and other articles. I cannot afford to buy them, as I am sole support of five people, and I wonder if any of your readers would have such articles which they wouldn't mind giving to me. R. Z."

If you are not especially attached to things Spanish, probably you'll not mind giving any you may have to this collector. With your help he should be able to gather together an interesting group.

Furniture Is Needed.

"I have been a constant reader of your column, and seeing how you have helped others so wonderfully, I wonder if you can do something for me. I am a widow with a little girl, 7, and since she was 2 years old I have been working as a housekeeper, but this is such an unsatisfactory arrangement when you have a child I want to have my own home now. I cannot afford to buy the furniture we will need and I am hoping you will be able to help me secure some. I shall need living room, bedroom, kitchen and dining room furniture and shall be so grateful if you can help me. Mrs. C. R."

After so many years of trekking about from one position to another, living in the home of other people this mother and her small daughter are going to be very happy at their own fireside if we can help them get the much needed furniture. Won't you let me know what you can donate?

Wants Hockey Skates.

"I am a young man, 19 years of age, who for the last few months, due to sickness, has been the sole support of my family of five. Now I want a pair of hockey skates sadly because of the great expenses we have had, I cannot afford to buy them. Has one of your readers a pair to give? I wear size 9 shoe. J. H."

This young man has uncomplainingly sacrificed so much for his family I hope we will be able to do something for him. If you have hockeys in his size which you are no longer going to wear, may he not have them?

Best Remedy for Obstinate Cough Made at Home

You'll never know how quickly a stubborn cough or chest cold can be conquered, until you try this famous recipe. It is used in millions of homes, because it gives more prompt, positive relief than anything else. It's no trouble at all to mix and costs but a trifle. Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup or strained honey to make a full pint. This saves two-thirds of the money usually spent for cough medicine, and gives you a purer, better remedy. It never spoils, and tastes good—children like it.

You can actually feel its penetrating, soothing action on the inflamed throat membranes. It also promptly loosens the germ-laden phlegm, and at the same time, it is absorbed into the blood, where it acts directly on the bronchial tubes. This three-fold action explains why it brings such quick relief even in severe bronchial coughs and "hay" coughs.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine, containing the active agent of creosote, in a refined, palatable form, and known as one of the greatest healing agents for coughs, chest colds and bronchial troubles.

Do not accept a substitute for Pinex. It is guaranteed to give prompt relief or money refunded.

The Wise Mother Avoids Drifting

By Mrs. Gladys Huntington Browne

EACH of us thinks, I suppose, that he or she has the world's hardest problem to solve. Each of us thinks, I suppose, that if she could live here or there, in this manner or that, other than the place or the manner in which she is living, that the problems connected with her children would melt away like mist in the sun.

This feeling applies rather especially to that very important side of a child's life—his association with other children. We are apt to think that if we could only choose our environment, the selection and control of the children's companionship would be entirely simplified. Whereas, it rarely would.

A mother living in a great city, for instance, whose children go to a fine school, complains of the fact that her children have so little casual, neighborhood companionship after school and on Saturdays and Sundays, since she can't let them play in the street and their schoolmates live rather far apart.

Suburbs Have Difficulties.

Another mother, a friend of mine, living in a good suburb, bemoans the difficulties that beset her because she simply can't cut her children off from association with certain children or families in her neighborhood who are definitely bad for her little girls. There is one neighbor into whose home no one wants to go and with whose children none of the other mothers feel their children should be intimate. Her carelessness just about sickness alone caused several very serious illnesses from measles caught through her negligence with her child. There are other neighbors—and this is a good representative community, too—who discuss all sorts of horrors before their children and when this friend of mine lets her children go visiting she never knows what ideas they will come home with. Living in a restricted community, she feels helpless to draw lines.

Well, we might go on. There's real country life which means so much for children in some ways and which, however, often involves isolation. So, in each case, one's own problems seem difficult compared with other people's. And yet these difficulties often balance, though the good and the bad in each may not be identical.

There is one outstanding conclusion that must eventually be reached, whatever the surroundings or circumstances in which a family finds itself, that conclusion is that it devolves upon the mother to map out a course and steer the family bark accordingly—not to drift with the tide. It is seldom that any one who has children can drift with safety. It requires managing, good clear headed vigilance, and often courage of a sort, to control your children's companionship and the influences that you choose to have bear upon them.

Fortitude Is Needed.

Still, even given the determination to be the directing force, women with growing children sometimes find themselves settled in an environment so alien to them that it seems to present almost insurmountable difficulties. A man's work or his profession sometimes take him to remote or rough or undesirable sections, and if he has a devoted wife, she and the children go with him. Many a woman has needed all her fortitude to enable her to wring victory for her family from circumstances that promised only defeat.

Wherever there are people, newspapers go. So this paper will probably reach many families of gentle tradition who are being forced by financial circumstances, or by the father's profession or type of work, to live in surroundings alien to them in almost every particular—material things, manners, morals. And by alien I don't mean merely foreign, but different in an undesirable way. A woman, then, must size up the situation and deal with it firmly if she is to bring her children up—not let the elements about her bring them up. This requires intelligence and initiative to a degree.

A letter came to me not long ago which should be encouraging and full of suggestion to the many mothers placed similarly to the one described here, who feel a little helpless in the face of undesirable surroundings. And for those mothers whose difficulties are more trivial, it should be decidely stimulating.

Passing It On.

"Dear Mrs. Bevans: It has been a long time since I wrote you—last spring, I guess—and received a letter from you in reply. I won't look for an answer from you as I know you are increasingly busy, but I wonder if you can pass on in the course of your articles a few suggestions that my mother used in making the childhood of two little girls one of the happiest any one could have.

"She was an ex-kindergarten teacher, which may account for some of her ideas, and though we were far from civilization in a little lumbering town up north, where we were the only cultured family, we were continually surrounded by the beautiful and lovely.

"The real reason for her success as a mother was that she planned everything so carefully. We were the only children in town who had 'planned parties.' In other families, the mother simply furnished refreshments and sometimes was not even present. We had cooking parties which were great fun. We invited about six or eight girls about 10 years old and drew for carefully prepared papers on which were written directions for the particular thing that child was to make or do. For instance, one girl was to make cocoa. Not only measurements were there but each step in preparation, and where the ingredients were to be found. Of course, only the very simple things were given.

"At another party each child was given a little doll hat to trim with the contents of a paper bag that she drew without investigation. The little hats were inexpensive and could be used over again. Sometimes each child brought her own little doll and was given scraps of cloth to make a dress for it, and the one who did the best with her goods was awarded the prize.

Orderly Habits Started.

"Another bit of successful planning was about our playthings. After Christmas we chose the best blocks or other toy and it was set aside until Sundays, rainy days or days when we were sick and had tired of our old toys. Thus, there was always something new and fresh to play with. And she insisted at all times that we pick up our toys and replace them in the right place as soon as we were through. That habit has carried through today and is invaluable in keeping the house orderly. I often lament the fact that my husband was not so trained.

"My mother sent away to the large cities for supplies to keep us busy and interested. For instance, we had those lovely paper dolls that come with tissue paper dresses and patterns for all sorts of gowns. These dolls were colored and more durable than many and came in a box with the gay paper. One year an aunt sent us a box of red hearts, cupids, doves, lace paper and flowers with which we could devise our own valentines. These, also, were bought as a set.

"Besides encouraging us to paint and do hand work, we were stimulated to read a great deal. We always discussed the books we read and acted them out sometimes. Some think it is a mistake for children to read fairy tales and other imaginative tales like "The Three Bad Mice" and "Peter Rabbit." They say that children know they are not true and are disgusted. I wish you would refute that idea in your column some time for I know that children are not disgusted because they are not true. They don't expect them to be true in the first place.

Encouraged to Write.

"Both my sister and I kept a little book containing our best original stories and poems. We were not geniuses and neither did we have much talent, but we wrote and thought of little verses about the rain, the snow, the flowers, and holidays. My sister was only 8 when she died, but we have about a dozen little poems of hers. I found sixty of my own that I wrote and preserved between the ages of 10 and 12.

"I think that reading and writing poetry when very young tends to develop a sense of the beautiful in nature, and if it leads to nothing else is so justified. If more mothers believe that poetry belongs to every one and not to the special few they and their children would love it more.

"Just one more constructive thing my mother did. We children were thrown among children who spoke bad grammar, were from disreputable homes, in some cases swore, and who had no sense of either politeness or refinement of manner. I can think of but one of my old chums who grew up to decency. To protect us my mother saw that she was at hand when we played with other children. We did not go to the homes of our chums unless she had ascertained that the mother was to be at home all of the time, and then it was only on rare occasions. My mother tried to instill in us a sense of honor and right that would meet the occasion if she were not there at the time."

"I hope you can pass on some of these suggestions to other mothers if you think they would help them. That last point is one that I especially wanted to make."

Food for Thought.

As to the last paragraph—well, it's something we have to face frankly. We know that children's native endowment of naturalness and simplicity — their wholesomeness — are too often impaired by unfortunate association or utter ignorance in upbringing. Though we may feel sorry for these children, we must protect our children from their undesirable ways.

This letter, to my mind, is a pretty comprehensive one, which many of us might read thoughtfully and with profit.

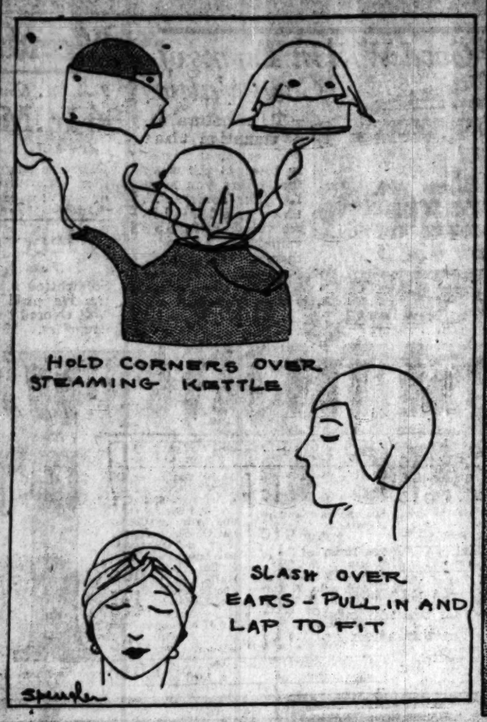
Practical and Fancy Needle Work

By Clotilde



The Draped Turban of Sequins Is Charming to Wear with the New Evening Gown.

THE close skull fitting draped Hindu turban shown today is recommended for the youthful patron. It is made of sequin banding, six inches wide. To make this turban a wooden mold or crown that can be bought at any millinery wholesale house is necessary.

Use white tarlatan for the foundation of the crown. Cut a strip of the tarlatan three inches wide and put this around the bottom of the wooden mold. Put a few thumb tacks in to keep it in place. Cut one-half yard of tarlatan on the straight of the goods. Put over the mold; put thumb tacks in the front, back, and on both sides.

Hold the bias corners over a steaming tea kettle and when they are steamed soft bring them down firmly to the bottom of the wooden mold, and use thumb tacks to hold in place. Run a hot iron over the tarlatan crown to dry it.

Take a tape measure and mark 15¾ inches from front to back and 16 inches from side to side. Draw a line between the measurements. Cut it quite a bit over the left eye to give the eyebrow line so much in demand. Use a corset steel or stay to run under the seamed crown to get it off the wooden mold, as there is so much starch in the tarlatan it will stick to the mold.

If this steamed crown is too large for the head it gives a better line to slash it over the ears, lap it, and sew it well. Use a narrow bias tape to close the bottom of the crown. A narrow piece of the sequin banding is put around the bottom of the tarlatan crown. Put the crown back on the wooden mold, use two pieces ¼ of a yard long of the sequin banding for the top of the crown, sew them down well with fine stitches, begin on the right side back and bring around from right to left.

Pull in two folds, bring another piece of banding from the left side and meet in the front, draw into a knot and bring the ends down under the folds in the back.

With this sequin turban is worn a sequin cocktail jacket. This jacket has long sleeves and the coat part is finger tip length. These jackets are also made in satin to wear with pajamas for lounging.

What is your sewing problem? Do you have trouble in following a pattern? Do you find difficulty in making a skirt hang evenly or making a sleeve that doesn't twist? If there is anything you would like to know about these or other problems of needlework, write to Clotilde, The Tribune, Chicago, inclosing a stamped, addressed envelope if a personal reply is desired.

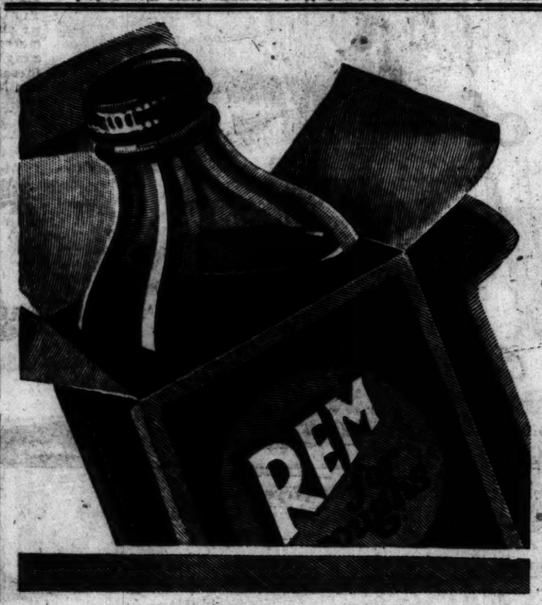
Sage Tea Puts Color in Gray Hair

By LOIS PAIGE

I am heartily in favor of the woman who refuses to be aged by gray hair. It is every woman's right, even her duty, to retain her youthfulness and attractiveness as long as she can. When a woman asks me about coloring her gray, faded or streaked hair I say, "Go ahead," and tell her the secret of sage tea and sulphur.

A brew of common garden sage tea and sulphur has the power to restore gray or faded hair to full life and color. You can either prepare the mixture at home or buy it already prepared and ready to use. The name of the prepared article is Wyeth's Sage & Sulphur, and since it costs only 75c a bottle at any drug store, there is really no need to go to the bother of preparing it yourself.

You simply moisten a comb or soft brush and draw it through your hair, one strand at a time. Done at night, morning sees the gray gone; another application or two and your hair is once again of the color and lustre of youth and you appear years younger. The whole effort is one of perfect naturalness.



so the Druggist said: why don't you try REM?

A Fiend About Sugar.

An uncle of mine could never see a bit of sugar wasted without loud mourning. Indeed, he only wanted it used very sparingly. No sugar for sweetening was ever used directly in his family. It was first dissolved in hot water.

The family moved into a new home where stood a row of gooseberry bushes in the garden. Uncle Henry loved gooseberry pie of all things.

One day he came into the kitchen when Aunt Sue was sugaring filling for them. He was scandalized at the amount of sugar she used. When she told him they would not be good otherwise, he found the ax and cut down every bush. V. W.

Thrifty!

In my neighborhood there was a wealthy bachelor farmer, who, when asked for a match by his neighbors, started a conversation on crops and the weather, in the meantime filling his own pipe.

Then he lit his own pipe and the neighbor's pipe with the same match. A. S.

Among the Rubbish.

When one owns a six flat, modern building, has a beautiful home and an expensive car, one might be considered wealthy. This was what an old woman friend of ours had, besides a reputation for having plenty in the bank. It was, therefore, a surprise to me one day when I went to visit her and was told she was in the basement.

There I found her digging among the rubbish the janitor had just left. She was folding up every piece of paper she could find and pounced on small rags with what seemed joy. She seemed to guess my astonishment, for she said, "I always save the paper from the stuff the tenants in my building throw out. You know, it amounts to about 10 cents a month, and I can buy a loaf of bread for that."

A rather degrading sort of economy for a landlady to practice, don't you think? E. H.

Paper Picker.

One of our acquaintances, who is well-to-do, brings home every evening all the newspapers he picks up in the elevated trains going to and from the loop. Then he packs them and sells them to the junk man.

He brags that what he gets from the sale of the papers offsets his carfare going to and from business. M. H.

Saving on Ink.

My boss is the most economical man I've ever had the misfortune to meet. I attend to the correspondence and he orders me not to dot the "I's" or cross the "t's," as it wastes the ink. M. G.

Saint Valentine

By Eleanor Jewett.

Saint Valentine goes walking out
All year with a big net,
And gathers up the friendly words
That you and I forget.

He stores them in the sunshine
And watches them with care,
So when he writes his valentines
They'll be in good repair.

It is surprising how words change—
Unless he kept them bright,
Saint Valentine's whole catch might burn
To comics in a night!

Bobby, aged 4, found himself sorely beset one day by the combined antics of his twin sisters, two years younger.

Throwing himself into his father's arms he sobbed out, "I love you and mama and grandmama a whole lot. I love Dotty and Kiki only teeny little bit." R. A. W.

Junior had received a pair of ice skates for Christmas, and as soon as the walks became icy he teased to go out and skate. His aunt, with whom he was staying, hesitated, fearing he might fall and hurt himself, but finally permitted him to try his new skates.

A few minutes afterward she saw him sit down heavily, and soon he came into the house with tears in his eyes.

"Did you skate?" she inquired, and Junior sobbed out, "Y-es, but—but not on the right end." E. M.

Saved by a Sense of Humor.

We were taking inventory at the office. My duty was to type the [illegible] written in longhand. The [illegible] was hardly legible. I studied over words, trying to make sense out of them, but failed; so finally, in desperation, called my boss, who, I was sure would be able to decipher them.

I asked him if he could read the handwriting of some one who [illegible] should be in second grade, how to write. I said I couldn't tell who wrote it as I didn't think [illegible] had anybody so dumb working in our company.

Imagine my embarrassment when he laughingly informed me that he was responsible for the writing! Thank goodness, he has a keen sense of humor. E. B.

Spoke Too Soon.

It was homecoming at the university and my husband and I entertained in our home a number of his old classmates and their wives, whom I did not know.

Everything went off splendidly and I thoroughly enjoyed it with the exception of this one instance: After the last guest, as I thought, had departed I sat down on the hall bench and calling to my husband said, "Well, Jim, it was lots of fun, but thank goodness it's over."

Just then I saw coming down the stairs a guest whom I had said good-by to, but who had left her gloves and had returned for them. I had not seen her come back.

I don't know who was the more embarrassed, she or I. L. W.

THE GLENLITTEN MURDER

BY E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

THE ACTION HITHERTO:

LORD AND LADY GLENLITTEN are young newlyweds, the latter being a beautiful young girl reared in France. With the assistance of Glenlitten's sister, Lady Susan, they entertain for the first time. The guests are: Comte Raoul de Besset, an old friend of Lady Glenlitten's; Lord and Lady Mansfield; Rodney Haslam, a West African commissioner home on leave; Bobby Grindelis, a young lawyer; Dr. Meadows, a surgeon; Sir Richard Cotton, a noted criminal lawyer; two officers, Fraser and Phillpson; and Prince Charles de Suess, a Russian refugee. Lady Glenlitten, unnerved by a thunderstorm, retires early. Soon afterward she hears her name called, sees a hand at the window, and hears the report of a gun. She loses consciousness, and on regaining it finds her husband and Dr. Meadows with her and Sir Richard bending over the lifeless body of Comte de Besset. Costly jewels are missing and traces of a burglar are found. The burglar is captured. Sir Richard Cotton believes him innocent of the murder and wrings from Felice an admission of the same opinion.

INSTALLMENT IV.

On the Trail.

THERE was a moment's breathless silence. For the first time an expression of something like dismay was visible in Andrew's face. Félice was shaking from head to foot. Sir Richard's expression was unchanged.

"Why not?" he asked keenly.

"Because—because of the flash—that little thread of yellow light—it did not seem to come from the window at all."

"From where then did it come?"

She held out her arms towards her husband. He threw his cigar away, sprang to his feet, and in a moment her head was buried against his shoulder.

"I do not know," she sobbed. "Andrew, be kind to me. Do not let him ask me these questions."

He smoothed her hair tenderly, and looked across at his wife's questioner with a scowl upon his face. At that moment there was indeed something sinister about Sir Richard's tall, thin form, the head bent slightly forward, the eyes full of inquiry.

"What can she know about it more than she has said?" Glenlitten demanded harshly. "You forget, Dick, that Félice is little more than a child, the whole thing was a terrible shock. She fainted on the spot. How can she remember anything after becoming unconscious? Why, it was enough to have sent any woman crazy."

"Quite so," Sir Richard assented softly. "I quite agree. The only thing is that if she had noticed anything—and she does seem to have the dawn of an idea that the flash came from somewhere else—it might have saved a man's life."

"O, bunkum!" Andrew declared. "Who could tell where a flash comes from? You don't want to make Félice ill, do you? Chuck it now, like a good fellow! As to this man being hanged—well, they'll have to find the revolver and prove that it belonged to him, and all sorts of things, before that could happen."

Sir Richard relapsed a little further into his chair.

"Don't think I am quite a brute, either of you, please," he begged, as he knocked the ash deliberately from his cigar. "I am sure you don't for a moment believe that I came down here in any suspicious or unfriendly spirit. I came down really to prepare you for the time when, unless the matter is cleared up before, Lady Glenlitten will probably have to answer all the questions I have put to her, and many others besides, from the witness box."

"What the hell do you mean?" her husband demanded.

"Why, simply this," the lawyer explained. "The burglar, or supposed burglar—Max Drayton, his name is—is certain to be defended when the trial comes on. If he hasn't any money himself he is probably one of a gang, and these fellows all join together. As a matter of fact a brother-in-law—I think it is—has already approached my office to know if I would take the case."

"You mean that you would act for a scoundrel like that?" Andrew demanded angrily.

Sir Richard shook his head in protest.

"That point of view doesn't exist, Andrew," he explained. "It is the duty of every man practicing in the criminal courts to accept any case that is offered to him which is in any way of a reasonable character. I should not accept this one until I heard Drayton's story, but if I found that in any way convincing I should certainly do my best to help him escape from the gallows. To get him off I shall have to prove, or at any rate make it possible or probable, that there was some one else in the room who fired that shot. That is why I have cross-questioned Lady Glenlitten so closely, in the hope, perhaps, that her subconscious mind might yield up some little memory which was lingering in the corners of her brain."

"IF you are going to begin talking that tosh again," Andrew began angrily——

"It isn't tosh," Sir Richard interrupted, speaking very quietly but with a compelling firmness. You must try and look at this matter dispassionately, Andrew. It's a man's life that's at stake, and it's for your own sake and the sake of your wife that I speak so plainly. Both her bedroom door—the one leading out on to the corridor—and the connecting door between her apartment and yours were locked. Will not that seem a little strange to the jury, when the door leading into her boudoir and bathroom, from the corridor where the bachelor quarters are situated, from which De Besset came, was unfastened?"

Félice was sobbing now. Her head was half buried in the cushion, her eyes were covered with a few inches of cambric handkerchief.

"I don't like Sir Richard any more, Andrew," she cried. "Please tell him to go away."

"Don't be afraid, sweetheart," he whispered. "Of course, you know, Dick," he went on, turning round and facing his friend—a grim, passionate figure—"you know that I resent every word you are saying."

Sir Richard shook his head sadly.

"It is quite useless to threaten me, Andrew," he said. "I can see you itching now to take me by the throat, but you can't do it. For one thing, I am many years older than you are, and for another, every word I am saying to you is said with kindness, because it will all come up again before long in court, and it is far better for you to be prepared. No one—least of all I, Andrew—is casting a doubt upon your wife's word. No one, I am sure, will ever dream of suggesting anything evil concerning her, but there are mysteries, you know, Andrew, and in a case like this there must be no mysteries. I have told you before quite frankly, and I tell you the same thing now again, that I think Félice—may I call her Félice?—knows a little more about that night than she has ever told any one yet, and just that little more of knowledge is needed to save a man's life."

"To save a man's life," Félice repeated nervously from the depths of her cushion. "It cannot be that."

"Have you a single shred of evidence," Andrew demanded, "which would render it even improbable that the bullet was not fired from the window?"

Sir Richard threw the stump of his cigar away.

"Yes," he answered.

Glenlitten towered over him—a fuming, angry man. His great muscles were swelling under the sleeves of his dinner coat; he had an almost insatiable desire to take this friend whom he had loved all his life by the shoulders and shake the breath out of him.

"What is it?" he demanded. "Out with it!"

Sir Richard shook his head unmoved.

"Andrew," he begged, "do calm yourself. You have common sense. You must know that I cannot do as you ask. Such evidence as I have will be produced when the time comes. It will be used only to save a man's life."

"Save a man's life, for God's sake!" Andrew cried, "but save it without dragging Félice's name into it."

"It was not I, but chance," Sir Richard pointed out, "which has placed Félice in her present unfortunate situation. All that I want to impress upon you both—both of you whom I regard as my dear friends—is that my duty must be done. Such questions as I have asked, I have asked in all kindness. I want you to remember and believe this—you especially Félice—the whole truth must be told."

He rose to his feet after a glance at the clock.

"You will excuse me," he begged. "I have had a stuffy day and I need exercise. I am going to the billiard room to knock the balls around for a few minutes."

He left the room, throwing from the threshold one more not unkindly glance toward Félice, whose beautiful, terrified eyes followed him up to the last moment. The door closed and they heard his footsteps crossing the polished oak floor. Félice, like a frightened child, stole into her husband's arms.

"I suppose, little sweetheart," he whispered, "there is nothing you want to tell me?"

"There is nothing—nothing—which can be told," she assured him passionately.

There was a moment's breathless silence.

MARIO, the manager of the Legation club, the best known and the most select of its kind, advanced to pay his respects to one of his most distinguished clients, Andrew and Félice, having enjoyed an excellent dinner, were seated in their corner listening to the dance music.

"It is surely an unusual pleasure to see your lordship in London during September," Mario ventured.

Andrew tapped his leg.

"Put my knee out climbing a fence the other day," he explained. "No walking for at least ten days. Thought we'd like a few days up in town now that the crowd has cleared out, and of course we had to come and look you up."

"It is most amiable," the manager murmured. "If people only understood what an attractive place London can be when the tourists have gone! But it is unfortunate about the leg. Milord is not able to dance?"

"Not for a fortnight."

Mario hesitated.

"Tonight for the first time," he announced, "I have ventured upon an experiment. I am copying the continental fashion. I have here two lady danseuses and two young men—très gentils, of good manners—as professional dancers. So, if milady would care to dance——"

Félice shook her head.

"I am becoming very old fashioned, Mario," she confessed, smiling up at him. "I like to dance only with my husband."

He held her hand under the table, but laughed at her.

"Félice, my dear," he expostulated, "don't be silly! You know how you love it, and Ambrose is saying divinely tonight. Trot out your best young man, Mario. Her ladyship will dance with him."

"With great pleasure," was the gratified reply. "It will help me very much because if people see her ladyship accepts the fashion, others will follow. I can assure you that the young man whom I will bring will give no offense, and he dances as well as can be desired. He is a Russian—penniless, alas, since the revolution."

"A compatriot," Glenlitten observed. "Her ladyship is half a Russian."

The man hurried off, and Félice looked up into her husband's face with a little grimace.

"Indeed," she murmured, "without you I do not care to dance, Andrew. You think always of my pleasure, but sometimes you do not realize that my pleasure is to be just with you."

"Another word," he whispered, "and I shall carry you off home, although it is only 11 o'clock. Here comes the young man—looks all right. By Jove, Félice, do you see who it is? It's the young Russian—it's the chap those fellows from the barracks brought over."

"A dancing professional!" she exclaimed, and for a moment there was something unrecognizable in her tone—a little quaver, half of fear, half of indignation.

"I admire the fellow's pluck anyway," Andrew observed.

Prince Charles, piloted by Mario, came to a standstill before the table. The usual greetings were exchanged, and the young man's perfectly natural manner prevented anything in the shape of awkwardness.

"You are surprised to see me here, yes?" he asked. "Well, like the rest of us I must earn some money, and to dance is almost my only accomplishment. I would explain," he added, turning to Andrew, "that when I accepted your hospitality the other night I was not then engaged here."

"Wouldn't have made an atom of difference," was the good natured reply. "Hope you'll look up at Curzon street some time."

The young man bowed gravely.

"Madame will dance?" he invited.

FELICE rose to her feet, after an almost imperceptible hesitation, and a moment later they glided off. The two men watched them as they threaded their way through the crowd.

"Madame dances amazingly," Mario ventured.

"She's jolly good," his distinguished patron agreed. "So is your brandy, by the way, blended, of course, but wonderful. That young protégé of yours was brought over to dine at my house in Hampshire one night a few weeks ago—staying with the officers at the barracks—Prince Charles of Suess, he called himself then."

"Without a doubt that is his name," the manager assented. "Mr. De Suess, he prefers to be called here. It goes better with his profession."

Meanwhile, the young man was not neglecting this heaven sent opportunity. Although his eyes remained respectfully aloof from his companion's, and his lips seemed scarcely to move, he was talking all the time.

"You should have let me know that you were coming to town," he said. "There is grave trouble at home."

"There is always trouble at home," she answered, a little coldly. "And, understand, if you please, Charles, that I see no reason why I should have let you know."

His face was set like a mask, but he waited until they had reached the further end of the room.

"You recognize no responsibilities?" he demanded.

"I am beginning to ask myself whether I need," she replied. "I have committed no sin in marrying. My husband is a very generous man, and I would rather tell him about, you all than continue this concealment. I am afraid mine is not a household that any one would be proud of, but at least Andrew would remember that they were my people, and I know that he would be kind. I do not understand why they all persist in remaining unknown to him."

"They are right," the young man declared.

"The time will come," she warned him calmly, "when I shall exercise my own judgment."

"Then, if you do," he rejoined, "you will regret it all your life. I can promise you that."

"What brought you to Glenlitten?" she asked abruptly.

"No wish to see my charming sister, I can assure you," he answered. "Those two men had been rather decent to me in town. They play bridge very badly, and they asked me down for a couple of nights. In any case my visit did no harm."

She shivered a little.

"I wish to dance no more," she said. "I am worried."

The music had stopped, but her partner stood in the middle of the floor, and clapped.

"We cannot finish like this," he told her, as the music started again. "When I tell them that you are in town they will all want to see you. They need help, and you must give them help."

"Am I not helping them all the time?" she asked wearily. "I have done no sin in marrying. I wish to be happy. Why may I not be happy? Why do you all close in around me with evil faces? Why do you forbid me to tell my husband of the existence of any one of you? I do not understand."

The dance had changed into a waltz. They swayed lightly around the lower part of the room, loitering with the music. The young man waited until they had reached the most remote corner.

"You are all sensitiveness and scruples, Félice," he complained. "The world is made for life, and for living. Why should you think of yourself only? Why should we others not live? Why should you not help us to live?"

"Do I not try?" she demanded.

"Try? But with what? It is to you the great good fortune has been given. Now, listen once more. You know where we live—number ten, Milden square. Between four and six in the afternoon is the time we are there and awake. Between four and six we shall await you, tomorrow, or the next day. . . . Your husband will pay me for the dance? There is no money in the house."

Her head scarcely reached his shoulder, but she glanced at him as a woman who looks at something crawling upon the ground.

"My husband will do all that is usual," she assured him.

As the music died away, they returned to their table. Andrew rose to his feet, and held her chair.

"Very much obliged to you," he said pleasantly to her later partner. "I am sure my wife enjoyed the dance very much."

He touched the other's hand lightly, leaving some notes in his palm. The young man bowed.

"It is a great pleasure to dance with madame," he said. "Perhaps again?"

"Not tonight," Félice decided. "Another time, perhaps. The room is a little crowded."

HE departed with a formal bow. Andrew filled his wife's glass with champagne.

"Dear," he said, "there is no one in the world who dances like you. . . . These professional lads and lassics aren't in it. There were two of them from the Adelphi dancing close to you most of the time. The woman dances a pas seul there, but you made them look clumsy. You looked—well, just like a fleck of foam on the top of a wave. I'm not much of a chap at comparisons, you know, but it was wonderful to sit here and watch you."

Her hand stole into his.

"Andrew," she whispered, "where did you learn in your dull Anglo-Saxon bringing up to say such sweet things, and to say them so often? It makes one so happy. I do not think that I dance well, but I love to be told. I do think sometimes that I must be quite nice to watch, but how wonderful to be told so by any one you care for. Do we stay much longer?"

There was a faint tremor in her question, a light almost of adoration in her glowing eyes. He struck the table with the palm of his hand.

"Waiter, the bill," he ordered.

Later they smoked a cigaret together in the little boudoir leading out of her bedroom.

"You do not regret those partridges so very much?" she asked wistfully.

"My dear," he assured her, "you have changed life for me completely. Shooting, hunting, fishing—they don't count. It is just being with you that makes me happy. You can take me round the world in a tourist steamer, or you can take me to New York and lodge me in a skyscraper hotel. I don't care. I have just mentioned those two things," he explained, leaning over and splashing a little more soda water into his glass, "because I have always looked upon them as being the worst that could happen to any one, but in plain words, wherever we are together, and you remain as sweet as you always are, that is the place for me."

She left her chair and sat upon his knee.

"I think," she told him, "I am glad that we came to London for a little time. I love Glenlitten. It is too wonderful a home that you have given me, dear Andrew, but just for a week—a little time, perhaps—it is so good to be away from that room. Husband!"

"Darling!"

"I am afraid of that long faced friend of yours. I am afraid of him. You will not let him hurt me? You will not let them come and ask questions which I cannot answer. I do not wish to keep on having to think of those few terrible moments—having them always recalled to me."

Tighter and tighter his arms clasped her.

"Sweetheart," he promised, "no one shall ever bully you, I promise you that."

"You trust me—altogether," she whispered. "You know my great, great secret?"

"I shall know it better if you tell it to me," he answered.

Then she whispered it—and soon afterwards fell asleep.

Long after he had carried her to bed and laid her between the cool, sweet sheets, he sat by himself, thinking. There must be some explanation of Richard Cotton's cynical and disconcerting theories. If only he could stumble upon it without distress to her, close the whole business up and yet do justice to the accused man. To him the thing seemed almost pathetically simple. A burglar climbed in through the window. That was a fact which no one denied. He was probably seen on the ladder by this fellow De Basset, who had naturally enough rushed in to warn Félice. The burglar had shot him, and gone off with the jewels. Now he was to be hanged. Why not? And then came Dick Cotton with his damned suspicions, his inquiries, his doubts; Cotton, who had dared to stir up the great fear in Félice's heart lest, owing to her brief period of unconsciousness, the man should die who had done no harm. But if the burglar was not the guilty man, who was? He sat and smoked and frowned. At last he arrived at a determination. Cotton was, after all, notwithstanding the difference in their years, one of his oldest friends. Why should there be this mystery between them? Why should the whole truth not be told now instead of later on? Tomorrow he would put this before him, and drag out whatever was at the back of his mind.

"I'M going to be a trifle brutal," the great lawyer declared after he had shaken hands with his unexpected visitor and waved him to a chair. "I've half a dozen people waiting, as you may have seen. Get on with it, Andrew; there's a good fellow."

"I'll match you," was the prompt reply. "I want to know what the hell you're worrying Félice about that night for?"

"I worrying—your wife?"

"Yes, you. She's not the girl she was, except by fits and starts. Until a week or so ago she was like a little sprite of happiness. She couldn't move without singing; her eyes and her feet danced all the time. Now she's completely changed. She's frightened. That night frightened her, and since then you've scared her half, to death. Now what's at the back of your mind? The whole business seems clear enough to every one else."

"Stop!" Sir Richard begged.

Andrew drew off his other glove and threw it into the hat by his side.

"I'll stop when I've finished," he persisted. "Let me get this off my chest, Dick. We're old friends, and what's the good of being old friends if we can't be honest with one another? As I say, here I have the sweetest and happiest little wife who ever drifted into a man's life. There was never a cloud upon her face, never anything but a smile upon her lips. Then comes that night. What happens? A burglary. Well, why not? The Glenlitten jewels are worth having a shot at if the man's clever enough. This one apparently was. Then De Besset chances most unfortunately to be looking out of his window and sees the fellow on his way up the ladder."

"Stop!" Sir Richard insisted. "There is not a shred of evidence to prove that De Besset did anything of the sort."

"But what evidence is necessary?" Andrew demanded. "Why else should he have been in Félice's room?"

The lawyer made no reply. There was a brief silence, the significance of which Andrew, fortunately for the preservation of his self-control, failed to grasp.

"Naturally, as soon as he's seen the fellow," he continued, "he dashes in to warn Félice and protect her if necessary—clang the bell, or anything. He did just what I should have done. He arrives there just as the burglar gets his knee over the window sill and is on the point of clutching the jewels. He goes for him, poor devil, gets it through the heart and away goes the burglar. Félice has just strength enough to cry out, and the thing's over. Well, now they have caught the burglar and a damned good job, too. But what on earth are you worrying Félice about? Why do you come and talk all this terrible tosh to her about a man's life, and her evidence, and where the flash came from? How could that poor child tell where the flash came from in her panic stricken state? And what the hell does it matter, anyway? It's your job as a lawyer, of course, to get the burglar off if you can, but for God's sake get him off some other way than by frightening Félice to death. He shot De Besset, all right. As for any one else being in the room—between you and me, Richard, that's tosh. There couldn't have been any one else there. Félice must have discovered them before she turned the light out. The thing is utter rot to start with, and yet you go on bullying the poor child until she doesn't know where she is. . . . No, don't stop me! Let me go to the bottom of it, Dick. I respect your profession, all right. You're hired to get a man off if you can, and you often do it damned cleverly, but in this case the man's got to get what he deserves, whoever defends him. What right have you to come and, for the sake of stirring up a cloud of mystery, frighten Félice so that she'll go into the witness box, if ever you drag her there, in such a state of mind that she won't know what she's saying? She saw nothing except the flash. She heard a shot. She saw a man fall dead, and that man her friend. My God, that's shock enough for any woman! You can't make any more out of it. You can't change it. Why drive her distracted by pretending that if she tells her story differently she may save a man's life? Your profession's all right, Dick, you have to do your best in it, but there are limits. I tell you frankly I'm not going to have Félice driven half crazy for you to try to win one more case and save a man from the gallows who ought to hang. Take that from me, Dick."

Andrew paused after probably the longest speech he had ever made in his life. Sir Richard, after his one interruption, had listened with unchanged face. He hesitated for a moment before replying.

"Andrew," he said, gravely, "you have spoken exactly as Andrew, Marquis of Glenlitten, husband of a very adorable wife, would be likely to speak. I have listened to you, haven't I, without interruption? I have heard every word you have said. I sympathise with you more than I shall ever be able to tell you. And, listen—I shall go so far as this. If I were able to accept the situation as you have outlined it, I would abjure all the craft I have acquired, I would seek to make no capital by any effort at a sensational denouement to the trial of this man. I would withdraw from the case, and I would say: 'Here is a criminal. Rather than that I should hurt the wife of a dear friend by torturing her, in the witness box or elsewhere, let him hang. He is guilty—let him hang.' But you see against that I have reason to believe there is something else."

"What?" Andrew demanded.

The lawyer looked across the table. The words were precise and the light in his eyes was clear and truthful.

"I do most firmly and honestly believe," he said, "not as a lawyer but as a man, that it was not the burglar who shot De Besset."

There was a brief, tense silence. Some one in the adjoining waiting room coughed, a taxi drew up at the outside entrance, there was the sound of swing doors, another of the waiting clients rustled his newspaper. The background of these trifling sounds seemed to make the breathless silence which reigned in the room where the two men sat all the more impressive. Andrew was once again, and more forcibly than ever, oppressed with the idea of sinister possibilities. He stared into his friend's face, into the narrow, clear eyes, tried with all the force of which he was capable to learn what lay behind that wrinkled forehead, to gather some idea of what was passing in the mind of the man.

"If it was not the burglar who shot De Besset, who do you suppose it was?" he demanded. "You do not for a moment dare to suggest—that it might have been Félice?"

Sir Richard shook his head firmly.

"That is one evil thought, Andrew," he said, "which you can expel from your mind at once. I am sure that it was not Félice. Your wife could never be guilty of a crime of that sort."

"A crime of that sort?" Andrew repeated harshly. "What the devil do you mean?"

"It was crudely put," the other confessed. "I have the greatest admiration and respect for your wife, Andrew. I have almost envied you your happiness. Félice is so sweet, so wonderful, so delightful in her simplicity, in her unspoilt childishness—but you see how my life has been spent."

He waved his hand in a little gesture towards the dusty, volume lined walls, the great rows of tin boxes.

"I live in a world of facts—grim facts. I live for facts. They rule my life. They guide my brain. And now, to close our interview, I come to this, Andrew. I believe, and I have already some evidence of the fact, that De Besset was shot by a third man who has not yet appeared in the case."

ANDREW glared at him across the desk.

"A third man!" he muttered. "A man who must have been concealed in my wife's bedroom! God, man, I wonder I don't take you by the throat!"

"I wonder you don't, knowing you as I do," the lawyer replied, solemnly. "Yet I have to tell you of my conviction, Andrew, and, believing that, can you blame me if I try to save this fellow's life, to seek the truth at any cost?"

Andrew rose unsteadily to his feet. He made no attempt to shake hands with his friend. He clutched at the side of the table.

"One more question," he persisted. "Do you believe that Félice knew or guessed that there was another man in the room?"

"I'm afraid I do," was the grave reply. "Remember, Andrew, she may have some perfectly good explanation, and when the time comes she will probably tell us everything. You see," he went on, earnestly, "the law is like a great machine. I don't pretend that I have any sentimental sympathy with this fellow in jail. He probably doesn't deserve it. He's one of the criminal classes, and the criminal classes are better got out of the way whenever you can lay hold of them, but to the legal mind, Andrew—and, you see, that's my life—I can't get away from it—we've got to follow where the light leads. "I'll go even so far as this," he added, rising to his feet and walking slowly towards the door with his hand on the other man's shoulder, "it isn't so much that wretched fellow's life I want to save. I've got to follow the light that leads to the truth. It's our job, Andrew. When you were a soldier your job was to obey orders and fight your way through. Well, my peace time job is something like that—to follow the light where it leads."

Andrew made no response. His mouth was set, his carriage perfectly steady, but he was oppressed with the queer sensation of having passed into another world, full of unreal people and unreal possibilities. The door was opened, the buzz of voices commenced outside, the next client rose expectantly, and Glenlitten, without any word of farewell, passed through the musty offices across the crowded pavement to his waiting car. He felt like a man in whom speech has been stifled. On the way from the city westward he sat with grimly folded arms looking out of the window with the eyes of a blind man.

IT was certainly a strange disposition of chance that Andrew on his homeward way, after leaving his gunsmith and walking a short distance to rejoin his car, should have seen upon the door of a block of offices the brass plated announcement:

"Mr. Felix Main,
Private Detective."

He studied the information for several seconds and finally acted upon an uncontrollable impulse. He entered the hospitably open portals, mounted the

The HONEYMOON THIEF

BY DOUGLAS NEWTON

Vincent Farrant had Not Flinched from Red Peril in China, but When It Came to Separating a Man and Wife on Their Wedding Trip, Even His Courageous Soul Felt Qualms of Anxiety...

She sank at the foot of a tree.

"YOU recognize him, too?"

"No—her."

"Ah! Who is she? She seems almost a lady."

"Almost—my dear chap! Don't you know her?"

"Not from Eve. Is she a crook?"

"A crook! Hang it all, Drostan, has police work turned your brain? That's Lois Norbert."

"Are you joking, Farrant—Mathias Norbert's daughter? Norbert the millionaire's daughter?"

"Of course. But where's the joke in Lois Norbert talking to a friend in the street?"

"No joke, maybe, unless it's a grim one. Is that a mere casual encounter do you think?"

Vincent Farrant studied the couple standing at a nearby corner. They made a delightful pair—the man perfectly turned out, handsome, and of marked charm; the girl delicious, pliant, eager, her face a glowing petal of loveliness. Possibly there was a touch of waywardness about her vivid personality, yet it was the generous willfulness of zestful youth, no more. Farrant sighed, what would he not have given to have Lois Norbert look at him as she looked at the handsome stranger, and said: "No—she's in love with him."

"Sort of love," the heavy face of the detective was frowning. "She's been carried off her feet for the moment. With his looks and his tricks her sort of girl, the sort that thinks no evil, hasn't a chance."

"His tricks," Farrant's fine mouth became hard. "Who is he?"

"He is Walter Preach, alias Rob Browning, alias Evan Walsh, one of the sleekest and wickedest rogues on records."

"A criminal and a friend of the Norberts—are you sure?"

"Absolutely! I want to pull him in myself for a few jobs, but he's darn clever in covering himself."

"But a man of that stamp couldn't possibly become intimate with a girl like Lois Norbert."

"It's his line," growled Drostan. "He moves in the best circles. He has charm, breeding, and apparently the best credentials. It's his game to prey where the money is thickest, and he's ready to turn any trick, straight robbery, the confidence game, blackmail. He's as slick as oil and as polished as you see, while his way with women amounts to a black genius—until they've served his end."

"And then?" Farrant's tone was grim.

"Then he reverts to the brute."

"The unspeakable beast," Farrant's voice was very quiet and very dangerous. "She should be warned at once."

"I wouldn't lose a minute if I were you," smiled Drostan who had not missed his friend's particular interest in the girl. "Since she is Mathias Norbert's daughter, Preach is up to some big villainy, that's certain. Why don't you tell her?"

"Tell her? I don't know her—only by sight."

VINCENT FARRANT was thoroughly embarrassed. His glance to the corner actually turned to relief when he saw the pair had gone.

"Go to her father then," Drostan's eyes twinkled at the young man's panic. "Don't be scared, my friend, your reputation isn't confined to Asia, you know."

"O—dry up, Drostan," said Farrant, and got very red. He heartily wished his reputation had been confined to Asia. The press had been making an awful fuss about him and a journey he had made through a district thick with hostile Chinese, and people spoke of the cool daring and resource he had shown when all he had done was to carry out a soldier's job in a soldierly way.

"I can't do it, anyhow," he went on. "I happen to know old Norbert's abroad. He's been away for months and doesn't return for a couple of days yet."

Again Drostan's eyes twinkled at his friend's intimate knowledge of Lois Norbert's affairs.

"Make it the hour of his return then," he said smiling.

"But I've already told you I'm off to Belgrade tonight," cried Farrant. "You'll have to see to it, Drostan—must if he is the cur you say he is."

"He is," said the detective gravely. "He is one of those coldly cruel devils who can be really dangerous. I don't think there is much he would stop at to serve his own ends."

"And that child is in his toils," gasped Farrant. "You'll lose no time over this, Drostan?"

"Is it likely? He's after old Norbert's cash and it's our job to stop that sort of thing. I'll put the Yard onto him when I get back from Southampton tomorrow."

Though Vincent Farrant thought much about Lois Norbert on his journey from Harwich and through Holland to Cologne, he did not bother about the threat to her. Drostan would squash that. At Cologne, however, he thought of nothing but the threat, thought of it with an emphatic horror.

For Lois Norbert was on Cologne platform—Lois and the crook, Walter Preach. The pair were together and alone. Farrant could scarcely believe his eyes. He had opened the window of his compartment to look at the immense, thronged station and saw them coming towards him. Preach led the way, snarling at a porter who carried two heavy suitcases. Lois was a little behind, slim, wholesome, gallant; yet already looking at her companion in a way different from yesterday; that is, with puzzlement, incredulity almost, a shrinking in her eyes.

Then, even as Farrant stared amazed, Preach let himself go again and the girl's left hand went up in instinctive protest—and a plain gold band gleamed on it! With a positive shock of nausea Farrant understood. They were married! They were a honeymoon couple! They were eloping!

IT was horrible, but he could not doubt it. He was sure Lois had not been married yesterday. His heart had made him look at her left hand as Drostan called his attention to them. There had not been a ring on it then, not even an engagement ring. He checked as he saw a flaw in that. It had been after 3 o'clock when he saw them yesterday, too late for a marriage that day, and since they were here, in Cologne, no later than 12:03, as the railway time table had it, they could not have been married this morning. Had they been secretly married some time?

Almost at once that fear was put at rest. As they entered a compartment near his own in the corridor, Lois protested against her husband's manner, and Preach, not yet entirely reverted to the brute, cried: "Sorry, darling, airplanes always upset me, and, anyhow, a man never is quite himself on his wedding day, is he?"

That seemed to Farrant almost a message of comfort. He guessed what had happened. Because Mathias Norbert's return was so imminent the crook had managed to persuade Lois to marry him posthaste at a registery office and then to leave England at once by airplane for Cologne. Preach knew all the moves of the getaway game. He had timed things so that he could catch the train to the Balkans—the Balkans afforded such good hiding places for criminals.

A vile business, but some relief in it for Farrant. Lois was still only wife in name to that blackguard—she might be saved yet.

The train was under way again before that hope was dimmed. How could one save her? He could not possibly go to her and say frankly: "Your husband, Walter Preach, alias Rob Browning, is a notorious crook." She'd think him mad. Certainly she would not even begin to believe it since she had only just married the fellow and must be under his evil enchantment.

Even with hard and fast proof . . . Proof! He'd wire to Drostan first stop, of course, but even Drostan, who wanted to arrest the fellow, confessed he lacked proof. Farrant began to sweat . . . what a position! Even with the urgency of saving the girl spurring him, Drostan must take time in collecting evidence. . . .

Time! Farrant writhed—there was no time to spare. He must save Lois at once, get her away from the brute, somehow. But how could he get a girl away from her husband? How? He gave a groan of despair. He almost wished he was facing risks in China again. Even dodging several million Asiatic killers was child's play beside the need of tactfully separating a honeymoon wife from a honeymoon husband!

HE managed to sit back with them at lunch in the dining car, and he listened unashamed. Lois, shoken by Preach's new manner and by her runaway marriage, felt impelled to talk about the latter. Farrant learned that the hostility of the aunt, with whom she lived, for Preach had been the cause of the elopement—or so Lois, quite in the dark about Preach, thought. Lois wondered if her aunt had got the telegram they had sent, and if she were very angry.

"She's such a Victorian old darling," she said. "She's got nothing against you, Edward, save that you fell in love with me. In fact, she was more smitten with you than I when we met at the Decours. If you had kept her charmed instead of concentrating on me it would have been all right."

Walter Preach, then, had changed his name to Edward something and they had met at Lord Decour's place. Drostan had been right—the beast had the highest credentials. Also, here was a hint of his devilish charm—what chance had any trusting girl against such a fellow who obviously won her first as a means to steal from Mathias Norbert, and then as a sure means to security and wealth through blackmail in the future?

Preach had little to say. He buried himself in a railway time table, probably to evade public attention. Farrant thought him a boor as well as a skunk, but was not sorry. He obtained his first contact with Lois that way. Preach let the girl tackle a waiter about something alone. Her schoolgirl German was quite hopeless. Farrant did not miss his chance. Like a flash he had intervened and had things smoothed out before Preach could speak.

He was rather startled when she looked at him and said: "Thank you, Maj. Farrant!" Startled that she should know him, but pleased about it later. Following them shamelessly as they made their way back to their compartment, he heard Preach growl: "Who's that chap? You know him?"

"By sight only," said Lois stiffly. "He's the Major Farrant."

"And what's the 'the' for?" he sneered.

"Major Farrant of China. Don't you remember his wonderful journey through the 'Red' army to save the white colony of Shoo-ping?"

Preach swore so frankly that Farrant's hand itched to get at him. Lois herself cried out in outrage.

"Never mind how I swore!" Preach snarled. "Do you know this chap?"

"I've told you—no," she said frigidly.

"Does he know you—even by sight?"

"I should think not. Does it matter?"

"I'm not having any bucko soldier meddling in my affairs," Preach rasped.

"That, I should say, would be the last thing a man of Major Farrant's character would do," Lois said. "What is the matter with you, Edward. You seem changed. We've nothing at all to be ashamed of. The whole world may know . . ."

"That'll do," he snapped. "You keep clear of the fellow, that's all, and that's an order."

It wasn't in Lois Norbert to stand that sort of thing. Her pretty, plucky little head went up.

She said evenly, "You're not going to talk to me like that, Edward. Not even nerves can excuse such extraordinary behavior . . ."

They entered their compartment then and Farrant his. It was just as well. If he'd listened to another word from the cad he would have manhandled him. Truly Preach had reverted to the brute with a vengeance, now his victim was trapped and his swag safe—as of course it was, in one of the suitcases.

Farrant was boiling with rage, yet the good wits that had carried him safely through perils in China warned him that impetuosity might spoil everything. He must bide his hour, content with the knowledge that two things worked in his favor. One, that Preach himself was shattering the girl's illusions and turning her against her husband; the other, that Lois knew him, knew he was there to help if necessary. For the first time in his life the young man was glad of his fame: it had enabled Lois to recognize him; it told her what manner of man he was.

"You little wildcat!" Preach snarled.

At the next stop Farrant went straight across the platform to the telegraph office and sent a wire to Drostan. To his surprise Preach came into the office, too, and it was only by acting quickly that he prevented the crook seeing him. Lois was leaning out of her window when he reached the train again, trying to make herself understood to a boy selling postcards.

From the haste and anxiety in her manner Farrant felt sure that a germ of distrust had come to her and she had begun to doubt whether her husband had wired to her aunt as she had assumed. Farrant helped her to buy cards and stamps and the eagerness with which she accepted his offer to post the messages confirmed his sense of her growing suspicion.

He did not post the cards. Preach came up as the girl handed them to him. The crook scowled and almost snatched the cards away, saying he would post them—and of course he did nothing of the sort. He managed to delay until the train had started again and at the next stop saw to it that the cards never went into the mail.

Farrant knew this because he watched the man. Preach went along the platform until he was out of Lois' sight and then tossed a handful of scraps onto the line. Farrant rescued them, and, of course, found them to be the girl's cards torn into four. Preach did not want Lois' people to know where she was.

With his rage deepened Farrant put the scraps into his coat pocket and continued to shadow the crook. Again the fellow went into the telegraph office and this time a telegram, which had been sent to await him, was handed across. From the look of unholy pleasure on the brute's face as he read it Farrant knew that something satisfactory to himself, and therefore dangerous to Lois, was in that wire.

Proof of this came no later than the next halt, at a small town called Sammergalz. Preach met a man there, a confederate and a crook as brutal as himself, if the fellow's face stood for anything. No doubt the telegram had arranged that meeting, for both men lost no time in getting to business. Indeed, the stranger at once drew Preach to a railway map on a wall and began pointing out stations. That was far too crude for a craftsman like Preach, who cursed the fellow and looked sharply round to see if they were watched. Satisfied they were not—Farrant had learned, in a deadly school, how not to be seen—both men walked to the far end of the platform and down the steps of an exit there. In the empty passage beneath the railway lines they found another map which they consulted and discussed.

Farrant not only managed to see without being seen, but his wits told him what they were planning. The newcomer, with a better knowledge of the country, was instructing Preach how to hide his trail. Instead of going straight through to the Balkans, Preach was going to leave the train at one of the next stations and dodge and double across country until all traces of his movements were lost.

And he would take Lois with him! He would carry Lois into an oblivion where the law would not find her, where there would be no hope of saving her!

With a tightening of his jaw Farrant knew he faced a crisis. It was touch and go now whether he saved Lois or not.

Luckily China had accustomed him to touch and go. He saw by the way Preach consulted his watch that this devil's conference would go on until the last possible second. On that knowledge Farrant acted. His cool glance had already noted the possibilities of this exit stair. It had been constructed with Teutonic thoroughness. Not only were the steps fenced off from the platform, but a stout wire net roofed them in. Once the gate was shut there would be no getting onto the platform by anybody on the wrong side of that gate . . . and the gate locked itself with a spring lock!

FARRANT smiled quietly, walked up the steps, shut the gate softly, made sure it could not be opened, and went back to the train. From his window he was able to see that Preach had over-reached himself in caution. Frantically though the crooks tried to gain attention, they were too far away to be noticed. The train pulled out without Preach!

Farrant sat down smiling—Lois had not seen and he had won the first move. All the same, the next was going to be a delicate business—very delicate. He had separated husband and wife, but it was not going to be so easy to keep a honeymoon couple apart—until Drostan acted.

Thank goodness, Lois was of the calm, non-hysterical type. She was anxious but she kept herself splendidly in hand when she came into his compartment fifteen minutes later to tell him that her husband had been "accidentally" left behind at Sammergalz, and to crave the help of the only Englishman she knew in a strange land. He adored her courage.

"How ghastly for you," he cried, feigning innocence. "I will do all I can, of course, Miss Norbert."

"Mrs. Harter," she said with a blush. Preach was endless in his aliases, it seemed. "I didn't know you knew me, Maj. Farrant."

"Know you, by Jove, I've always . . ." He reddened, this was a trifle too fervent for brides, "That is, I've seen you at quite a number of places."

"Yes . . . how queer . . . I, too," she also reddened and Farrant bridged the embarrassing moment by saying, "Makes us sort of friends, doesn't it? . . . And don't worry. There's sure to be a message from your husband at the next station—Mettfels."

He was sure of that, and it was his worry. How was he going to get the better of that message? And how the deuce was he going to whisk another man's newly wedded wife out of his reach? Again he almost sighed for China and its killers.

The message was at Mettfels all right. When the train stopped over two hours later, an official came along the train asking for Frau Harter.

"That means you," said Farrant, his heart in his mouth, but actually it meant nothing to Lois for the message was in German. It was to the effect that Preach had telephoned from Sammergalz, to bid his wife alight and await his coming at Mettfels, where he hoped to rejoin her in about three hours' time.

Farrant, turning that message over in his mind, said briskly: "Quick, we have to get out here." He said no more and the bustle of getting their traps and Preach's out of the train and of his persuading Lois that breaking his journey here meant nothing to him covered up the fact that he had not given her husband's actual message. Really he withheld it because he wanted time to think.

The matter was delicate. Not on his life was he going to allow Lois to rejoin that scoundrel again or even wait at Mettfels for him, yet how was he going to spirit her away in the face of officials who knew of her husband and his message and regarded it as a matter of honor that they should take care of the strayed wife?

However, by the time their traps were on the platform and the train drawing out, he had found a way. He said coolly to Lois, "Now to find a car," and as she looked bewildered, "O, sorry, I'm an ass, I forgot you don't understand German . . . Your husbands wants you to take a car and go back to him at Sammergalz."

Lois looked hurt, startled, yet, thanks to Preach's new unchivalrous manner, not actually incredulous. Farrant to clinch the matter tried a shot in the dark, "It seems he met a friend there. . . ."

The shot scored.

"Yes, I saw that from the train window," she said, and he knew she was resenting the fact that she had been kept in the dark about that friend then, as much as she resented her husband's—apparent—lack of consideration for her now. Yet she hid her hurt, smiled pluckily, cried, "Will you help me get that car, Maj. Farrant? I'm helpless in this language. . . . Thank you, you're splendidly good."

Farrant doubted whether he was but he had scored his point. Now he proceeded to score the next—the act of abducting another man's wife under the very noses of virtuous officials. Blandly he told these in excellent German, that, since the lady had so long to wait and since it was already evening, she had decided that she and her husband should break their journey and stay at a hotel in Mettfels that night.

Not only were the amiable officials absolutely misled, but they suggested hotels and even fetched a car without a qualm. Farrant himself had plenty of qualm. He had definitely burnt his boats. He had cast himself adrift in Germany with another man's bride; more, he was abducting that bride against her knowledge and will. That it was for her own good did not make its dangers any less; nor did Lois' quite adorable gratitude for what she took to be his chivalry in acting as her escort on that long ride make it easier.

However, he gritted his teeth and told himself "I'm in for it. I've got to go on abducting now until Drostan acts—or the heavens fall."

Smiling a little damply at Lois he leaned forward and told the chauffeur not to look for an hotel, as ordered, but to drive straight to Sammergalz. As the man opened his mouth in surprise Farrant quickly shut it and won obedience by the promise of a hundred marks above the fare. If he was not quite at ease when he sat back he was also not unstimulated by the thought that, though they were rushing towards Sammergalz at a good pace, Preach on his train must be rushing away from it even faster.

IT was a long journey and a silent one. Lois was not one to discuss what must seem her husband's extraordinary behavior, but Farrant had not a doubt she brooded on it, linking it up with Preach's new, ugly manner towards her. Farrant, sorry that one so young and lovely should be hurt, was glad that her illusions about the crook were crumbling. It was for her own good—and incidentally his. He wanted her angry and ready to believe any ill of Preach to score his next point in his plan.

He concocted that plan, with the aid of a map, as they rushed through the evening into the dusk of night.

Her mood was all in his favor when they arrived at Sammergalz. The eager, anxious look on her face was dashed to something like bitterness when, naturally, there was no Preach waiting on the steps of the station. She could not believe it of him—yet. She sprang from the car and ran into the station in an almost frantic hope of finding the man somewhere in the building. And, since Farrant had to let the discourtesy of Preach sink home, he had to risk her finding out something. He remained outside seeing to the unloading of the baggage and dismissing the motor—it was part of his plot to get rid of that chauffeur, anyhow.

Luck was with him. His gamble succeeded. She came out presently white faced and desperate of eyes.

"He's not here, Major Farrant," she cried in a shaking voice. "I've looked everywhere and he's not here—and I can't get information, make anybody understand. . . ."

Farrant showed himself properly aghast and incredulous. He made her sit in a waiting room while he went in search of the stationmaster with the air of a man who only had to tackle the thing to clear it up absolutely. Fortunately it was not easy to find the official at that hour (it was thus Lois had missed him), but when found there was no dubiety about the man. He knew all about Preach. Preach had, naturally, gone on to Mettfels; must, in fact, be almost there by now. More to the point, once there he would not be able to get back that night—not by train, anyhow.

Farrant felt a little glow of satisfaction at good work well done, felt it more than ever when he found that Preach had, judiciously, said nothing about his wife. He had been more concerned about his suitcase, it seemed, and Farrant didn't doubt it since it must contain all he had stolen from Mathias Norbert. But his not speaking of Lois made it easier for Farrant, he could get her away without trouble through the officials.

LEAVING the stationmaster and composing his face to a mask of troubled bewilderment Farrant went back to Lois.

"I say," he blurted, "there's something rather odd in this. Your husband isn't here . . . not waiting for you, I mean. They've got a yarn about his going off with a friend and leaving a message. . . . I can't understand . . ."

He saw by the tightening of her pretty mouth that she had reached a point when she could believe almost anything about Preach. She asked huskily: "What is his message, Major Farrant?"

"It appears that this friend has carried him off to a place called Hinauf, some ten miles from here, and he—er—expects you to go out to him at the inn there."

Lois' hands clenched and she swayed a little. He wondered if he would pull it off. He said, "I wanted to 'phone your husband, but Hinauf is in the Wald, the Forest, you know, and there's no line. I think there must be some mistake. . . ."

"No," she said wearily, "I don't think there is, Major Farrant. I'm afraid that's the sort of thing my husband does." She rose. "Will you do me one more kindness—get me a car to go to Hinauf."

Farrant, for all his pity of her, gave a little gasp of relief. He'd won. He had a small battle to persuade her to allow him to escort her, but he won that, too. She was so shaken, so helpless in the face of a strange language and people that she readily gave in. His plan had succeeded.

He had to go with her, of course. He had no intention of letting her get to Hinauf; she'd smell a rat when she found Preach was not there, either. Also, he had to be with her because he had no doubt at all that Preach would move heaven and earth to find her, if not for her own sake, then certainly for the loot in his suitcase. Because of these things he intended that Lois and himself should be thoroughly lost in the Wald that night, as a first step to Preach's losing their trail for good.

Farrant left Lois limp and tired in the waiting room while he sought out just the kind of motor car driver who would agree to "lose" them for a consideration. The type was not easy to find. In the end he had to be content with a shifty rascal who leered unpleasantly when he heard Farrant's plot and demanded and got hard cash in advance. Farrant loathed the fellow, but it was the best he could do at short notice.

Farrant was right—the fellow was crooked. He winked so significantly as Farrant helped Lois into his dirty car and leered back so often on the trip that Farrant wanted to murder him. Fortunately Lois was so worn out with anxieties that the eternal and monotonous flicker of tree trunks passing them after they had got into the forest sent her to sleep. A good thing, she would never guess how far they had strayed from the Hinauf road.

The crafty brute at the wheel kept to his bargain; he even overdid things with the aim of getting extra benefits for himself. After they had traveled for hours and seemed so deep in the heart of the silent forest that they might be a million miles from anywhere, the car suddenly stopped and Farrant found himself looking into an ugly face that leered significantly from him to the sleeping Lois.

"We're very prettily lost, mein Herr," the driver grinned. "Ten kilometers from the nearest house and in the heart of a little visited forest. More lost than you bargained for, maybe."

"Why are you stopping?" snapped Farrant. "Get on."

The steel in Farrant's voice startled and checked the man, yet greed dominated him. He snarled: "I thought, maybe, you might think it worth your while to be a little less lost. . . . Not nice for the lady to camp out all night in this forest, eh?"

"You've had your money," said Farrant grimly. "Get on."

"A thousand more marks, please," snarled the man. "The police, no doubt, want you and that chit. . . ."

Farrant said nothing, but the way he came out of the car the ruffian jumped to cover on the far side of his engine. He was a bigger man than Farrant, but there was something in the soldier's very movements that commanded, and made him shout angrily: "It is no good your threatening . . . I cannot go on in any case. My engine has broken down. . . ."

Farrant stopped dead. He might pound the man into respecting him, but he could not pound the engine into action. And as he hesitated, Lois' voice came from the car: "What is it? What is the matter?"

"This fool," said Farrant, glad to show a genuine rage, "says we're lost and that his engine has gone wrong."

That was the last straw of that terrible day for Lois. She gave a wail of misery and began to cry. Farrant could not blame her, only it did give the rascal driver his chance.

"Isn't it a pity the pretty one has to suffer thus?" the brute taunted. "Five hundred marks and maybe I make my engine good, eh?"

That, in turn, was Farrant's last straw. He lunged across the engine, caught the beast by the collar, jammed him good and hard, went round the engine and jammed him better and harder. The man tried to hit, too, and gouge and kick, but only after three knockdown blows was he convinced that the young man was his superior in the art. So he decided it would be less painful to play a placid role. He

THE HONEYMOON THIEF By DOUGLAS NEWTON

And all might have been well had not Farrant found a purely human elation in the concern and respect this adorable girl showed him at his having beaten a man larger than himself.

She ran to him crying: "Are you hurt . . . how splendid of you." It was really splendid hearing Lois say he was. Instinctively his arm went about her as he told her he was not hurt, that he had knocked a little decency into the blackguard, and that all would be well.

It was natural of him, but careless. It gave the vicious driver his moment. He nipped into his seat and the next they heard of him was the roar of his engine getting off at top speed, plus his insulting shout that he was going straight to the police to report them as suspicious characters. . . .

THEY were very thoroughly lost. They seemed to be in the very middle of a most dense and intricate forest, while there seemed no doubt the driver had been right in saying that the nearest house was ten kilometers away. Lois was too worn out to move, so they had to stay where they were without even the means of making a scratch camp; the car had gone off with everything—overcoats as well as suitcases. Farrant winced at the thought of the suitcases. If that brute went to the police, as he probably would, to forestall any charge they might lay against him, the police would certainly examine those suitcases, find the loot, and come out and arrest him, Vincent Farrant, as Walter Preach!

It was a futile ironic ending to their adventure and to his clever plans.

Lois collapsed under it. With a semi-hysterical, "And this is my honeymoon!" she sank at the foot of a tree, presently to cry herself into the sleep of utter exhaustion.

Farrant, longing to take her in his arms, contented himself by stripping off his coat and putting it over her. He himself spent the whole night walking up and down on guard. It was a way of keeping warm, too.

It was an abominable night without a grain of comfort in it. Even the thought that he had saved Lois so far and given Drostan a full day to act did little to mend things. When dawn came he felt miserable, helpless, hungry and dirty, and so utterly unable to face Lois in that condition that he called to her, when he saw her stirring, that he had heard running water somewhere and was going to look for it.

Somewhat keyed up by that water's stinging coldness he came back to the girl. He found her in a curious mood, reserved and inclined to stare at him with odd, assessing glances. When she returned from the stream she was more thoughtful still and he became so uneasy that he was actually forced to say briskly, "That fellow said the nearest house, that is breakfast, was ten miles off. I suppose we'd better be making for it . . ."

She did not answer that; just looked him steadily in the eyes and said quietly: "Don't you think you'd better explain first, Major Farrant?"

He stared startled, taken aback, made some lame remark. Perhaps the corners of her lips quivered, but she said gravely and firmly enough, "I mean, explain why you have—abducted me!"

"Good God!" he gasped.

"You're going to deny it, Major Farrant," she said, "but it won't do. I've been thinking—seeing things. Must I explain? Well, I've remembered that though I saw my husband meet an unpleasant looking man at Sammergals I also saw you shadowing them. I didn't pay much attention then, but now I see it links up with the other things. . . ."

"What other things?" asked the young man feebly.

"Everything! My husband's being left behind, the strange way we have missed him at every turn." Farrant made a gesture. "No, it won't do, Major Farrant. Whatever else he is, my husband is extraordinarily fussy about missing trains. Also, he was even more anxious not to let me get in contact with—you!"

"Me!" Farrant gulped. "I say . . . do you mean . . . are you thinking that I had some beastly motive . . ."

"No, Major Farrant," she actually smiled at his horror, a little tremulous smile. "I know what sort of man you are, I know what you have done. The soldier who risked so much to save those people in China doesn't do unworthy things. That's why I'm puzzled and ask—what's behind it?"

Farrant pulled his wits together, tried to laugh her down and prove that there was nothing behind it but a series of unfortunate accidents. Her smile grew a little more tremulous, she said with a catch in her voice, "Maj. Farrant, is it because you are too great a gentleman to hurt a girl, perhaps a silly girl, that you won't tell?"

He was numb under that home thrust; she saw it. Her mouth quivered. Then, "Are these part of the reason why you won't tell?"

Her open hand was under Farrant's eyes. He saw it was full of scraps—scraps of the postcards Preach had torn up and tossed away. He was dumb. She went on:

"You covered me with your coat last night, Maj. Farrant. These fell from the pocket as I slept—and you kept guard. I could not help seeing them when I woke. I gave these cards to my husband to post so that those at home could know where I was and what I had done. . . . I wasn't ashamed of what I had done. . . . But . . . my husband doesn't want the world to know . . . my husband is—is not what I think. . . . Is that it?"

She read the answer in his face, yet not for the life of him could he hurt her by telling her all the truth. And he could see that she was determined to have it and that the situation was going to become intolerable.

And then, just as he wondered how on earth he was going to deal with it—Preach saved him. Preach arrived and made it plain by his actions what he really was.

PREACH must have been hunting for them all night, not perhaps because of Lois so much as for the loot in his suitcase. They learned later that he had met their rascal driver hurrying back to Sammergals and so had picked up their trail. Now he rushed on the scene in a big car that his evil-faced friend drove.

At the mere sight of him Lois' first impulse was to run. She saw what he was. All the veneer was gone from Preach now and the ugly ruffian was in command. He checked the girl's movement with a flourish of the revolver he carried and by his shout, "Stay where you are, you little hussy, unless you want me to put a bullet through your fancy hair before dealing with you!"

Farrant got a thrill when Lois stood still—for him. But he was anxious, too. Preach was obviously in his most dangerous mood and Farrant remembered he stopped at nothing. He put up his own hands and advanced on the brute.

"Keep your foul mouth shut," he said in a low, fierce voice. "She may still have some regard for you, and you've hurt her enough."

"Do I care?" snarled the man. "She's my wife now and she's got to put up with what's coming to her—and that'll be medicine. She's helped you to fool me. . . ."

Then Farrant had him. . . . Farrant had played the man's rage just to get close . . . he lunged and grabbed, the pistol spoke once and both went down. They rolled over fighting, thrashing the undergrowth in their fury. Preach was a hefty brute, but Farrant was steel. He suffered, but he mastered his man. A twist and Preach dropped the revolver, an armlock and the crook was at his last gasp. . . . Farrant would have beaten him if they had been alone. . . .

He became conscious of Lois moving to his aid. She had a stout branch of a tree in her hand. She was ready to use that on Preach . . . then suddenly she was torn away. Strong arms seized her, wrested the branch out of her hand, flung her aside. . . . Farrant caught a glimpse of Preach's evil-faced accomplice—but too late. The branch fell. Farrant rolled on his side helpless, half stunned, and through dull eyes he saw Preach rise, aim a kick at him and seize the girl who had come back to fight for him—for him, Vincent Farrant!

"You little wildcat!" Preach snarled, shaking her. "I'll have to teach you a lesson or two, I see. . . . It's going to be good being your husband. . . ."

He began to drag her towards the car. Farrant tried to rise, but fell back groaning. It was the other man who intervened. He cried, "Half a minute, Wally. What about your loot . . . what about your suitcase with the 'bunce' in it?"

Preach checked then, he shook the girl again, snarled, "The suitcase, you vixen! Where have you hidden my suitcase . . . or what you found in it?"

It was then that Farrant managed to sit up and, to their astonishment, laugh outright.

"Ah . . . your suitcase. The one you stole from Mathias Norbert with the suitcase, eh?"

"You've said it," snarled Preach blindly exultant. "Where's the stuff? Spit it out, or by heaven you'll be sorry. . . ." He left the girl to menace Farrant and again the young man laughed.

"I'll spit it out, Preach," he said. "Willingly! It's in the hands of the police, Preach! Our motor driver said he was going straight there to lodge information against us as suspicious characters. He took the suitcase with him. What was in your case will make the police feel he is right, oh, especially as my friend Drostan must have broadcasted Mathias Norbert's loss by now. . . . The police would then, naturally, come to arrest us. . . . In fact they have, Preach, as you will see if you look round."

And, indeed, that was a fact. A big car had driven up and from it broke a mob of police. They were led by the motor driver who pointed to Lois and Farrant as the suspects.

Preach, however, lost no time in proving who was the real crook. He bolted immediately and he used his revolver as he bolted, shooting like the coldly cruel maniac he was. . . . And perhaps that was all to the good. The police were forced to shoot back in self defense. . . . Lois became a widow exactly one day after her marriage.

A MONTH later Vincent Farrant stood in the drawing room of the great Norbert house in Surrey, and Lois with her hands on his breast said softly, "My dear . . . you've never let me explain . . . never even upbraided me. . . . And now you say you love me. . . . Don't you ever ask yourself how any girl could have been such a little fool?"

Farrant's fingers closed her soft lips. "Never," he smiled down at her. "You see I knew. Drostan told me how the fellow could deceive even shrewd men of your own class. They accepted him as one of themselves—how could you possibly guess what he was when those men of your own class introduced him? . . . Besides, how could I think like that when I've been far too occupied with a question ever so much more important?"

"And what was that?" she asked, and her smile was soft, tremulous.

"A natural question—knowing you," he said. "It is to ask myself how ever any man could be so lucky as to win you."

Just the whisper of a laugh came to him, a laugh with a tiny break in it. "Not any man," she said. "Not any man, only—you, my dear!"

THE TRIBUNE COOK BOOK

This Month Has Several Occasions for Dinner Parties, and Here Are Some Suggestions.

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

By Jane Eddington.

ST. VALENTINE'S DAY, Lincoln's birthday two days earlier, and the Washington birthday event eight days after may all be reckoned as party dinner days, and for that reason often loom high on the home horizons, for it sometimes seems as though housekeepers of today were willing to put far more earnestness into giving some party meal than ever they give to the home dinner getting. In opposition to this my theory is that if they would get up more delightful, suitable, and wholesome family dinners they would not be in such a fret when they are about to entertain guests. Good food, fine food is entertaining, but it should be served daily to the family as a great end to happy living.

As a veteran in viewing the home scene, and in ever trying to understand and interpret it from the food standpoint, I feel that the woman who has begun to think at all—the old fashioned housekeeper had a better foundation in actual experience with the work of cooking, and so forth, but was likely to get into a rut and not think—needs to cultivate her ability to take a suggestion wherever she can find it in order to be satisfied with herself and work. I have had wonderful letters telling me of success and happiness in mastering the real and great work of feeding a family, but I have had more from women perfectly helpless in facing a dinner problem. They ask me to tell them what to buy, how to cook a dozen or so new things all at one time, etc., although I stubbornly will not try to figure out how much they should have for nineteen people, first preparing for them an absolute "unique" menu, and to supply them with all the recipes for it.

It is rather horrid to preach, especially if one knows not when to leave off, but again I am stating my motto about cooking for dinner parties: "Have no untried effects when you are entertaining even the humblest guest at your table."

Now to change the subject, but not too abruptly, to a simple dinner. A plain beet salad—call it bleeding heart salad—is a more satisfactory thing for your coming Valentine dinner party than one requiring an expert dressing, if you have had no experience in making such a dressing. Two lamb chops broiled and put together so as to look like a heart is simple enough to any woman who has learned by having this viand as her family's dinner to cook it correctly. But there is a good deal more of sophistication in cooking even this simple thing than some women guess.

The Love Theme in Foods.

In ancient descriptions of foods to each and every vegetable and meat was ascribed some virtue or virtues that pertained to character making or human qualities, while the seasoning herbs of the cuisine all had meanings. Balm was thought to excite gayety; the man who would eat cresses would become firm and decided. There is an ancient love story of quite a modern type connected with mint of which we make sauce to go with lamb, and the tomato was a love apple.

A St. Valentine Picture.

No one, perhaps, knows just when the pious saint got confused with Cupid, the god of love, but, in 1385, Chaucer, the oldest of our English poets, so old that his language is middle English, wrote a poem about the birds gathering on St. Valentine's day to choose their mates. Venus was there and Cupid, lord of Arrows, with his bow lying ready at his feet, yes, and so was Ceres who, the poem says, assuages hunger — the goddess of food, or of wheat as a symbol of all food.

And where they gathered was pictured the stories of all who had died of love. The whole poem is a long and wonderful picture with

"Every foul to take his own place,
As they were wont alwey fro yere to yere,
Seynt Valentynes day, to stonden there."

Chaucer's Prioresse.

We might call Chaucer's prioresse a model love lady and interesting in St. Valentine suggestiveness because of the costume jewelry she wore. Her bracelet was of coral but her beads were green—perhaps jade or near jade —and from them hung a shining brooch of gold on which there was in Latin the motto, "Love Conquers All" [Amor vincit omnia], under a heat crowned A, which evidently stood for "Amor."

To provide some imitation of this for each and every one of the girls of sixteen, at a Valentine party dinner, would be my idea of doing something pretty and significant with a souvenir left over of the occasion. And would it not be a pretty thing to do to read Chaucer's long description of this dainty lady, who was so sensitive and fine, especially as this tells just how she ate her food in those days before forks? She handled her meat without letting a crumb fall, did not get her dress front spotted and she wiped her upper lip so clean that the glass she drank from was not soiled.

St. Valentine's Gifts.

Another picture in English literature —or many of them—is to be found in the diaries of Samuel Pepys. Each 14th of February as it comes around is marked Valentine's day in his diary and poor Samuel had to pay out a good deal of money for gifts to those who chose him or were chosen by him for his valentine. He seemed generally to give gloves, half a dozen or more pairs, but sometimes the gifts were not such as a modest woman could accept so easily — or modest women of the later ages or the Victorian age, anyway. As his wife was his valentine generally, as well as of some other man, whoever else was, he had to buy expensive gifts for her.

It is not clear as to how your lady or gallant valentine were chosen then —by what formula or preamble—but the idea seemed to be the one to tag first and in some cases young boys came early to the Pepys home to choose Mrs. Pepys for their valentine. But perhaps they did as Shakespeare makes Ophelia sing:

"Tomorrow is Saint Valentine's day.
All in the morning betime,
And I a maid at your window
To be your Valentine."

Philopena.

The philopena is one of the many stories connected with eating together in some way symbolic of love, the word meaning, according to the dictionary, "much loved." Therefore, at a Valentine party of young men and women the double kerneled nuts can well be made a feature. But we fancy it was more fun to find a double meated almond than it is to furnish nuts that naturally have two kernels, and then, besides, there is a wonderful love story about the almond tree.

One of the stories about the almond as a love symbol that I got by word of mouth, rather than from a book, is this from Sweden, where they do not celebrate St. Valentine's day, yet their risgrynsgröt, which is a dish of boiled rice with an almond in it, is a good one for this day, because the one who gets the almond is the one, they say, who will wed first. We could put this in the cake of the day, one whole one, with others chopped to enrich it, and adopt the same idea. But true almond cakes are not anything for an amateur to attempt, because, for them, they are more difficult than pie crust.

The Plain Foundation.

We think it is better to add such simple things as the above to a simple, well cooked meal to make it party-like than to attempt elaborate dishes which we have no experience with for a party. Where there is a will there is always a way to make a simple, even the simplest, meal festive, perhaps in no other way than in giving the guests something like Chaucer's birds or prioresse to think about.

If it is a dinner we are serving, we may have little heart-shaped relishes of beets or small hothouse tomatoes, love apples, if we wish to have the beets for our salad. And then almond soup, which can be made in various ways. A rich soup and epicurean is one of chicken to which chopped almonds are added and cooked, but for a simpler one take for each four cups of soup three long stems of celery, one pint of cold water, a half teaspoon of salt, a half teaspoon of sugar, a few grains of cayenne pepper, a tablespoon of melted butter, a tablespoon of flour, a little cream, half a cup of blanched almonds chopped fine or pounded with a little water cooked for ten minutes in three-fourths of a cup of milk.

First make the celery soup base by washing, brushing, scraping, or trimming the celery and cutting it up fine. Add to it the pint of water and seasonings, put over the fire, bring to the boiling point, and then simmer for forty minutes. Strain off and pound the cooked celery and put it back into the liquid in which it was cooked. Melt the butter, stir the flour into it till smooth, add the celery in the liquid, and stir and cook for fifteen minutes. Taste and add any salt necessary to strengthen the celery flavor, and cream to soften. Now we have a perfectly good soup to serve, but to make it a cream of almond soup add the chopped almonds cooked in milk and cook the two together from five to ten minutes.

Beet Soup.

If the Valentine decorations are pink we may make a beet soup which is so suitable for spring apple blossom luncheons. Wash, peel, and put through the fine knife of the food chopper one bunch of crisp, delicate new beets. Put this ground raw beet with a teaspoon of salt, a small piece of butter. Heat up quickly and add one cup of boiling water. Cook ten or fifteen minutes.

Allow about a cup or at least half a cup of milk to each beet used, and have this milk hot when the beets are cooked tender. It is also best to have it thickened just a bit as it is in making potato soup.

Combine the hot milk and the cooked beet, and cook them together for a few minutes. Strain the soup or not as you choose, and add a little butter, but for party use we recommend that is be strained and that a little cracker rolled fine be added to it to give the mock bisque effect. The beets strained out can be used for a vegetable hash. Plain boiled beets, chopped fine and added to a thinned cream with seasonings to taste, may make a charming soup.

Two Pink Desserts.

A Jonathan apple sauce made by cooking the apples on top of the stove and then baking them in the oven for several hours with sugar added to taste first, is, with whipped cream, a most satisfying dessert, handsome and not in the least cloying. A greening apple cooked in the same way will be almost as pink and glassy—beautiful served with certain tints of glass—as that of the Jonathan but not so supremely dainty.

Forced rhubarb was in the market this year by the first of December. This forced rhubarb is beautiful to look at in the stem, and some of its beauty—much or little, according to the way you treat it, or the kind of a cook you are—can be preserved for the cooked desserts made from it. It is an excellent dessert for a meal when lamb is the meat.

To cook it so that it will be exceptional or not the least bit stringy, as all old fashioned dishes of rhubarb were, wash the stems thoroughly and wipe them dry, then split them lengthwise into several strawlike pieces. Finally, cut these fine strings across so as to make them into fine dice.

This so-called fruit may now be cooked with or without water. For the most rare or interesting effects put it into a double boiler and thus dry steam it until tender. But to get it out of the way quickly add to it a little boiling water and cook it about five minutes directly over the fire.

It is more delicate if the sugar is not cooked with it, but it is best to measure it before it is cooked and then when it is cooked add to it about a third as much sugar as there was raw rhubarb. If you want to mix this grade rhubarb cooked in these ways with whipped cream measure cooked rhubarb and add a fourth as much sugar as rhubarb. Or you may sieve the rhubarb while it is hot, measure, cool, and add a fourth as much sugar, mix it with whipped cream and pile it high in glasses.

THE GLENLITTEN MURDER By E. Phillips Oppenheim

stairs and knocked at the door upon which the name was printed in black letters. A very modern looking young woman with flaxen hair, short cropped and short of skirt, looked up inquiringly.

"Is Mr. Felix Main in?" Andrew asked.

"He is," the girl admitted. "What about it?"

"I should like to see him."

"Business?"

"Yes. I shan't keep him long."

"Any name?"

"Glenlitten—Lord Glenlitten."

The girl resisted an obvious impulse to put out her tongue and indulged instead in a grimace.

"I'll tell him," she promised, and disappeared.

She knocked at an inner door. There was a murmur of voices from inside the mahogany incased tabernacle. She reappeared a little chastened.

"Mr. Main will spare you a few minutes," she announced, and lifted a flap of the counter.

Andrew was ushered into a bare looking office, in which at a writing table sat a small man with scanty red hair, a gold rimmed pince-nez, and pale, yet shrewd eyes. He studied his visitor without apparent curiosity.

"Pray sit down," he invited. "I have five minutes at your disposal. Please tell me what you want."

Andrew looked at the proffered chair, dusted it with a fine cambric handkerchief, but hesitated before seating himself.

"Five minutes may not be enough," he said.

MR. FELIX MAIN looked more closely at his visitor, who was in his way impressive, and began to feel some doubts.

"You are not by any chance the marquis of Glenlitten, are you?" he inquired.

"My name," was the terse response.

A subtle change seemed to permeate the whole being of Mr. Felix Main. The suspicion passed from his manner. The slight arrogance was forgotten. The pince-nez were laid upon the table.

"Dear me, dear me!" he exclaimed. "I am very honored. This is most interesting. I have read every line in the press concerning that intriguing burglary at your house. In fact, I was so interested that I traveled down into the country and took the liberty of attending the inquest."

"The devil you did!" Andrew commented grimly. "That's the last sort of holiday I should have indulged in. I suppose you know, then, that they've got the burglar?"

"I have just read the account of his arrest. Quite a smart piece of work, that. You couldn't tell me a thing about the case, Lord Glenlitten, that I don't know already."

"Well, that makes the thing easier," Andrew observed, leaning a little forward in his uncomfortable chair. "If you've read all the details you don't need me to go over them again. Seems simple enough, on the face of it, doesn't it? Up the ladder comes the burglar and in rushes poor De Besset, who could see him coming from his window. There's only one thing for the burglar to do, if he wants to get away with the booty, and he does it."

"Just so," Mr. Main concurred. "He shoots."

"Plain as a pike staff," Andrew agreed emphatically. "Now comes the trouble, though. The man they've arrested pleads guilty to the burglary, but denies ever having possessed a revolver in his life, and insists upon it that De Besset was killed by some one else concealed in the room."

"Of course he had to do that," the detective commented. "Bit thin, though."

Andrew smiled with satisfaction. For the first time he felt that he had done a shrewd thing in coming to see Mr. Felix Main.

"Ridiculous on the face of it," he scoffed.

"And yet," the detective reflected, "what else could the fellow do? You couldn't expect him to put his own neck in the noose. If he didn't do it, some one else did. It seems to me a pretty feeble effort, though."

"That's exactly what I say," Andrew assented eagerly. "Now this is why I've come to see you. I daresay you know that Sir Richard Cotton's taken up the case. He's going to instruct counsel to defend the prisoner. He is actually exploiting the theory that there was a third man present in the bedchamber who fired the shot."

"Any evidence?" the detective inquired, glancing a little stealthily at his visitor.

"None that I can imagine," Andrew replied. "To my mind the suggestion is simply damned rot. Dick Cotton's an old friend of mine, and he can be very convincing at times, but he's got a bee in his bonnet over this affair. What I say is—and my wife agrees with me—that it was practically impossible for a third person to be in her bedroom whilst she was there and unknown to her."

Mr. Felix Main stroked his chin.

"It's the only possible defense," he pointed out, "but unless Sir Richard Cotton has something up his sleeve, I shouldn't think he has the ghost of a chance. Your wife's evidence at the inquest appeared to me conclusive."

"Well, I'm glad to find you take a sensible view of the case," Andrew declared, with a sigh of relief. "Now what I want you to do is to go down to Glenlitten and try to find out, if you can, what Cotton is aiming at. I'll give you authority to go over the house and you can ask any one whatever questions you choose. Dick Cotton's an old friend of mine, but I'm damned if I'm going to have my wife worried to death in the witness chair just because it's his business to get his client off."

"I take it, then," Mr. Felix Main observed, cautiously, "that what you want me to do is to discover on what lines Sir Richard Cotton is working and whom else he intends to try to drag into the case?"

"Precisely," Andrew agreed. "Get to work. I give you a free hand for expenses. The law's at the back of you. They want the man proved guilty. All I want is justice done and not to have my wife bothered by senseless questions. You can talk to her, if you like, for a few minutes. She'll tell you all that she saw, and that was absolutely nothing. The whole affair's as plain as a pike staff. You must see that for yourself."

"I do," Mr. Felix Main declared. "A free hand as regards expenses, I think you said, Lord Glenlitten."

Andrew emptied his pocketbook.

"Here's a hundred and fifty on account," he said, handing the notes over. "Now, get at it. Nail this thing onto the burglar so that my wife hasn't to go into the box and be badgered about that possible third person. Find out, if you can, what old Cotton's driving at and cut the ground from under his feet. There are the jewels to be recovered, too—ten thousand pounds' reward on those, you know. The burglar only seems to have had one ring on him when he was caught."

Mr. Felix Main was entirely unconvincing.

"I understand the situation exactly, Lord Glenlitten," he said, as he escorted his departing client to the door. "I shall work on the lines you lay down, and I think I can promise you complete success."

Names of the First Winners in the "Aces of the Air Game"

HARVARD C. SMITH of Kenosha, Wis., is winner of the third prize in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE's $15,000 "Aces of the Air" game. His cash award is $500. Mrs. Marie W. Phifer of Sullivan, Ill., and Ethel Millspaugh of Anderson, Ind., win $250 each.

From among the many thousands of entries received from all parts of the United States and from several foreign countries, the judges have selected 1,449 prize winners. The decisions were reached primarily on the standards of accuracy shown in assembling the composite pictures of the pioneers of aviation, the neatness with which the work was accomplished, and the merit of the accompanying letter. So many of the contestants displayed high qualities along all these lines that the judges faced a difficult task.

First Prize Is $1,500.

First prize carries with it $1,500 in cash; second size means an award of $1,000. There are six prizes of $250 each, ten of $100 each, ten of $50 each, twenty of $25 each, 300 of $10 each, and 1,100 of $5 each.

With the family treasury somewhat depleted by the recent holiday shopping, and with the first payments on the new income tax returns just around the corner, it is anticipated the extra money will be warmly welcomed to the homes of the lucky contestants. And even those who failed to get in on the disbursement will have the satisfaction of knowing that they are much better acquainted with the air heroes than they were before.

GOOD Morning!

Here's a picture that's going to keep your eyes glued on the screen and your ears open. It's an altalker, adapted from Sir James M. Barrie's play "Half an Hour," and it is so vibrant with interest that it seems surprisingly short.

Did you ever stop to consider how many things COULD happen in half an hour? Do it some time when you want to feel a little dotty. Seven o'clock, all's well; 7:30 and all's hell ——!

Says the press sheet truly of "The Doctor's Secret":

"The story is a tense drama of London society. In sharp, dramatic contrasts it shows to the audience the heights of happiness and despair that can come to one woman's life in half an hour. Throughout, the wildest emotions are concealed behind the polite phrases of social intercourse . . ."

Four People in a Net.

The four people principally concerned in the action are Mr. Garson, a wealthy, self-made man with a vicious, jealous, nagging disposition; his wife, an aristocrat whom he forever taunts because of her marriage to him for his money; Hugh Paton, the lover of Mrs. Garson, and Dr. Brodie, a physician who enters the scheme of things at a tragic and momentous time.

Almost immediately after the start of the picture—start's not so good, because of Miss Chatterton's and Mr.

RUTH CHATTERTON.

Loder's acting being a bit stagy—you find husband and wife (Miss Chatterton more natural now) having a bitter quarrel. A quarrel the woman determines shall be the last.

Garson leaves the room with a brief reference to "dinner at 8 o'clock"—it's around about 7:30 then—and Mrs. Garson telephones Paton that she will go with him that night to Egypt, where business is taking him. She writes a note telling her decision and naming Paton and leaves it with her wedding ring and other jewels in a drawer of her husband's desk. She then hurries to Paton's rooms.

A Terrible Accident.

As she and Paton talk and plan ecstatically, both remember that Lillian has come away with no clothes save those she is wearing. Paton rushes out to get her some . . .

He is brought back into the house dead by a Dr. Brodie, who had seen him killed by a motor lorry.

Lillian tells the physician she is not Mrs. Paton and, recollecting her note, that she has no place to go. The doctor thinks her a woman of the streets and advises her to make herself scarce before coroner and reporters arrive.

She returns home. The note has not been discovered, BUT——

She must hurriedly dress for a dinner party she and her husband are giving. To which comes—Dr. Brodie——!

He is telling of the accident just witnessed when his hostess enters the room——! I will not go into further detail. But isn't the situation a charged one?

The men in the piece are excellent and Miss Chatterton does careful, though uninspired, work. This actress has little power to stir sympathy. Far ahead of her in acting, voice, and appeal is a funny little thing named Nanci Price, 10 years old. She plays a queer, wee cockney maid, and she is perfectly homely and perfectly adorable.

Direction, staging, and photography of "The Doctor's Secret" are good. You wish the picture were longer.

Chicago Gangland - - - - - - - - - - -

The True Story of Its Murders, Its Vices, and Its Reprisals

The Funeral of O'Banion, a Booze King

This is the second of a series on the gangsters of boozedom and what they did to Chicago. In the first installment Mr. Bennett took up the case of Dean O'Banion, the chronic beamer and handshaker who rose to such heights in gangdom that shortly before he was shot to death in his floral shop he was characterized by Chief of Police Morgan Collins as "Chicago's arch criminal."

O'Banion, a street gamin and hoodlum, later a ward heeler and slugger, was "made" by prohibition. His golden years were from 1920, when he was 28 years old, until 1924, when he met his death. His gang, aligned with the Torrio and Capone outfits, made money, but ambition or greed got the better of O'Banion and he went to his death as so many others have since his time.

Marking the growing power of Torrio, Capone, and the Genna brothers, O'Banion was led to remark, "O, to hell with them Sicilians," and those words were his death warrant. He broke with Torrio and Capone, who had given him his chance at the "big money" and began muscling in, outraging the sleek code of his two associates, which was to endure much from corrupt and double crossing officers in order to gain more.

His punishment was swift and definite.

Into his floral shop walked three men, presumably to order flowers. Apparently he knew them, for he advanced from the rear of the shop with the scissors with which he had been trimming flowers in his left hand, his right outstretched in greeting. One of the visitors grasped the outstretched hand, and as he held it his companions opened fire—and O'Banion fell dead among his flowers.

Today Mr. Bennett tells of the O'Banion funeral and how the sob sisters sobbed.

By James O'Donnell Bennett.

EVERY stage of the investigation of the killing of Dean O'Banion on that November noon in 1924 was marked by indecencies which showed that there was in Chicago and the county of Cook—as there still is—a power stronger than the law and dreaded by the officers of the law. The inquest at East Chicago avenue station was attended by the dead man's fellow gangsters, who made no concealment of hip pockets that bulged with weapons and who uttered brassy threats against spectators who, in their opinion, might give damaging evidence.

The police gave Mayor Dever those facts, and the mayor said:

"The situation is becoming intolerable. It is time to decide which element in Chicago is going to control. There can be no question as to the outcome in favor of law and its strict enforcement."

Dever Sincere, but No Prophet.

In releasing that prophecy the mayor showed himself a tragic optimist. For there was question as to the outcome and there still is. THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE of Jan. 8, 1929, contained an extensive news report on the uncovering of gang conditions in Chicago Heights so oppressive and brazen that for months they had made that suburb no less than a fief of crime. THE TRIBUNE of the next day contained a first page news report of the murder of a Sicilian politician and gangster by three gangsters who closed an argument with him in his home with eleven decisive bullets fired into their victim's head, neck and shoulders. (Gangsters, by the way, always fire high.) In the same issue were three more news articles on current machinations and crimes of Chicago's gangsters. In THE TRIBUNE of the next day—Jan. 10 last—appeared three news reports of the developments of the preceding 24 hours relative to (1) the latest illicit liquor operations, (2) the latest murder, and (3) the latest bombing by gangdom in Chicago.

The point is that none of those articles was in a crusading or a review strain. All were reports of current events.

A Mayor Who Would Not Wink.

But William Dever was sincere in his belief that the law could win against gangdom. He proved that by refusing to wink at any political deals between his administration and gangdom. His attitude probably cost him reelection. He was heavily defeated by William Hale Thompson, whom this community knew to be unincumbered by any sterling convictions about anything. It was the firm belief of those who best knew gangdom's resources that Mr. Dever could have had a hundred thousand dollars of gangdom's dread money for his campaign chest in 1927, not by asking for it—gangdom is not so crude as to make high officialdom come crawling to it—but by acquiescing in the gift. Acquiescence would have insured the protection which gangdom requires. It is also the firm belief of those who account themselves specially informed that the hundred thousand which nobody dared offer William Dever was not kept in complete idleness elsewhere.

Reviewing events of thirty anarchic hours, Mayor Dever said:

"On one day we have O'Banion, alleged 'king' of our underworld, shot down in daylight in his place of business as the result of a deliberate and minutely organized assassins' plot. And the next day we have the chief man Friday of the 'king,' this fellow Louis Alterie, openly boasting of the nimbleness of his trigger finger and the number of guns he's carrying, and daring the slayers of his chief to do battle with him in the public streets."

Then the mayor put the question to the community, saying:

"The question is: Are we still abiding by the code of the dark ages, or is Chicago a unit of an American commonwealth?"

But the mayor's most acute shock was to come.

A Party with a Penalty.

It came when he was told that in October, 1924, less than two weeks before Gangster O'Banion was slain, Commissioner of Public Works Col. A. A. Sprague, a Dever nonpartisan appointee; County Clerk Robert M. Sweitzer, Chief of Detectives Michael Hughes, William O'Connor of the detective bureau, and half a dozen police lieutenants had been respectability's prize attractions at a banquet in the Webster hotel, when O'Banion was presented with a diamond studded platinum watch by his fellow gangmen in crime and in politics.

The mayor ordered an investigation.

Hughes' explanation was that he had understood that the party was to be in honor of Jerry O'Connor, secretary of the Theater Janitors' union, that as soon as he entered the banquet hall and "recognized a number of notorious characters whom he had thrown into the detective bureau basement half a dozen times," he knew he had "been framed," and that he "withdrew almost at once."

Words! Words! Words!

Mr. Dever, with touching confidence in the go-getiveness of a police force of which commanding officers were so befuddled as to where respectability's Who's Who ended and criminality's Who's Who began, closed with this fulmination:

"The gangsters are to be disarmed and jailed or driven out of town. Every one of the city's six thousand policemen is to be thrown into the fight and public opinion is counted upon to spur municipal and state court judges into cooperation."

"Public opinion counted upon."

Hah! There was no public opinion. There was only a sodden public acquiescence supplemented by a legalistic inertia which, from the criminal's point of view, amounted to extraordinarily practical "coöperation" with him.

The crowning indecency of the O'Banion case was O'Banion's funeral.

The Late Lamented in Epitome.

To estimate the shrieking irony of those obsequies you must briefly consider what O'Banion had been. He had been a jackroller—which, next to pimp, is the most contemptible and cowardly kind of criminal a man can be—safecracker—in 1921 the police caught him in the act of cracking a safe in the Postal Telegraph building, Chicago, but a Chicago jury acquitted him—bootlegger, hi-jacker, illicit brewer, thief, and killer. When as a boy he was a member of the old Market street gang that laid terror upon the Orleans and West Chestnut street neighborhood it was said of him that he would "steal anything movable." He had a score of hiding places in and near Chicago. Whatever legitimate occupation he had followed—and he had been newsboy, waiter, truck driver, politician, florist, and yachtsman—he always supplemented those occupations with outlawry. If he failed to do that when he was acolyte to Father O'Brien at the Holy Name cathedral it was solely because the good man was smarter than the child and could control him within the sacred precincts.

Travesty—Yet Important.

And yet this menace to humankind was laid away with a splendor which would have given distinction—of a sort—to the obsequies of a citizen who had long and faithfully served his city. The funeral travesty makes an important page in the chronicles of gangdom because it did worse than make Chicago disgusting before the world. It made the city ridiculous.

Platoons of photographers, batteries of sob sisters, were assigned to the rites by a hectic press.

Ornate phrases which in other days were reserved for description of the world's farewell to heroes and statesmen were lavished upon this performance.

The body was described as "lying in state" in the Sharbaro undertaking rooms at 708 North Wells street. The bullet scarred body, from the cheeks of which the stains of powder burns had been obliterated, was, in fact, on view for three days after the killing.

Details of the exhibition were lavishly imparted to an interested public.

"Tufted Cushion Extra."

The "casket," a word which is popular journalese for the useful receptacle called in simpler times a coffin, was described as "his couch . . . a casket priced with a touch of pride at $10,000." There was disagreement as to the precise amount animating "the touch of pride," one reporter giving it as $7,500. In any case, this couch, casket, or coffin had come from Pennsylvania "in a special express car that carried only the casket for freight," and—I am still faithfully transcribing from the ecstasies of the chroniclers—it was equipped with "solid silver and bronze double walls, inner sealed and air tight, with a heavy plate glass above and a couch of white satin below, with tufted cushion extra for his left hand to rest on."

All the mortuary improvements.

The Solace of Symbolism.

And symbolism.

Again I transcribe:

"At the corners of the casket are solid silver posts, carved in wonderful designs. Modest is the dignified silvery gray of the casket, content with the austere glory of the carved silver posts at its corners, and broken only by a scroll across one side which reads, 'Dean O'Banion, 1892-1924.'"

I rubbed my eyes, but plodded on with my transcribing, and was richly rewarded. I have read more than once both Thackeray and Victor Hugo on the second funeral of Napoleon; I witnessed in the ancient abbey church at Stockholm the solemn disinterment of the body of the Lion of the North, Charles XII., and I was present at the funeral of Woodrow Wilson in the vast unfinished pile that looks down on Washington from Mount St. Alban.

But nowhere have I encountered more stylish mortuary writing or set-

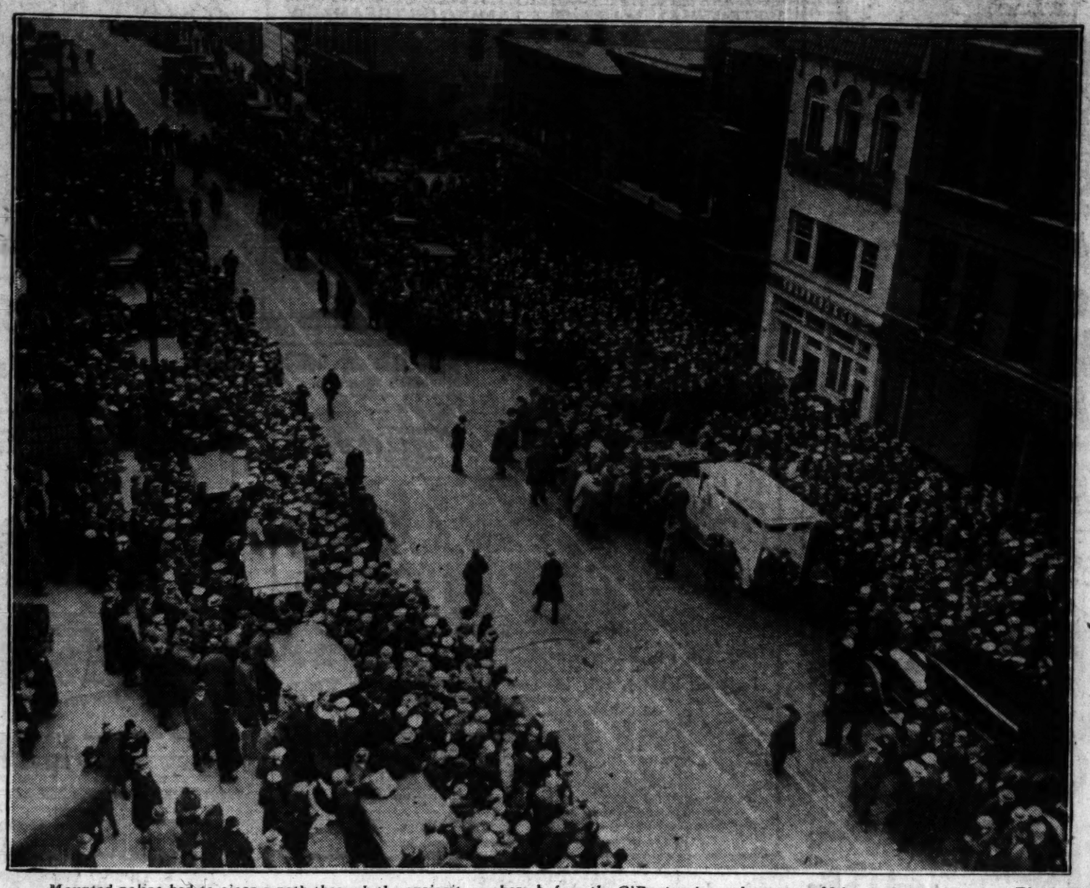
HOW GANGSTER FUNERAL CROWDED CHICAGO STREETS



Mounted police had to clear a path through the curiosity seekers before the O'Banion funeral party could be started on its way. The gang officiating at the services gave orders that no photographs should be taken. They were taking no risks of identification. According to one newspaper account, Louis Alterie and Hymie Weiss "cried as women might." [TRIBUNE Photo.]

HIS GRAVE

O'BANION'S WIDOW

Said a sob sister at the time Dean O'Banion's body "lay in state": "In the soft light of the candles at the head of the $10,000 casket sat Mrs. O'Banion, a picture of patient sorrow." This picture, however, was taken four years later. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Theater Ailment Diagnosed by St. John Ervine

By Burns Mantle.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Well, sir, we are still having loads of fun trying to figure out what really is wrong with the theater.

Discussion was stirred afresh last week by St. John Ervine, the World's guest critic from England. Mr. Ervine, being an Ulsterite, loves nothing better than an argument.

When he came to America last September his intention was to be kind, but just. Being a practical playwright, a practical man of the theater, in fact, having worked with the Abbey players in Dublin, he was of a mind to let his natural enthusiasms expand and pat us on the back whenever excuse offered.

If the plays were good he was inclined to overpraise then. If they were average he kindly consented to give the playwrights tips as to how they might be rewritten. Occasionally he stepped out and spanked an American author or manager with good sound smacks, but as much in sorrow as in anger.

Gradually, however, as the Broadways began taking pot shots at him, Mr. Ervine got his Irish up and replied in kind. Being of serious mind and having his own idea of what constitutes humor, he seemed quickly to lose interest in the American theater and its productions.

Makes a Gloomy Diagnosis.

Most of his criticisms have been deprecatory in tone. The drama is dying. The managers are killing it. The women are killing it. The playwrights are letting it die. The speculators are its chief assassins. The high cost of playgoing is driving thousands to the movies. Nit-wit audiences are getting what they deserve and deserve what they get.

"Modern plays," says Mr. Ervine, "are the ravings of guttersnipes and the dirty scribblings of little boys on blank walls. . . . The contemporary drama is doomed, and the intelligent people of the world have no chance of demanding good plays because prices are beyond their reach."

Many of the Ervine conclusions are soundly reasoned. Some of them are not. He is showman enough to know that straight truth telling seldom stabs the interest of an audience. Be extreme, be a little wild and a little mad, and people will listen.

Which modern plays are the ravings of guttersnipes? How many of them are there? Select six from the current list of a hundred and more dramatic entertainments being exhibited in New York, Chicago, Boston, and Philadelphia. It can't be done.

Not Borne Out by Facts.

And in the matter of barring intelligent playgoers by the high cost of playgoing. I counted fifty-two current entertainments offered in the Broadway theaters the other night. Twenty-seven of them were selling for from $1 to $3; eight from $1 to $3.85; six from $1.50 to $5.50; six from $2 to $6.60; one from $2 to $7.70. And thirty-seven of the fifty-two were in the cut rates.

The only theaters the intelligent playgoer is barred from attending hereabouts are those theaters housing the showier burlesques and the revues that DO contain the dirty scribbling of bad boys.

The modern drama in this transitional period, is not half so dead as it was when the politer parlor fairy story plays were the vogue. If it is, the thing that has stabbed it to the heart is the defection of the intelligent people who, growing wearied of fairy stories, turned avidly to the cheaper and more vulgar drama for relief and excitement and thus encouraged the cheaper and more vulgar producers to produce more of it. Clean up the minds of the people and the drama will clean itself.

Five or six years ago Elmer Rice, author of "Street Scene," which, I suspect, would figure in an Ervine list of gutternipe plays seeing that it literally is close to the gutter, and which is now a speculator's favorite at the brokerages — five years ago Rice wrote another street scene drama which he called "The Subway."

Years Ahead of Public Tastes.

For five years he hawked "The Subway" among the managers and none could see. Finally following the success of "Street Scenes," a band of amateurs called the Lenox Hill Players put four dollars' worth of scenery together and produced "The Subway" in Greegwich Village.

It is another doleful tale of an unhappy girl searching for beauty and happiness. She slaves in an office set with steel furniture, filing cabinets and flinty humans, several of whom desire her. She rides home in the roaring subway and is again thrown into violent and disturbing contact with humanity in the rough. She goes to the movies with an artist who tries to keep his mind on the picture, but can't. She goes to the artist's studio and thereafter finds herself deserted and threatened with a disgrace she considers worse than death. So she goes out and throws herself under the wheels of the subway and is killed.

The success of "The Subway" in the Village was neither sensational nor pronounced, but with several empty theaters uptown the Shuberts decided to take an interest in the production. They are moving the play this week to the Masque, and thus Elmer Rice, whom you may recall as the author of "On Trial," and who has not had a first class hit in the fourteen years which have elapsed since he wrote "On Trial," finds himself suddenly with two plays on Broadway, both simple studies of life in this distressful city, one a success and the other a promise. Some of my confreres like "Street Scene" so well they expect it to wrest the Pulitzer prize.

Rare and Exotic Art Applauded.

I discovered one entertainment last week intelligent patrons of the arts seemed anxious to support. That was a dance recital by Harald Kreutzberg and Yvonne Georgi. Ever heard of them? Neither had I. At least they meant no more to me than the names of two dancers who last year came to

This and That Thing About the Theater

And This Means About the Actors, Also.

By Frederick Donaghey.

LETTERS within the week include a number with copious information about the Drew and Barrymore families of the American stage. Some of it is correct information; but most of it is of value solely for its vast inexactitude. This is particularly so in letters on the subject from actors, from ex-actors, and from persons who assert that they are, through close personal friendship, "in a position to know." These letters have been evoked by my remarks and by quotations from Burns Mantle in reporting "The Royal Family" in the issue of the 5th. Now, I don't believe that one theatergoer in a thousand gives a rap about the question as to the extent to which the Barrymores and the Drews may be identified with the characters in the racy, rich comedy in the Harris; and I am ignorant as to whether the Barrymore-Drew notion was in the design of Mr. Kaufman and Miss Ferber as they wrote the piece. Miss Barrymore is known to believe that the notion was uppermost with the dramatists, and to feel especially grieved because she and Miss Ferber were once associates to the extent that she played in the latter's "Our Mrs. McChesney." John Barrymore is said to have confined his resentment in the matter, after he saw a performance, good-naturedly to telling Otto Kruger: "It's all immense; but you needn't be so rough on me!" (Tony Cavendish, acted by Mr. Kruger, is tagged by the taggers as the younger of the Barrymore boys.) Nothing, so far as I know, has been uttered by Lionel Barrymore, the most silent of actors since he went back to Hollywood after some seasons of disheartening effort to find plays wherein to exhibit his unquestioned talent for the Theater.

But, assuming that the authors meant to use the Barrymores and their kin as copy, it is not easy to discern wherein they have gone farther than faintly to indicate that John Barrymore is the prototype of Tony. The mother of the Barrymores certainly is not even remotely suggested in the character of Fanny Cavendish, aged seventy-two years; while, leaving out the question of a skipped generation, it is preposterous to say, as some of the letter-writers do, that Fanny really represents Mrs. John Drew, the maternal grandmother of Ethel, Lionel, and John. Their mother, Georgia Drew Barrymore, was dead long before any of her children was old enough for the stage. She was at the height of her career in the early 'Nineties, and was, I have been assured by elders with judgment and a sense of values, the best comédienne of her day. My own recollection of her is rather dim; I saw her when I was a kid in "The Senator" and "Mr. Wilkinson's Widows." And it is just as preposterous to try to hang the character of Herbert Dean, the fading jeune-premier who in the play is Fanny's uxorius brother, on the late John Drew. No: this gratuitous attempt to parallel the Drew-Barrymore clan with the dramatis-personæ of "The Royal Family" is a foolish joke, regardless of what Mr. Kaufman and Miss Ferber may have meant. As Mr. Mantle said, this stage-family "might easily have been the Barrymores had Barrymores been exactly that kind of a stage-family." It would be wellnigh impossible to write a play along the lines of "The Royal Family" without having such somebodies of the American stage as the Barrymores in mind; but the Barrymores have not provided much copy in this case.

What is far more important than the silly chore of seeking to identify the characters is that "The Royal Family" is a good and an unusual comedy, and that it is admirably just what the authors describe it—a play about "actors at home." There is veracity, the result of shrewd and appreciative observation, in the inability of these fictive actors to get or to keep far from their trade regardless of what other interests seek to intrude. I have known at least one Fanny Cavendish; I know twenty Julias and as many Tonys, countless Herberts and Kittys, and two play-producers not unlike the patient, kindly, plodding Oscar of the play. The lunatic deportment and behavior of these characters is not more of an exaggeration that is fairly exacted by common-sense stagecraft. "The Royal Family" is something to be seen and enjoyed by all of you who like to believe that you take your intelligence with you when you go to a play. . . .

And, as I said in my report of the 5th, Jed Harris has cast the comedy so well that it were foolish for any of us to try to better what he has done. The performance is wellnigh perfect.

The Actors from Stratford.

Adequate or competent were the best adjective for the players of Shakspere now in the Studebaker; and their performances are recommended to those who wish to see the plays of the repertoire for the sake of the plays, themselves. This company from the Memorial Theater is the only existing ensemble devoted to keeping the plays in performance in English; and it is beyond reason to expect notable acting in the conditions. The ideal theater for Shakspere could be made a realization only by a vast and uninterrupted expenditure; and I doubt that such an institution could be maintained in New York or London with less than a million dollars in annual deficit. Here in the Studebaker is the best effort the English-speaking nations seem able to afford; and it is more than good enough as a plan whereby the plays may be acted for the public. That the style of performance they give is not my notion of how Shakspere should be

Musical Public Packs N. Y. Houses

By Joan King.

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Music of the nineteenth, seventeenth, and eighteenth centuries is steadily increasing in popularity among Gotham program makers. Indeed, several of the most interesting recent musical bills of fare have been devoted to espousing the cause of the so-called "old" compositions. Moreover, this spirit has seemingly permeated the public mind of late.

One of the most rousing receptions of the week was accorded George Barrere and his Little Symphony Tuesday evening when, with the assistance of the two eminent Britishers, Myra Hess and Harold Samuel, he performed much Bach [both father and son], Mozart, and Rameau. Miss Hess and Mr. Samuel, exchanging first and second piano parts, though possessed of different tone qualities, played with admirable ensemble spirit. Mr. Barrere and his little band, for which he has been endeavoring to obtain funds for permanent establishment, provided a delightful accompaniment. The whole program, indeed, fascinated the audience, which was a brilliant one and overflowed the limits of the Town hall.

Crowds Hear Russian Pianist.

Another occasion of a full house was the first appearance of the season of the Russian pianist, Josef Lhevinne, in Carnegie hall the same evening. A huge crowd of enthusiastic admirers was on hand to welcome the artist, who recently arrived on these shores after a tour of Europe.

Of such moment was the event to at least one artist that she interrupted her own tour to be on hand. This was Margaret Shotwell, the 18 year old Omaha pianist who made her début here last autumn. Miss Shotwell came all the way from Chicago, one of the cities on the itinerary of Beniamino Gigli, Metropolitan tenor, whom she is accompanying on this tour—her first. Mr. Lhevinne, it appears, was her teacher in this country.

In his program, which was composed of Brahms, Schumann, Liszt, Debussy, and Tausig, Mr. Lhevinne evinced playing which immediately placed his performance among the finest achievements of the 1928-'29 rhythmic year hereabouts.

Lutheran Choir Praised.

That organization from the middle west which, through its high quality of performance, has become known all over the country—the St. Olaf Lutheran choir from Northfield, Minn.—made its first New York appearance in two years this week. Dr. F. Melius Christiansen, whose remarkable ability as a choral trainer and leader, demonstrated through his work with the student choirs of the St. Olaf college which has achieved renown for him, did the leading. Sixty surpliced students composed the choir.

Leon Goossens' Plays.

Eugene Goossens, conductor of the Rochester Philharmonic orchestra, composer and pianist, is, of course, a familiar figure in this country's musical world. But his brother, Leon, is equally well known in England as an oboe virtuoso. It was to Leon Goossens that the honors of a recent concert at Steinway hall went. On this occasion, which presented the noted oboist once more to this country as a master of his instrument, his brother presided at the piano, accompanying the Philharmonic string quartet, which assisted the artist in presenting the possibilities of the oboe as a solo instrument.

Sigrid Onegin Welcomed.

Sigrid Onegin of the dramatic contralto voice again demonstrated her prowess at a Town hall matinée recital recently. A capacity audience welcomed her in a program which included Beethoven's "The Heavens Declare," and "Der Kuss." "The Slumber Song of One Condemned to Death," and numbers in Swedish, Norwegian, German, French, and Italian.

This was Mme. Onegin's second New York recital this season and it may be recorded as a triumphant one. The audience even carried their plaudits so far as to fling hats in the air, a spontaneous type of ovation which is seldom witnessed in gatherings of the so-called sophisticates of musical Gotham.

What Is It That's Been Going On in the Twice-a-Day?

By Figaro McGee.

CHICAGO is now one of five or six cities with what is known in the business as a two-a-day variety-theater: five or six years ago, a two-a-day theater was the possession of every city in the country with a population of at least 250,000. I recall that, late in 1921, all I heard of in a week's visit to Cleveland on theatrical business was that the Keith-Albee circuit was building what would be one of the three or four most beautiful and spacious theaters in the world, and that it would be a two-a-day house.

Glancing, a few days ago, through lists of attractions in other cities, I saw plays advertised in Keith's in Philadelphia and Keith's in Boston; and on inquiry I learned that the respective theaters had passed, as has the Majestic here, to the Messrs. Shubert. When, in 1902, Keith's in Philadelphia was opened, it was a civic event; and the house, as Keith's Million-Dollar Theater, was advertised fifty miles in all directions from that city. As to Boston, the Keith theater there was regarded as something like a shrine; for it was in Boston that B. F. Keith took his famous start as the overlord of the variety-theaters with a "store-show," as it was called What's been going on in the old two-a-day? What has happened to what was for a generation the most popular and the most profitable form of indoors entertainment in the United States? What has happened in Cleveland that a community so elated with its new two-a-day house in 1922 should for the last year or longer have been asked to attend it for programs that are run off four times a day? What change is come so quickly over the public from the Atlantic to the Pacific?

Mr. Keith is, of course, dead; but the death of one man could not reasonably be the explanation of such a change as I have loosely indicated. Martin Beck, who ruled from Chicago out to the Pacific as Keith and Albee ruled from Boston to Chicago, has been for some years out of the varieties; and the explanation of the change in popular taste doesn't reside in his having withdrawn. Opposition that slowly developed into competition the Keith-Orpheum circuits always had; but they thrived on it, seemingly, and took it standing up. Let the opposition plan a theater that might endanger an existing Keith or Orpheum house, and out of a clear sky came the trumpeted news that Mr. Keith or Mr. Beck would build a new house to meet the menace.

What's been going on? The explanation depends on the person you put the question to. One man tells me the films, and gives to me what sounds like a great argument in favor of his explanation. He says the big movie-houses give more for the money—or for less money. He talks in terms of flat merchandising: quantitatively, that is. When I ask him if twenty-five years of good variety-shows—or vawdavill, as he calls it—can be lightly passed by and a change made to something so different as the movie-shows with their "presentations" and other Ragniappe, he says: "Well, it isn't reasonable; but that's what they've done!"

A performer who has had fifteen years of vogue in the two-a-day and is the owner of a name that means money to this day at the box-office says that it is the tendency of young and up-coming performers to regard the variety-stage as simply a springboard wherefrom they may make a neat and light leap to the so-called revue or other varieties of song-and-dance shows. "Those who don't make the leap become embittered, and cheat in the work they have to do. I talked the other day to a 'team' that has been on bills with me for the last ten years; and all they did was to pan Florence Moore, Al Jolson, Eddie Cantor, Clark and McCullagh, Phil Baker, Ted Healy, and the Duncan Sisters. This 'team' belongs in the two-a-day. They are good for from fifteen minutes to twenty-five anywhere in the United States. They know that one game, and know no other; and they would die if exposed to the test of a revue, even if permitted to go on and do their 'turn' with such editing as a revue would require. I cite them not because they are alone in their attitude, but because they are typical of scores and scores of good performers who feel that they are being cheated because they're not in one of the Shubert or Dillingham or Ziegfeld shows."

A seasoned house-manager of the two-a-day says that the change in public taste is not a change in public taste, but a change in fare. "The revues, the musical comedies, the big cabarets, and the picture-houses grab the talent with 'names.' Of the ten biggest drawing-cards in the varieties—and they were the biggest not in my opinion, but in the check-up by data and statistics of the home-office—there were at one time in Chicago less than three years ago six in other employment; a seventh was in a New-York floor-show, sharing on the cover-charges, and taking down, I believe, $4,500 a week; an eighth was giving a show of her own on the lyceum circuits; a ninth was performing in London for less than half what her salary had been in this country; and the tenth was taking special engagements in the larger picture-houses. In short, we no longer have the names with which to play; and the creation of new names is a hard matter, inasmuch as it is not necessarily related to proved talent."

The weekly called Variety was founded about 1905 as a newspaper of and about the variety-stage. It still is that, to the full extent that the variety-stage is now a matter of interest; but it devotes most of its space today to films and to the bills of which films are the principal features, while it has incidentally taken the place of all the old-line weeklies devoted to the "legitimate": that is, the Dramatic Mirror, the Dramatic News, the Clipper, and others. That, perhaps, is substantiation of all the explanations outlined above. It is read weekly as an intellectual pastime by hundreds of men and women who have never seen a variety-show; and it is of such importance that the American Mercury gave a special article to the weekly. Ask the editor-publisher, Sime Silverman, if he would have started Variety had conditions in 1905 been what they are today; and he replies: "No!" Then, pondering the question, he amends the reply, thus: "Or, maybe, yes; but I should not have survived the first issue."

READY AND AMBITIOUS

MISS EDITH SCOTT

SHE'S in one of the minor parts in the gay, tuneful operetta called "Music in May"; but she is in it because the occupation permits of her being called on for any of the principal parts when the singer of one or another falls ill. Thus, she sang Vita while Miss Lang was making ready in the part for Chicago; and she went into the low-comedy woman's part when disaster in her family took Miss Marjorie Leach out of the cast. (Miss Leach's part has been taken over by Miss Marie Dayne, who was so good in the first part of the Chicago run of "Rio Rita.") . . . And Miss Scott is among the young women eager to learn more: her vacations are devoted to studying in Europe.

NEW IN MANHATTAN

THREE novelties, all songless, are listed for the week in the New-York theaters, which, from all accounts, are doing generally better than before the holidays, although attendance for a majority of the offerings is below normal for this time of year: the period between Christmas and Ash Wednesday is by tradition held to be the best for theater-going. . . . The new plays are:

"Dynamo," by Eugene O'Neill, with Glenn Anders, Miss Claudette Colbert, Dudley Digges, George Gaul, Miss Helen Westley, and Mrs. Catherine Calhoun-Doucet. . . . "Dynamo," Mr. O'Neill explains, is the first of a trilogy that will dig at the roots of the sickness of today"; and there is no reason to doubt that he thinks he is just the fellow to do the digging.

"The Whispering-Gallery," by Percy Robinson and Terrence De Marney, with Harry McNaughton. . . . This is an English thriller; and it is said to have been a popular success in London, where the taste in who-done-it pieces differs from that observed in this land.

"My Girl Friday," by William A. Grew, with the author and Miss Lucille Mendez. . . . The author-actor has been industrious with his pen in recent years, but has not yet had a success. It may be recalled that Raymond Hitchcock gave a play of his, "The Big Sap," in 1924 in the Great Northern.

And Many Other Words.

Few people stop to realize the enormity of the task of putting on a Follies production.—The American Sketch.

THEATER-PERSONS

FRANK M'GLYNN, who had the title-rôle in John Drinkwater's "Abraham Lincoln," is to have the principal part in "The Broken Chain," by William J. Perlman, who wrote "Our Country," shown briefly in 1926 in the La Salle. He says the new piece is "a drama of the modern Jew in America." Miss Mary Fowler will be in the cast: she was last here in "The Dybbuk."

Mr. Ziegfeld has engaged George Gershwin to prepare the music for the impending song-and-dance version of "East Is West." . . . As has been told in THE TRIBUNE, Mr. Ziegfeld is eager to get Miss Gertrude Lawrence for the part originated ten years ago by Miss Fay Bainter.

Billy House, who is so funny in "Luckee Girl," tells persons who ask where he has been all their life that he came out of the tent-shows, and was for a time with the Ringlings' circus. As a side-line to his lusty and effective performing in the piece in the Majestic, he writes "acts" and sketches for use in the varieties by other performers. . . . It is said that the Messrs. Shubert have paid $50,000 for the release to them of Mr. House by an agent who held a long-term contract for his services.

Elmer Rice finds his plays once more in demand by managers as a by-product of the success of his piece named "Street-Scene," which is among the current box-office hits in New-York, and says he has in readiness a comedy named "See Naples and Die," which is about Americans in Italy, and a piece named "Life Is Real," whose hero, in fifteen scenes, "is carried from the cradle to grave."

Plays and Such of Ten Years Ago in Chicago Theaters

SUBJOINED are news and comment on plays and shows printed in THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE of February 9, 1919—the date most nearly corresponding to today. The excerpts are verbatim, and not rewrites or summarizations.

"Fiddlers Three," a musical comedy by William Cary Duncan and Alexander Johnstone, with Mlle. Tavie Belge, a prima-donna from Belgium, opens in the Olympic tonight, with Hal Skelley, Thomas Conkey, Miss Louise Groody, Joseph Miller, Miss Josie Intropidi, and numerous others.

And, as already noted, it is remembered mainly for Miss Groody, then an unknown. Mr. Skelly is since come through, thanks to his fitness for the rôle he had in "Burlesque."

The Overseas Revue, a song-and-dance affair which professes to show how they entertained the doughboys back of the trenches, makes its appearance at the Princess for the first time tonight. Miss Elizabeth Brice, back from Over There, is the principal player; and the others include Will Morrissey, Miss May Boley, Clarence Nordstrom, Lon Hascall, Mlle. Marcelle Carroll, and several "acts" from the varieties.

It was an entertaining little show, and all but caught on.

Madame Bertha Kalich approaches a Chicago playhouse as yet unnamed with "The Riddle: Woman," her most recent venture.

She arrived in due time, and with the customary results in the case of Mrs. Kalich's trying to speak English.

At the Illinois, Mitzie in "Head-Over-Heels" is present under one of those contracts which provide that the play shall remain as long as it attracts a stipulated number of spectators. This leaves it somewhat uncertain as to when De Wolf Hopper will arrive with "The Better 'Ole"; but his coming is definitely scheduled as an event of the near future. It is curious that production of the Bairns-father play in Chicago should have been so long delayed. It has been enormously successful elsewhere.

Most contracts for play and shows in Chicago are in kind, so that the date for the succeeding attraction is generally "somewhat uncertain." Mr. Hopper eventually was informed when he might enter the Illinois.

Miss Patricia Collinge, it is told, is due at the Blackstone February 24 with "Tillie," a play made from Mrs. Helen R. Martin's more-or-less widely-read novel, "Tillie, the Mennonite Maid." She will have the assistance of John W. Ransome, Miss Maude Granger, Miss Mildred Booth, and many others. Mr. Arliss departs on February 22.

Miss Collinge, too, arrived in time, and remained many weeks, drawing large attendance at half-rate.

Twenty Years Ago

GOING back through the files to twenty years ago, or to the corresponding Sunday of 1908, the interests of theater-goers were catered to in THE TRIBUNE of February 7 by the paragraphs that follow.

In the Princess Theater, tomorrow evening, "The Prince of To-night," a new musical play by Frank Adams, Will Hough and Joseph E. Howard, in which Henry Woodruff will make his appearance as a star, will be given its first local presentation. It is said to be the most sumptuous and costly in point of settings and costumes that Mr. Singer has yet produced. Besides Woodruff, the players are Georgia Caine, Adele Rowland, Frances Demarest, Louis R. Grisel, Bert Baker, Arthur Aylesworth, and Frank Berresford.

This was one of the long-run successes in the Princess. If you have forgotten it by title, you may recall it as the piece wherein "I Wonder Who's Kissing Her Now!" was the song-hit. . . . Mr. Woodruff is dead a decade or longer. It is years since Miss Demarest has been heard of. Miss Caine is still active; and Miss Rowland reëmerged from Hollywood last Summer for some weeks in the two-a-day.

"The Vampire" is a new play by Edgar Allen Woolf and George Sylvester Viereck, and will be presented in the Grand Monday night. The cast is headed by John E. Kellerd, who plays the vampire. John Westley is the poet and Miss Katherine Florence the painter. The engagement is for one week.

And one week was too long by five nights, in the belief of those who saw "The Vampire." . . . Mr. Kellard was here in 1927 in the revival of "Trolawny of the Wells"; and for a time last season he was Richelieu in the operetta called "The Red Robe." Mr. Westley occasionally reappears; and Miss Florence is all but forgotten, she was the wife of Fritz Williams.

The Follies of 1908, with Bickel and Watson as its chief comedians; Nora Bayes, Jack Norworth, Arthur Deagon, Billie Reeves, Annabelle Whitford, Grace Leigh, William Powers, William Schrode, Seymour Brown, Dazie, the dancer, the Nell Brinkley Girls, the Taxicab Girls, Mosquito Girls, Rooser Girls, Drummer Girls, and the Navy Girls, the society prize-fight, and some new songs, will begin a four-week engagement at the Auditorium tonight.

The Ziegfeld Follies of any year was a sad affair when undertaken in the Auditorium. That of 1908 was second in the series.

In the Illinois Theater, next Sunday, Lillian Russell will appear in a revised version of her last season's comedy, "Wildfire." The seat-sale is to begin Thursday.

Miss Russell's box-office success in "Wildfire" was sensational at the time; and, who recalls the play?

GOOD ACTING AS AN ACTRESS

MISS HAIDEE WRIGHT

SHE'S in "The Royal Family," wherein she is cast as Fanny Cavendish, matriarch of a clan of actors; and it is the expressed belief of The Tribune's reporter of plays and acting that nobody else would be nearly so good in the part as is Miss Wright. . . . This English actress first won attention in Chicago in the part of the Painted Lady in "The Passing of the Third-Floor-Back," in support of Forbes-Robertson. The late Fred Wright, here last year as the low-comedian in Winthrop Ames' Gilbert-and-Sullivan revivals, was a brother.

"Names Make News."

Mitzi, who has been there since Christmas, will move out of the Garrick the 23d, and will be succeeded, the 25th, by "And So to Bed," the comedy about Samuel Pepys by James Bernard Fagan, an English playwright now busy in this land as an actor in support of Miss Frances Starr.

D'Oyly Carte, son of and successor to the R. D'Oyly Carte who was the partner of and producer for Gilbert and Sullivan in their merry heyday, is soon to have his name in Chicago print and sign-painting: the troupe of English operetta-singers under his management will visit the Blackstone for a fortnight about March 4, and will give there at least four of the Gilbert-Sullivan pieces.

Louis Wolheim, last in Chicago late in 1926 in a foolish piece named "In This Room," is to come out of Hollywood, where he has been since then, to perform in a piece named "The Wrestler," by Jack Larrie. . . . Mr. Wolheim, who may not be easily recalled for "In This Room," should be remembered here for his acting as Captain Flagg in "What Price Glory!" and in the title-part of "The Hairy Ape."

Miss Gladys Baxter, who has made a stunning personal success in the current performances of "Music in May," is to have the title-rôle of Emmerich Kalman's "The Duchess of Chicago" when that operetta is put on in this country by the Messrs. Shubert.

¶ ¶ ¶

Miss Mary Newcomb, who has been acting there in the two-character play named "Jealousy," is called a gifted and notable actress by the newspapers in London, where, however, the play was not too successful. Crane Wilbur, here last year in "A Man with Red Hair," had the other rôle. . . . And "Jealousy," on view for some weeks past in New-York, is to be taken off there at the end of the week and sent on tour. Miss Fay Bainter and John Halliday have the respective rôles.

Miss Barbara Stanwyck, who was here in the Autumn in "Burlesque," is appearing with her husband, Frank Fay, in a sketch by Vincent Lawrence called "The Conflict." . . . Hal Skelly, who was her co-star in "Burlesque," is still performing in that piece, which is, however, no longer among the enterprises of Arthur Hopkins, who rewrote it and then staged it.

Raymond Hitchcock is engaged this week in Milwaukee in acting Cyril Maude's original rôle in Frederick Lonsdale's thin comedy named "Aren't We All?" shown four years ago in the Blackstone.

George Jessel says that he will soon cease to perform in "The War-Song," and that he will devote the next three years to sound-films.

Edward Wappler, who is house-manager of the Blackstone, is represented in the current exhibition of works by Chicago painters in the Art Institute by a portrait of Frank Wilson in the title-rôle of "Porgy": Mr. Wilson was the actor of the crippled beggar in the recent performances of the Haywards' piece in the Blackstone.

Ervine Diagnoses Theater Ailments

By Burns Mantle.

America with Herr Reinhardt's actors and gave one Sunday night recital.

Wednesday night there were no openings and I, being restless and a terrible bridge player, wandered into town. Also into the Fulton theater. And found the lobby jammed with people. Waited a half hour before I could get inside the theater, which was also packed. And such enthusiasm!

Here was an entirely new theater public, so far as I was concerned, gathered to applaud an art both rare and exotic, not as a pose, but because they evidently were thrilled by it.

Kreutzberg, those who know tell me, is the greatest male dancer since Nijinsky pathetically came to believe that he was a horse and was retired to a sanitarium.

Certainly Kreutzberg is the greatest dancer I have seen since Nijinsky. Perfect body control. Perfect rhythm. Fascinating in pose, amazing in grace. His leaps, when he does a Russian dance, set his audiences applauding wildly. His weird groupings when he and Mlle. Georgi illustrate, say, a Debussy suite, excite a similar rapture. Even I, who probably know less about this type of dancing than any other human, was thrilled by these two. Mlle. Georgi is, in her way, quite as wonderful as Kreutzberg.

He is a Bavarian, she a French Alsatian. Their bodies are solid and German, but their souls must be Greek. They are to have only a few recitals this visit, but they are coming again next year for a tour of the country.

New Musical Comedy Promises Well.

A new musical comedy is "Lady Fingers," fashioned by Eddie Buzzell from that fairly good farce Owen Davis wrote for Otto Kruger and Victor Moore a few seasons ago. "Easy Come, Easy Go," was the title then. In the new form it is rather good fun. Buzzell has sprinkled it with his own jokes and the Davis situations hold up well.

It is the story, you may recall, of a gentleman and a crook who in some mysterious off stage way become pals. The gentleman cares for the crook through a spell of fever, and the crook, being grateful, lets the gentleman in on a bank robbery. The two are forced to hide on a health farm, where the gentleman discovers that the bank they have robbed belongs to the girl he sings duets with. The plot is much more complicated than the duets.

Buzzell, playing the crook, is not a bad little fellow. He hopes one day to retire and start a "nice, quiet little roadhouse where a man can bring the wife and kiddies and get cock-eyed." . . . He is also feeling much better since he has been dieting on donkey's milk—you know, that "acidophilus" stuff. . . . He lives ordinarily a retired life, going only to Maine for the fishing and Chicago for the shooting. . . . And finally he is not one easily to take offense when the doctor tells him he is "an-emic." He thinks the doc means one of those harem guards. "I Love You More Than Yesterday," is the favored song.

More of the "Boom-Boom" Stuff.

Another new musical show is called, for some reason, "Boom, Boom." Going boom-boom, it seems, is a more or less hilarious experience. This one is saved largely by the cast, which is headed by Frank McIntyre and Jeanette MacDonald. The French base was a farce called "Mlle. Mama" or something like, and tells of a pretty girl who was forced to become her own sweetheart's stepmother.

Capt. George Fried, Officer Harry Manning and the Florida rescuers attended the opening, which gave the lobby boys a great chance. "God help the poor sailors on a night like this!" declared one.

A routine but inoffensive entertainment. Nothing to rave about as to wit. "I've been in the hospital a long time," reports McIntyre. "Pretty sick?" queries Miss MacDonald. "No. Pretty nurse," answers Frank.

The Shuberts have been generous with scenery and things to wear. A burlesque comedian named Harry Welch is well liked. But a general impression appears to be that "Boom, Boom" faw down and go bum. "What Could I Do?" is the chief song.

Rural Players Fare Badly.

Universal Pictures thought to make talk for their coming picturization of "Show Boat" by importing a real show boat company from the rivers. They brought in the Princess company from Beverly, O., guaranteeing the proprietor, Norman F. Thom, a nice profit and expenses. Mr. Thom, it appears, is known as "the John Drew of the river." He and his troupe, including Mrs. Thom and Little Kim, who sells her photographs between acts and takes part in the Olio, presented two dramas, "The Parson's Bride" to open, and "In the Shadows of the Hills" to close.

Broadway did not find the river troupers as novel as was expected. A few gathered to cheer virtue and to hiss villainy, but the many stayed away. They are all honest players, no more crude than many who have played frequently in this center of sophistication. But the plays, of course, are terrible.

He's one of the authors of "The Royal Family," now in the Selwyn, and of "The Front Page," which has for some weeks been in the Erlanger. Another contribution by him to the current stage is "Animal Crackers," wherein the Marx Brothers are performing in New-York. Mr. Kaufman, with Marc Connelly, wrote "Dulcy," "To the Ladies!" and "The Deep-Tangled Wildwood," and dramatized "Merton of the Movies"; and he dramatized Edna Ferber's tale of "Old Man Minnick" and wrote the "book" of "The Cocoanuts," in which the Messrs. Marx were seen in 1928 in Chicago. And he is incidentally the editor of the drama-columns in the New-York Times.

Segovia Gives First Chicago Concert Today; Guitar Is New Instrument When He Plays

By Edward Moore.

Of music off the beaten track, Andrés Segovia must be acknowledged to be the leader for the coming week. He plays the guitar, and when he appears at the Studebaker this afternoon it will be his first time in Chicago.

All that can be discovered of him in reference works is that he was born in Jaén, Spain, in 1894, and that his art represents a link between the romantic school of the nineteenth century, Carnicer, Arcas, and Tárrega, and the modern style. This scarcely classifies as a flood of enlightenment, but they add from New York, where he has been greatly approved for two seasons, that under his fingers the guitar is by no means the thrumming box of a few simple chords that one ordinarily thinks of in this connection, but a complex, delicate, and highly responsive instrument.

Revives Fine Old Music.

A good part of his service to music has been the revival of much fine old music originally composed for the lute. How fine some of this music is was illustrated a few years ago when Ottorino Respighi picked up a collection of it in Italy and arranged it both for piano and modern orchestra.

Segovia will present some of this today. His program will begin with some Spanish and Italian pieces and continue with a suite by Bach, also written for lute, a prelude, loure, fugue—yes, one plays fugues on the guitar, if one knows how—sarabande, bourrée and gavotte. Later there will be music of a more modern type, a sonata by Manuel Ponce, dedicated to Segovia, and a group by Albeniz.

Ancients and Their Contemporaries.

Apropos of nothing in particular, it has only been within the last few years that people in general have begun to appreciate how much the ancients knew about writing attractive music. There were a few gigantic and revered names, Bach, Handel, and the rest, but most people knew little about what they actually did, and less about their contemporaries. For that matter, how many people know Handel's music today, outside of the so-called Largo and "The Messiah"? Yet there is an infinite quantity of fine things in his other works, likewise in the works of even less known contemporaries.

Rediscoveries of the old are fascinating; it would be more fascinating if one could tell what the old performers really sounded like. All of us have at times indulged in artless prattle about present day singers, and have been transfixed and left speechless by some elder who remembered Patti, just as he in his time had probably been silenced by some one who remembered Jenny Lind, and so on back to the beginning of song. Then we begin to wonder how much of it was true and how much due to the exaggerations of glamorous memories. What a thing it would have been if the phonograph had been invented about the time of the harpsichord!

When Singers Really Sang.

In Handel's time it was undoubtedly true that there were singers such as the world has never known since. For proof of what sounds like a rash statement, all you need to do is to look at the scores of some of his operas, "Rodelinda," "Julius Cæsar," and the like. Every few pages you will run into a passage, which in its floral display, makes you breathless just to look at the notes. Lungs and breath control seem to have meant something in those days, on a conservative estimate about three or four times as much as they do now.

You may be sure, too, that such passages were actually performed. Handel was an experienced and practical man of the theater, and if he wrote these bewildering, these unbelievable collections of notes, it was because he had singers in his company who could do them. And they were not for any particular stellar executant, either, but for every one. The bass had to do his long-breathed roulades and his trills quite as readily as the top soprano, and every one in between had to do the same sort of thing.

For several seasons they have been reviving some of the less known Handel operas in Germany, to what would seem the great delight of attending patrons. One wonders where they find the singers to do them. I, for one, should greatly dislike being given the task of casting "Julius Cæsar" with any hope of more than approximating what Handel wrote. At that, these old pieces are filled full of exquisite, lovely, persuasive melodies, holding their own with the best tunes of the nineteenth century, and leaving the twentieth simply nowhere. But you will have to pick them out for yourselves. You have a small chance of hearing them performed.

Three Soloists with Symphony.

Three soloists for three concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra are announced for the week. Heinrich Schlusnus, the baritone, who appeared a couple of times with the Civic Opera company a year ago and also gave some concerts here and there, will take the center of the stage Tuesday afternoon. He is bulletined for an aria from Borodin's "Prince Igor" and a group of songs by Beethoven, Mahler, and Schubert. The symphony by the orchestra will be Brahms' third.

Harold Van Horne, pianist and winner of the Society of American Musicians' contest, will play Liszt's First Concerto at the "pop" Thursday evening, with Beethoven's Eighth Symphony, Rubin Goldmark's "A Negro Rhapsody," and Glazounow's First Waltz as some of the orchestra features.

For the Friday and Saturday programs Yelli d'Aranyi, violinist, will make her first appearance in Chicago. She is a Hungarian and the grandniece of Joseph Joachim. Her two numbers will be the "Concerto Accademico" by Williams and Ravel's "Tzigane." Mr. Stock plans to include Bruckner's Seventh Symphony and Turina's "La Procesión del Rocio."

Civic Opera Goes West.

By the time this is printed, the Chicago Civic Opera company will have finished its assignments in Boston and taken its special trains for the long trip out to the Pacific coast and back to this city, an undertaking which will occupy the next six weeks. The Boston engagement would seem to have been a successful one both financially and with respect to what was said about the performances. Musical Director Giorgio Polacco is credited with an especial personal hit for his conducting, there were words of extra kindness for Rosa Raisa and Edith Mason, and the newcomers in general came off well.

Several of the songbirds have already taken flight for foreign bookings. Margherita Salvi sang once, as Norina in "Don Pasquale," and sailed Feb. 1 to meet an engagement at Monte Carlo Feb. 15. Frida Leider was announced to sail Friday night for appearances at the Berlin Staatsoper and her fifth season at Covent Garden, London. Eva Turner engaged a stateroom on the boat sailing last night for Genoa, where she has engagements, with later ones at Milan and Rome.

Here and There in Music.

Moriz Rosenthal was grouped among today's musical eminences up to a short time ago. It now appears, however, that certain complexions in the matter of bookings have made it impossible for him to be here. It is understood that he will give a recital at the Goodman next Sunday afternoon, and another a month after that date.

Chicago now has a club of Bohemians, patterned after the New York organization of the same name. In fact, at the organizing meeting, held last Monday night at the Great Northern hotel, the constitution and by-laws of the New York club were adopted without change for the Chicago group. Frederick Stock is the president, Herbert Witherspoon and Karleton Hackett were elected vice presidents, Herbert Hyde treasurer, and Ramon Girvin, secretary. The remainder of the board of governors includes the names of Felix Borowski, Robert Macdonald, Glenn Dillard Gunn, Edward Moore, Edgar Nelson, and Jacques Gordon. Rubin Goldmark, president of the New York Bohemians, made an address at the opening meeting explaining the establishment of the Musicians' Foundation and the administration of its fund for charitable purposes.

GUITARIST

ANDRES SEGOVIA

He looks as though he belonged in a Schubert centennial celebration as the exponent of the leading part, but in reality he is the most famous soloist of the guitar in the world. Born in Spain, he has been playing in the east for two seasons, where he is greatly popular, and he will make his first Chicago appearance at the Studebaker this afternoon.

The Voice of the Movie Fan

For a Spanking Good Time.

"Dear Miss Tinée: As a regular reader of THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE I saw that amusing letter in which your correspondent asks for "bigger and better" film spankings. I believe there is just a little point to her criticism. "Pyjamas" I don't know, but I saw "Water Hole." In this the hero tells the naughty flapper heroine that if she doesn't have his coffee ready by such a time he'll "spank the daylight out of her." She pitches the coffee pot on the ground, and uses the water supply for a bath, whereupon he turns her over his knee and proceeds to administer—four spanks! Hardly in keeping with advance notices!

Now, don't jump to the conclusion that the writer is thirsting to see a wicked young woman of 18 or thereabouts thoroughly spanked. No doubt in many cases such treatment is indicated, but it really isn't done. I doubt if in real life in a case such as depicted in "The Water Hole" any mere man would have had—shall we say the courage?—to spank the young woman, even if he felt she thoroughly deserved it. But if it did really happen I think there would be more than four spanks! A film reproduction of a real honest-to-goodness spanking might be somewhat hard on the nerves of the audience, and as such representations as that given in the film in question are really burlesques, as your correspondent says, why introduce such scenes at all?

There is just one case in which they might be useful. I have several times thought that if a film depicting the antics of "flaming youth" ended with a scene depicting the young idiots across their parents' knees, receiving attention from the business end of a hair brush, it might possibly do some good, by suggestion at any rate. The scene would have to be realistic, of course, and would call for more than four spanks!

The difficulty, as your correspondent says, would be to find any one willing to be the victim of an honest-to-goodness spanking in order to produce a realistic spanking. Most of us "to be spanked we don't really enjoy!"

Yours foolishly,
ANOTHER EX-SPANKER.
[A man, this time.]

More Swanson Pictures.

Dear Miss Tinée: Isn't there anything you can do or say to bring us more Swanson pictures? How I loved that woman as Sadie Thompson; also "Stage Madness," or whatever it was, where she was dreamin' dreams over a plate of beans, some years ago—two or three.

All these royalty pictures, such as "Dream of Love," are getting so tiresome.

See what you can do, please.
HELEN EMCH.

Editor's Note: I can print your letter.

SUPER-HOOFER

JACK DONAHUE

He's pictured here as he is "off," although he is among the comic chaps who go in heavily for make-up. It is all but ten years since he first took high attention in Chicago by his dancing and antics in "Angel-Face," in the Colonial, although he had been here earlier in 1919 in the second issue of "Hitchy-Koo." That Mr. Donahue is now co-star with Miss Marilyn Miller in "Rosalie" is, doubtless, the knowledge of every theater-goer in town.

THE ARMCHAIR PLAYGOER

For those who do their theater-going in the armchair or who like to read the plays they see.

By Fanny Butcher.

NEW YORK.

THIS week is a fallow one for those who are temperamentally chained to their own firesides of an evening, but who have a flair for the drayma. There are no New York openings for them. They have a blessing, however, in the publication of "Wings Over Europe," by Robert Nichols and Maurice Browne, which has been one of the sensations of the season in New York.

MAURICE BROWNE.

ROBERT NICHOLS.

The play takes place entirely in No. 10 Downing street. The prime minister and the members of a cabinet committee are the only actors, except the hero of the play and three or four unimportant messengers and men of sorts. There is no "action" whatever. There are a few trampings about in the last act, but nothing really happens physically. The action is entirely in the minds of the characters. What goes on behind the impressive shells of the cabinet ministers is what makes the play so startlingly effective.

"Wings Over Europe" is concerned with the discovery by a young scientist—a person much like Mr. McCutcheon's "Master of the World"—of the means of disintegrating the atom. He offers his discovery to the world through Great Britain, because his uncle is prime minister. He hopes for the cabinet's proposals of a scheme of life for the betterment of mankind. He finds only a group of men who are actuated by their own personal interests. One wants to use the new power to subjugate the world, entirely misunderstanding the young idealist's program.

When they refuse to outline a program and beg him for the sake of the world's peace and comfort to tell the secret of his discovery, and when he refuses, determine to arrest him, he throws his final bomb into the camp by giving them just 15 minutes to change their minds before he lets all of England to bits. There have been seen experiments—between the acts—and have no choice but to believe that he is telling the truth and that he can destroy the island.

It is during those few minutes that the most dramatic moments of the play take place. The excitement rises in a crescendo through the moments of waiting, while each one proves—or disproves—his point, to the tense moment when the young inventor is run down by a lorry, and culminats in the [illegible] shooting of the dying man by one of the ministers just as a telegram is received from the society of nations in Geneva that the discovery is known to them and they have sent squadrons of airplanes [which are wings over Europe] to insure a readjustment of life which shall be a sort of United States of Mankind [though they don't call it that].

It is, as you see, entirely a play of ideas. But so intense are those ideas that they make their own drama.

Chicago has a superb interest in "Wings Over Europe" because one of the authors, Maurice Browne, was the director of the Chicago Little theater, which was the pioneer little theater in America. They have been suggesting in New York that he be labeled St. Maurice because he is the patron of the enormously widespread little theater movement. And the other author, Robert Nichols, was a visitor to Chicago right after the war, when he came to this country on a sort of official English delegate to the celebration which the Society of Arts and Letters organized to celebrate and promote Anglo-American friendship. He was one of the young poets of the war.

IN CHICAGO.

The second week of the Stratford-on-Avon Festival company's Shakespearean season offers only one new play, Richard III., one of the favorite historical tragedies, and a part in which Edwin Booth is still talked about by the reminiscers. It was this gentleman, Richard III., from whom Jap leaped the immortal words, "A horse! A horse! My kingdom for a horse!" You never can tell until you do a little intensive reading in Shakespeare how many present day wisecracks you can find in his classic phrases. The horse episode was really connected with a horse—it was as Richard's mount was killed under him that he made the famous plea to Fate.

Talkies May Bring Bill Hart Back to Screen; Voice Heard in Hollywood via Phonograph

By Rosalind Shaffer.

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—[Special Correspondence.]—The arrival of four talking machine records that Bill Hart has made for an eastern company was occasion for a dinner party at his Newhall ranch home.

The records are "Just Dog," "Laska," "Pinto Ben," and a classic, Edgar Allan Poe's "Annabelle." Hart, who broke into stage work as a young man, along with John and Ethel Barrymore, William Farnum and others of that era, and trained under such men as Dion Boucicault, so far has had no chance to give his motion picture public the benefit of his remarkable stage voice. But with the coming of talkies and especially the release of the records, he bids fair to reclaim a prominent position in the motion picture industry.

Guests at the dinner included Charley Mack—the Mack of Moran and Mack of "Two Black Crows" fame—and Mrs. Mack, Eddie Dowling and James Hanley of "Honeymoon Lane" fame, and Mrs. Dowling, known professionally as Ray Dooley, Follies comedienne, who originated the "I Faw Down, I Go Boom" gag now sweeping the country, and Mr. and Mrs. Lambert Hillyer, Hillyer having directed many of Hart's successes on the screen.

Behind the Scenes.

Entertainment during the evening was of that priceless sort that no stage audiences ever really gets. Repartee and stories, interspersed with some of Eddie Dowling's songs and James Hanley's accompaniments, kept up a ceaseless patter.

Dowling sang all the numbers from his stage success and many others as well, including "Sleepy Valley," the theme song of his new picture, whose lyrics he wrote, while Hanley composed the music. The picture is for Christie Paramount release and is called "Broadway Bound." It is a talkie.

Hanley and Dowling, in the true tradition of such folks, do most of their composing in odd moments. Whenever another number was to be sung it was up to Hanley to retrieve that particular number from one of his four pockets, all bulging with such scribblings.

Hot Cakes Nearly Fatal.

Charley Mack, who is the lazy darky of the "Two Black Crows" team, evolved a gag which he has been pulling at hotels at which he stopped on his way across the country. It started at French Lick and is still going strong in Hollywood.

He enters a hotel, calls the head waiter, and warns him that he is traveling for his health and requests him to see that he eats no hot cakes during his stay, as his doctor has warned him that, with his extremely delicate stomach, they would prove fatal. However, he confides to the head waiter he is mighty fond of hot cakes and must be protected against himself in case he should order any.

Then at the first breakfast in the hotel he orders hot cakes. All of the waiters assure him that they never serve hot cakes at that hotel, and then the fun begins. He begs, entreats and cajoles, finally threatens and calls for the manager. The dialogue which Mack supplies in recounting his experiences with this gag is really funny. In one hotel he was taken with an attack of flu and when the doctor was visiting him and taking his temperature one of the colored waiters entered with a tray of food. Crash went the tray and the waiter dashed out, his hand to his head, and shouting: "Whoever done give dat boy a hot cake?"

Reception by the Negroes.

Mrs. Mack had a tale of a little skinny chauffeur they hired in New York. Half way to a party, she discovered that the chauffeur had had his cap decorated with huge gold letters spelling "Two Black Crows," and the birds embroidered in black on the cap above the band.

The rear of the car had been embellished with an extra tail light, which cast its effulgent gleam on a large emblem of two black crows.

A stop at a hotel on the way and a pair of manicure scissors soon divested the cap of its heraldic device, much to the sorrow of the chauffeur.

Mack, who is a red headed Irishman by pedigree, was quite thrilled to see his name recently in a publication for colored folks. His name appeared, along with those of Booker T. Washington, Paul Dunbar, and other colored celebrities, among those who had done the most for the Negroes. Mack says he has found out he is accepted as a colored man by many members of that race.

Bill Hart's butler, a southern Negro, exclaimed when Bill told him about Mack being his guest, "Dis is de end ob de world," and went out to tell his wife, the cook, Lulu, about it. Hart's butler confided it was the proudest moment of his life to have Mr. Mack for a guest in the house, even after he perceived that the distinguished guest was a white man.

Ruth Doffs Her Costume.

Ruth Clifford, who is resuming work in pictures after some months off the screen, is working in "Somewhere in Argentine," as a slightly careless girl, not bad, but a contrast to the sweet ingenues she played for so long.

A scene was being made down at Los Angeles harbor this week. Ruth had to fall off a boat and swim to shore in an evening dress. No one but a motion picture company could think up something like that, but Ruth was game and she is an excellent swimmer.

When she landed in the water, the dress became wrapped about her ankles. Ruth finally kicked free and swam to shore. Imagine her embarrassment, on landing, to find herself dressed in the waist of an evening dress but, below the waist, clad only in black swimming tights. In her struggle she had torn the whole skirt off at the waist.

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer lays claim to having signed the world's champion endurance toe dancer in Joyce Blanche Murray. In "Broadway Melody" Miss Murray does the triple wing, the web foot wing, and the fast raffle, these difficult steps being done for the first time on the toes. Her record for dancing on her toes is seventeen minutes, which is believed to be a world's mark. She started her career doing the Charleston, the Black Bottom, and varsity on her toes. She is considered a find, having the kind of profile that makes the grand duke put on his monocle.

My Best Joke

What is the best joke you ever heard? If you'll write it out and it is published $1 will be paid. No manuscripts returned. Address Best Jokes Editor, The Tribune, Chicago.

Canny, as Usual.

A Scotchman took some eggs to a restaurant, and, after counting them, found there were 12 dozen and one over. He was going to take the extra egg home with him but the proprietor of the restaurant asked him what he would take for it.

"I'll take a drink," he replied.

"All right what will you have?"

"Eggnog." J. K.

Extreme Cruelty.

The Judge—Can you describe any specific act of cruelty on the part of your husband?

The Complainant—I should say I can! Whenever he had anything to say to me he'd call me up on the telephone and say it, and then disconnect before I had a chance to talk back to him. W. J.

TWO-LIP TIME

IT'S two-lip time in "Red Hot Speed." This scene is from Reginald Denny's latest, which is the feature film at the State-Lake theater this week. Alice Day plays opposite the star.

My Greatest Thrill

Write and tell us about the greatest thrill you ever experienced, and if we print your letter we'll pay you $1. Make your letters short and snappy. Address them to "Greatest Thrill" Editor, The Chicago Tribune.

Near Death.

My greatest thrill came one morning when my chum and I were walking down the street and all of a sudden heard a loud rumble. A huge truck loaded with coal came crashing backwards down the street and bounced over the sidewalk into a corner of a large brick building just about two feet in front of us. The impact of the heavy truck on the sidewalk reduced the concrete walk to dust and also broke off a corner of the brick building. We stood for a few moments, paralyzed, thinking what it would have done to us had we taken two more steps.

The truck had been backed up against the curb on the opposite side of the street in front of a bakery where the coal was to be delivered. The brakes in some manner did not hold and the truck started down the hill. The driver, when he noticed his truck going down the street, yelled out frantically, but it being a windy day, we were not able to hear him and didn't see the truck until it crashed right in front of us.

Talk about a thrill! We'll never forget that one. A. T.

First Trip Abroad.

I believe the greatest thrill of my life was when I found myself on an ocean liner bound for my first and only trip abroad, amid the pleasant confusion and good-byes. I had to pinch myself to see if it was really poor me starting on such a pleasant adventure.

Of course I was at the romantic age of 18 and the whole voyage on that magnificent ocean liner seemed like a delightful fairy tale come true. G. W.

Out of Gas.

My greatest thrill occurred one night when I took my dad's car and three of us girls went out for a ride in the country. Being an unusually lovely night, we rode about ten miles out of the city.

On returning—when we were about three miles out—the car stalled and we noticed we were out of gas! No one in sight, no lights about, we stood there speechless. Then, suddenly hearing the cries of coyotes and the spooky wind in the trees, we were so frightened that all we could do was push the car home.

The idea of pushing that car a distance of three miles on that lonely road thrills us yet. R. P.

Altalker Displays Crowded Half Hour

By Mae Tinee.

Tuesday afternoon!

Howdidde look and whaddid he wear?

Looked something grand and had on a powder blue shirt and a blue necktie—among other things. Note that girls, when giving sartorial advice to the boy friend. Mr. Meighan—blue shirt, blue tie; Col. Tim McCoy—blue shirt, blue tie; Reginald Denny—blue shirt, blue tie. Think it over.

News of his coming certainly created a lot of excitement around THE TRIBUNE office! Hasn't been that much since the day Valentino made his last appearance here. Our own grapevine telegraph did good duty and a steady stream of thrilled maidens and carefully nonchalant gentlemen streamed back and forth through the doorway that was nearest where Mr. Meighan sat.

He's Pretty Nice.

Well, no wonder. He is nice! Regular. No pose. Easy as an old shoe. I sat him down facing in as many directions as possible, asking the while:

"How does it feel to have everybody looking at you?"

He said he never minded unless he was eating spaghetti.

And that reminded him of a night not long ago when he and Mrs. Meighan stood on the curb, waiting for a taxi after the theater.

"You always sort of know what people are doing near you," my visitor said, "and I knew a girl standing by was nudging the man with her and whispering: 'SSSSSS—Thomas Meighan! Isn't he wonderful!' But the man didn't bother to whisper. He said right out loud: 'Hell! What's wonderful about him . . . . !'"

On His Way West.

Mr. Meighan was on his way to the coast to make an altalker for Warner Brothers—"The Argyle Case." George Ade had wanted him to go around the world with him instead, but Mr. Meighan made no bones of saying frankly that the moneyed tones of vitaphone sounded sweeter in his ear than the honeyed ones of Mr. Ade.

Well—we just chatted on. He knows lots of good stories and how to tell them. Mr. Quin Ryan [I give him publicity in my column, but does he ever advertise me in his? No!] sent down to beseech Mr. Meighan to say a few words over W-G-N. Which was when Our Hero, with blush and a smile and a rumble in his throat, rose to go.

HE'S JUST LIKE ME! He can't talk over the radio—and he knows it!

See you tomorrow.

"Glorious Betsy."

The best picture I have seen is "Glorious Betsy," with Dolores Costello and Conrad Nagel. The beautiful scenery in this picture makes it appealing to our sense of beauty; the acting of Dolores Costello is just as wonderful as herself. In the scene where she waits for her husband to return she acts so naturally and appealingly that a friend of mine with whom I visited the theater swore during this scene never to see another picture in all his life again if Betsy would not get "him" back, after all.

Besides, this picture has a lot of action in it—most pictures nowadays lack that—so that it is interesting from beginning to the happy ending. R. W. M.

Music Notes

News relayed from headquarters of the German Grand Opera company, due at the Auditorium during the week of Feb. 17, includes word of the return of Johanna Gadski to the stage after an absence of twelve years. Elsewhere the bulletin contains this:

The other principal artists include Mary Diercks, one of Germany's greatest Brunnhildes; Ottilie Metzger-Lattermann, for years the Erda at the Bayreuth festivals; Waldemar Henke, foremost impersonator of Mime; Willy Zilken and Hans Taenzler, heroic tenors; Carl Braun, basso, and Wotan of last summer's Bayreuth festival; Werner Klus, baritone, a marvelous Alberich; and Richard Gross, a truly remarkable Wotan.

Seldom have Americans been afforded the opportunity to hear these four musical dramas constituting the "Nibelungen Ring" in such close sequence.

Mme. Gadski will appear in the performance of "Die Walkuere" Tuesday evening, Feb. 17; "Siegfried," Thursday evening, Feb. 21, and "Gotterdaemmerung," Saturday evening, Feb. 23.

Ganna Walska now says that she is going to sing in New York. The time will be next Tuesday afternoon; the place, Carnegie hall. She is thus quoted on the subject:

"I will succeed in my music. I have struggled ahead like many other singers and now I am ready to place myself before those great critics, the American people, and to let them judge of me as they have judged of other artists in the past. I work harder than any one else works; that is what every singer thinks, and when I appear I will be giving the best that is in me, and I believe in the justice of the American press and the American people so heartily that I am willing to be judged on my merits alone. I love America dearly despite occasional criticisms, and I shall love it whether they shall like me in my career as an artist or whether they shall not."

They are saying in New York that plans for the new opera house are proceeding slowly and with caution. Negotiations for the site are in progress, but the directors are finding that the cost of the undertaking has become a prominent factor and is being weighed with much care.

An air of considerable sobriety pervades the program which Sergei Rachmaninoff will play at Orchestra hall this afternoon. It includes a Mozart sonata, two Scarlatti sonatas, Schumann's "Carnaval," a Chopin group, his own "Moment Musical," and his arrangement of Kreisler "Liebesfreud."

Chicago Gangland: The True Story of Its Crimes and Vices

By James O'Donnell Bennett.

ting than in this paragraph on the setting in which lay the man whom sober Morgan Collins had called "Chicago's arch-criminal":

"Silver angels stood at the head and feet with their heads bowed in the light of the ten candles that burned in the solid golden candlesticks they held in their hands. Beneath the casket, on the marble slab that supports its glory, is the inscription, 'Suffer little children to come unto me.' And over it all the perfume of flowers."

What a pity Molière could not have lived forever! Satire still needs him.

A rosary lay in the gangster's hands —"the soft tapered hands that could finger an automatic so skilfully," sighed a sob sister of sozzly journalism, and her sigh was printed.

She also had appreciative words for the living and, taking a fresh start from "over it all the perfume of flowers," she swept into this incomparable bathos:

"But vying with that perfume was the fragrance of perfumed women, wrapped in furs from ears to ankles, who tiptoed down the aisle, escorted by soft stepping, tailored gentlemen" [you catch that "gentlemen"] "with black, shining pompadours.

"And, softly treading, deftly changing places, were more well formed gentlemen in tailored garments, with square, blue steel jaws and shifting glances. They were the sentinels.

"In the soft light of the candles at the head of the $10,000 casket sat Mrs. O'Banion, a picture of patient sorrow."

Saying It with Flowers.

And the flowers!

When gangsters disagree the murderers say it with bullets and the mourners say it with flowers. Two days before the funeral of a gangster who ranked as "a big shot" the surviving big shots of his gang, or of gangs that had operated with his gang, will come to their favorite florist and throw down from five thousand to ten thousand dollars for flowers.

Hence the O'Banion rites were extraordinarily floral. One feature piece was a heart composed of American beauty roses and standing eight feet high. There was a huge wreath from the Teamsters' union. A basket of roses have the card of "Scarface" Capone. There was a blanket of roses, orchids, and lilies measuring seven by ten feet. It was sent to cover the grave in Mount Carmel cemetery, where O'Banion had bought a lot in which he had buried a fellow gangster, John Sheey, who was killed in a brawl at the Rendezvous cafe almost a year before O'Banion was killed. There were other flowers by the truckload including two broken columns, and an arch from which swung two white doves, emblems of peace. In all there were twenty-six truckloads.

Extracting the Sting of Death.

The press had done a good job of sozzle during the three days of "lying in state."

For the actual funeral they released everything. The high flown terminology which must convince susceptible youth that gang life is the life and gang death rather a stingless dissolution was employed with glib shamelessness.

"The élite of the gun world," began one account in a reputable newspaper, "gave O'Banion a magnificent funeral, a testimonial of the leadership he had attained in the realm where gunplay makes millionaires." It was recorded that Louis Alterie and Earl [Hymie] Weiss, surviving gangsters, had "cried as women might" and that "many others had handkerchiefs to their eyes."

Whatever spectacular features "the élite of gangdom" failed to provide were supplied by a gawking community whose antics also were recorded.

"The sidewalks were jammed with people for blocks to the north and to the south of the Sbarbaro chapel" —"Hundreds of middle aged women passed by the $10,000 casket"—"Buildings across the street had hundreds of men on the roofs."—"Mounted policemen had to precede street cars to enable them to pass."—"For more than two hours the throngs had pressed forward."—"Five hundred automobiles were at the cemetery awaiting the coming of the cortége . . . and every electric line car that came there was packed."—"Five thousand people were there before the body left Chicago."

The Practicalities of Gangdom.

Here are two arresting proofs of the foresightedness of gangdom:

The gang officiating at the funeral gave orders that no photographs should be taken. Cameras were snatched from newspaper photographers, plates were smashed, and blows were struck. There was sound reason for this violence. The criminals were taking no risks of identification for deeds committed or in contemplation.

The second precaution was equally practical:

Just before the meagre musical service at undertaker's establishment detectives from the Chicago police department moved unobtrusively among the bereaved and warned them against any careless display or impetuous use of weapons during the last rites. The grieving gangsters took the hint and partially disarmed for the period of time required for the ride from Wells street to the Roman Catholic campo santo, Mount Carmel, which lies beyond the city limits and, consequently, outside Chicago police control.

Willing hands, however, carried some of their weapons to the cemetery ahead of the funeral procession, so that Alterie and other gangsters who had vowed vengeance against O'Banion's slayers might not be unprepared if homicidal emergencies developed during the trip back to town. "Many persons," says one account of the day's performances, "noticed the revolvers being passed to their owners by the advance gunbearers of those who came with the corpse."

Therefore order reigned in Wells street, "only one man," the veracious chronicler, James Doherty, wrote, "being disorderly enough to be arrested."

Cardinal Puts Foot Down.

Only the Roman Catholic archdiocese remained chill to the former acolyte. The gangsters had counted on a requiem high mass for their hero in Holy Name cathedral. The cardinal archbishop put his foot down—and it is an emphatic foot—on that, and the chancellery refused sanction for the burial of O'Banion in consecrated ground. This refusal was not, of course, based on the grounds that "Chicago's arch criminal" was either a suicide or a convicted murderer who had remained impenitent, but on the grounds, as an ecclesiastic put it, that "a person who refuses the ministrations of the church in life need not expect to receive the ministrations of the church in death."

The real grounds were that the cardinal archbishop knew that certain ecclesiastics had been far too good natured in performing rites which, among ignorant people, respectablized disreputable characters. Such tolerance, he believed, was scandalous.

So there was no resplendent requiem at the cathedral to which Schofield and O'Banion's shop was neighbor, and no regular service of committal at the grave.

But the Rev. Father Patrick Malloy of St. Thomas of Canterbury church was on the scene, both in Wells street and at the grave. Not, however, as was pointed out later by the mildly shocked, as an ecclesiastic but as a friend, a distinction not likely to have convinced the rigid cardinal archbishop. As a friend, therefore, Father Malloy escorted O'Banion's widow and his father from the coffin to the autos bound for Mount Carmel and at the grave he recited a litany in Latin, the Hail Mary thrice, and the Lord's prayer. But he did not sprinkle the coffin with the holy water nor did he wear the surplice or the stole.

So the cardinal archbishop was balked only to the extent of a litany, three Hail Marys and a pater noster.

O'Banion's Double Burial.

O'Banion was buried twice.

On the day of the funeral gangdom laid him in the lot which he had bought for gangdom and in which he had buried the murdered gangster Sheehy. It was not consecrated ground; "reserved" ground rather, being in a part of the cemetery reserved for those who, not dying in the Roman Catholic faith, are so near by relationship to Roman Catholics that their relatives bury them as close as possible to the consecrated area.

"But, look at him now," said the withering John Stege, a brave, honest officer of police, who has been an acute annoyance to gangdom for five perilous years, to me a few days ago—"Look at him now! Eighty feet from a bishop!"

And so it is.

Five months after the first burial the body was disinterred and was reburied in a lot which O'Banion's widow had bought. It is consecrated ground. A stone's throw distant is the granite mausoleum which Bishop Muldoon began and Archbishop Quigley completed, and in which rest the bodies of Bishop Porter, Archbishop Feehan, and Archbishop Quigley. Over her departed Mrs. O'Banion placed a lofty granite shaft. When the cardinal archbishop saw that he was as nearly furious as the good man ever allows himself to become and he ordered the shaft removed. That was done. A small, unobtrusive stone now marks the lot.

"Unhappily," said Dr. Sheil, auxiliary bishop of Chicago, when we were talking over these matters a few days ago, "it is true that O'Bannion is buried about 80 feet from those venerated men." The bishop's feeling seemed to be that, as between hunting a fallible mortal out of his grave or not doing that, he would prefer to leave the ultimate adjustments to heaven. He was far from reconciled to scandal, but he was humane.

The funeral, which was the first of gangdom's highly spectacular antics in the requiescat-in-pace line, had a terrific aftermath.

A McCarthy to the Fore.

The Sunday following the funeral preachers fulminated about it from their pulpits. The utterances of two of them were extremely pungent.

"We have this last week," said Dr. A. J. McCarthy, pastor of Kenwood church, "witnessed a strange anomaly upon the part of a law abiding community, the burial of a recognized criminal attended by thousands and his grave heaped high with flowers from his partners in crime. What a tyranny we live under in this city of Chicago! . . . Something is wrong with the whole system of criminal restraint and procedure. Our policemen lay the blame at the feet of the judges, and the judges in turn lay the blame at the feet of the chief of police. . . . Some of these days the righteous minded, law abiding citizens of this metropolis will rise up and refuse to live any longer under the tyranny of an inefficient and law breaking city hall."

"What," asked Dr. John Thompson, pastor of Chicago Temple, "are the youth of our city to think about it? . . . No man could go so long in crime without being apprehended and punished if he did not have accomplices and sympathizers. . . . The churches are partly to blame for such a condition because they spend their time in theological controversy instead of getting together as a unit in fighting a condition which all agree is wrong and dangerous. These heresy hunters remind me of a man going out with a machine gun to hunt grasshoppers."

The O'Banion case epitomized much. First, it epitomized a great city's cracking acceptance of lawlessness. Second, it epitomized a juvenile acquiescence in the glorification of worthless, dangerous men. Out of acceptance and acquiescence grew a long, fantastic sequence of indecencies that made the great city a byword throughout Christendom. Directing the indecencies was that "nice personality"—as the saying ran—John Torrio, whom we shall encounter amid a fusillade that plentifully punctured him and just missed scaring all the "personality" out of him.

(That chapter about John Torrio will be presented here next Sunday.)

Lincoln and Materialism

By Clifford Raymond.

LINCOLN, in undertaking to preserve the American union, undertook of necessity thereby to prevent an economic, and plausibly if not inevitably a military, alliance interesting in what it already had to go on and prodigious in what it could go for.

Great Britain and the southern confederacy of American states were irresistibly congenial, although it was British doctrine that the soil of England had the sovereign quality of giving freedom to any person whose foot touched it, and it was confederate doctrine that wherever a slave went he was as inviolable a piece of property as was his master's pocketbook or trunk. But the south and Great Britain were not in contact where they disagreed. What they had in common were caste and profits.

Their governing classes agreed in sentiment and sentimentality, in a philosophy of superior people, in the idea of a society made good and desirable by recognized gradations of human worth. Furthermore and more important, the resources and forms of wealth and production in the two countries were complementary. They were almost perfectly so. The southern producer and the English producer were in a harmony almost made of heaven. The desires of one responded to the needs of the other. The desires and needs of both put them in conflict with the northern states, where economic policy hurt them both and where the whole figure of Lincoln contained everything undesirable to their sentiments, to their traditions of worth and of acceptable success in life.

There may never before have been and may not again be such a concinnity of purpose and desire between two separate national units, even of the same stock, as there was between the south and Great Britain. The unwelcome third, the disturbing stranger, the intruder who offended sentiment and prevented the taking of full profit, was the north.

Inconsistent.

If the materialistic interpretation of history were the full milk of the coconut, the fleet of Great Britain would have or should have sailed west on the news that South Carolina had fired on Maj. Anderson and his garrison in Fort Sumter. The fleet might have hovered along the American coast for threat or further use. It might have been concentrated where other British fleets had made a rendezvous against the American shore, in the Bermudas or in Negril bay of Jamaica. The descent on Washington had been from the former. That on New Orleans had been from the latter. These bases still remain.

If economic advantage, profit taking and a business eye to the future governed human action decisively England's line of conduct was imperatively laid out for it. Not to follow it with courage and decision was puerile, except for one thing. Economics are not so thoroughly in control of human motives. The theory has no such audacity in action. England was not all upper class sentiment and economic perception. The chance was there but the British did not take it because the government could not trust itself to the adventure. There were, after all, too many inarticulate Lincolns in Great Britain.

But there was a chance for imperial daring, an opening for the economic interpretation of history by a rational government engaged in trade expansions and upholding the sacramental morals thereof with the religious conviction that it is sinful not to take an advantage.

Economic Bonds.

The desire of the south was to engage in the production of raw material for industry, to sell it and have credit for the purchase of manufactured articles, duty free. The desire of Great Britain was to get this raw material and to have at its source a free market for manufactured products. The south was baronial, with its Letter whites, its equivalent of a sturdy but unaspiring or ignorant peasantry and its slaves. Distinction, leisure, sentimentality, pride of cast, courage, elegance and culture, real or assumed, marked its upper class.

It was not much if at all interested in putting its raw material into manufactures. It sold cotton and could sell grains to an industrial free trade nation which wanted to buy them and in return to sell factory products which the southerner wanted to buy—shirts, hats, coats, rugs, silverware, steelware, etc., products for ordinary use and for the politer life.

What stood in the way of this almost perfect comity, economic and sentimental, binding two peoples by bonds which could bridge an ocean, was the industrial north with its tariff, with its doctrine of equality, with its hatred of slavery, with its unpleasant and hysterical abolition zealots, with its somewhat uncouth social conditions and its population of underestimated worth, and with its Lincoln.

In Sympathy with the South.

The English liberal, Gladstone, had words of admiration for Mr. Jefferson Davis, for the state he had created, for the army he had raised, for the destiny he had put in the power of the confederacy to realize. Lord Russell had Clyde built commerce destroyers for the south—and Great Britain later paid for them. Salisbury went to bed sick after Appomattox. But Great Britain never had the courage to strike out even as William Hohenzollern, William II. of Germany, now old and in exile in Doorn, might have done in his better days to carry the economic interpretation into effect against Lincoln.

There were too many Lincolns in Yorkshire and too many Hankses in Wiltshire. They will always interfere with the economic interpretation. Otherwise, now the south might be a self-governing dominion in the British commonwealth of nations, or an ally outside of it. The north might be an alert and powerful military nation of brisk and swagger soldiers in between a dominion to the north and one to the south. And without an accredited pacifist in its population.

The Implacable Power.

Did the north do well to win the war between the states? For its own good, probably not. But it was the implacable power. It asserted its doctrine of free labor and protected products. In Grant it raised the greatest general to sustain that doctrine, and in Lincoln the greatest ruler to keep morality and economics in perfect wedding. The south stood stoutly and desperately to the last for its right to make its cotton with slave labor, to sell it, and to bring in what it wanted to buy without paying a duty on it, but its heaven sent ally, Great Britain, did not pick up the gage of destiny. Its government did not have the courage of its productive ideas. It blustered. It revealed its hopes and sentiments. It remade an enemy of the successful north. Without getting much for itself it sacrificed its economic mate and its own chances. It again killed kinship in the north. Not even John Bright and the Lancaster millmen could restore the balance. Daring and courage of desire on the part of a British government following its own inclinations and instincts might have made the confederation of the south an independent nation ready to turn British colonial again or to remain an economic dependency.

Timidity prevailed. Offense was given. No object was gained. The result persists as an abiding distrust of British purpose in the successful north. Vacillation had its punishment. A nation should be either morally honest, economically active, or plausibly succeed in seeming one and being the other. The United States remembers in its subconsciousness more the Alabama than it does the Maine.

There are international games which must be played successfully, or it is insane to play them at all. As failures, as hesitant, uncompleted maneuvers, they are aggravating and destructive.

Lincoln had too much tact. Great Britain had too much timidity. The Clary Grove gang boy of the Sangamon outsmarted the Etonians. Even now Great Britain faces the unknown consequences of having had moral principles in common with the north, which it disowned, and of having prejudices and profits in common with the south, for which it would not fight.

It is better to do things thoroughly, or not to touch them.

Local Philanthropies Establish New Record

Political and Social Leaders at Palm Beach

Smart Resort at Height of Season.

PALM BEACH, Fla., Feb. 9.—[Special.] — This is the heyday of Palm Beach's season. Everybody is here now—the big politicians, as typified by Alfred Smith and party and Herbert Hoover's lieutenants; stage luminaries, as embodied in the persons of Louise Groody, Jane Aubert, and Billie Burke; leaders of professions, such as Dr. M. L. Harris, and those of great family names, such as Vincent Astor.

The season of "openings" is long gone. Everything of which Palm Beach ever boasted is operating at full steam so to speak, and, in the unseasonably warm weather, society is disporting itself in so many and varied ways that even the activities of the Chicago groups cannot be followed completely.

The closing engagement of the Minneapolis Symphony orchestra was one main event of the week. It was the last concert under auspices of the society of arts that will be open to the public and those not fortunate enough to be included in the society's lists mourned when Henri Verbrugghen put away his baton.

Woman's Exchange Holds Sale.

The annual exhibition of the Chicago Woman's Exchange was held at the residence of Mrs. William Waller jr., Friday and Saturday with the usual array of beautiful things. Chicago women interested in the affair include, besides Mrs. Waller, Mrs. George A. McKinlock, Mrs. Charles Klotz, Mrs. Frank Porter, Mrs. Benjamin J. Rosenthal, Miss Muriel McCormick, Mrs. Caroline Kohl, and many others of the Chicago colony.

Then there have been parties, parties, parties.

The Raskobs gave one in honor of the birthday of Miss Ann Meenan, a member of Alfred Smith's menage, on top of Whithall. Vincent Astor moved in and out of many. The Orville Thompsons were guests of Mr. Astor at the Everglades club and themselves played host at a party at the Breakers. Mrs. Henry C. Phipps entertained at Villa Artemis for Mrs. Charles J. Corey who now has returned to her home in Chicago; the Rodney Proctors gave a luncheon honoring Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson, who have been guests of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin P. Smith of the Chicago colony; and the Frank O. Butlers were guests at one of the largest affairs of the week, a birthday party given by Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Hollander.

Parties Fill the Calendar.

Mrs. Albert Evans, Mrs. William P. Bode, Miss Pauline Bode, Mrs. Luther Conover, and Mrs. Leon Hartman were Chicago guests at the bridge party and tea given by Mrs. George F. Groves at the Breakers. Mrs. John Dietz gave a tea honoring her daughter, Mrs. Morton Nichols, and her sister, Miss Maude Sanderson of Chicago, who are spending the winter with her.

Mr. and Mrs. George Rasmussen, Mrs. J. Townsend McKeever, and Mr. Robert Rasmussen were members of a box party at the Symphony, while at one of the innumerable luncheons were noted Mrs. A. R. Thompson, Miss Ruth Taylor, and Miss Florence Brand of the Chicago contingent of visitors. Miss Brand and Miss Taylor will spend the rest of the season here.

The dinner which Miss Eleanor Chase gave in honor of Richard Barthelmess and Mrs. Barthelmess was another event of the last few days. The Chase household is increasing steadily. Miss Dorothy Chase arrived early in the week to join her mother, Mrs. Irving Hall Chase. Mrs. Chase also is entertaining Maj. Gen. George Barnett of Washington.

At the Poinciana.

Dr. M. L. Harris of Chicago, president elect of the American Medical association, arrived this week and is staying at the Poinciana with Mrs. Harris and their daughter, Mrs. Florence von Schlegell. Dr. Harris has been fraternizing with such home town friends as Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Rich and Archibald Bishop and hopes to devote his visit entirely to polishing up his golf.

Members of the Women's Athletic club welcomed back from Chicago their club's founder, Dr. Irene Behnke, chairman of the Illinois Woman's Republican club. Still another arrival was Mrs. Nelson, better known as Jane Aubert, movie and musical comedy luminary. Jane's sport clothes soon attracted attention at the Beach.

Other Chicagoans newly come to the Poinciana are Mrs. H. J. D'Ancona, Richard Greiner, H. W. Bishop, John Consy, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Greenberg, Mrs. George W. Davis, Arthur R. Shurtleff. Swelling the colony at the Breakers are Mr. and Mrs. Robert T. Peacock, Mrs. A. A. Neuman, Mrs. Frank A. Miller, and Mrs. Allen Jackson, who has joined Mr. Jackson there. Also arriving at the Breakers from Chicago over the week were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Erichson, Mrs. Warren M. Salisbury, Mrs. G. Myers, Miss Helen Dillon, and Mrs. J. H. Oberfelder.

Much to Look Forward to.

This is the heydey of the season, but there still is plenty to look forward to. The annual south Florida golf tournament starts Monday. A conglomeration of theatrical high lights such as cannot often be seen anywhere, under the direction of Arthur Hammerstein, is getting the stage set for the annual Kiwanis charity show at the Paramount theater. Billie Burke and Anita Loos are among the home talent that will do a skit; Dorothy Dalton and W. I. Fields and a dozen just as famous will figure in the production.

Later come the annual banquets of the Old Line societies, the Washington's birthday regatta, and the classic Poinciana ball at the end of the month.

The Junior league provisional members held a sale of evening dresses and shoes last Tuesday with such success that they disposed of all their stock in the first few hours of the sale and made almost a thousand dollars for the league's charities. Among the members who were in charge of the sale were Mrs. Edwin E. Tullis (Anne Wood), Miss Letitia Channon, Miss Theodosia Smith, Miss Dorothy Ranney, Miss Mary Fortune, Miss Jane Rowe, Miss Jean Purcell, and Miss Charlotte Picher. Mrs. Frank J. Loesch, Mrs. Augustus A. Carpenter, and Mrs. Wilhelm Ludwig Baum were among the women attendant on the pre-election school held on Monday at the Fortnightly under the auspices of the Lake Shore League of Women Voters, and the 42d and 43d ward branches of the Woman's City club. Mrs. Frederic W. Upham is to depart soon for Seville, Spain, to be present at the international exposition as one of the five representatives appointed from the United States by President Coolidge.

Three Benefits in Recent Weeks Net Thousands

Theatrical Pieces Pour Coin Into Treasuries.

By Mme. X.

TO pull off successfully three theatrical benefits in three successive weeks is to establish a new record in our local philanthropies. The first one was an evening at Ziegfeld's "Rosalie," arranged by Mrs. Arthur Meeker and her committee which was reported to have raised $8,000 for the preservation of Kenmore, at Fredericksburg, Va., as a national museum. The second was the Ell Bates benefit when, with the aid of one Bill Shakespeare and his play, "Macbeth," at the Auditorium, nearly $18,000 was said to have been added to the coffers of this fine, old social settlement.

The third one was last Monday's premier of "The Royal Family" at the Harris theater, when the house was taken over by the committee running Allendale, that fine country home for boys, and the evening, if rumor is correct, netted approximately $13,000. Among those most active in making this evening a success were Mrs. Leverett Thompson and her brother, Ralph Poole. Their interest in the institution is an inheritance from their parents, the late Mr. and Mrs. Abram Poole, in whose drawing-room was born the idea of this home for boys.

As varied as the objects of these benefits were the plays enjoyed by the public contributing to the coffers of the committees in charge. Ziegfeld's colorful musical extravaganza, Shakespeare's great tragedy, and the comedy by George S. Kaufman and Edna Ferber, presenting a gay picture of our foremost dramatic family, the Barrymores (so rumor has it) certainly run the gamut of modern drama.

Modern Scenery Has Flaws.

Shakespeare is having quite a vogue here within the last fortnight. Of one thing this observer of current events is quite certain, and that is the scenery alone is not enough to put one of these classic dramas over. Nor must the scenery be merely a vehicle for modern ideals in design. The setting for Macbeth at the Auditorium was evidently the realization of a modernist's dream of what is effective, and bore little or no relation to the probabilities of what the castle of the Thane of Cawdor really looked like.

The banquet scene was more like an Italian street fair than a dinner party in the rugged era in which the piece was set, while the series of stairways writhing about in the other scenes amid the well draped pillars would have resulted in many a tumble for those hard drinking Celts.

So little important was the text that I think it is not too much to say that the majority of the large audience that Monday night could only catch a word here and there as spoken by the various actors. To be sure, so familiar are the lines that even the superficially educated could fill up the innumerable gaps due to lack of careful articulation.

In George Arliss' presentation of Shylock in "The Merchant of Venice," one had a chance to realize what perfect diction and first class acting could do to make Shakespeare palatable even to modern folk. He spoke as the old Jew might have done today, in a natural, simple manner. Had his fellow actors followed his example and avoided mouthing and orating their lines the piece would have been entirely delightful.

Reviving classic dramas is always a parlous matter. A genuine enjoyment of them is rare. Even in the heyday of such great artists as Edwin Booth, Ellen Terry, Henry Irving and their contemporaries, it was the actor who kept the attention of the audiences and made the presentations palatable, not the play. These great Thespians have no successors today, or perhaps Flo Ziegfeld and his ilk have killed our taste for them, debased it and replaced it with a longing for color, light, noise. Who knows?

A Theatrical Treat.

To those who are not ardent fans for clashing, crashing musical comedies and continue to be ridden by stage traditions acquired early in life, the presentation of "The Royal Family," introduced at the Allendale "benefit" last Monday evening at the Harris theater by one of the best theatrical troupes that has visited the city in a long time, was a genuine theatrical treat. It recalled the days of Ada Rehan, John Drew, and their contemporaries, when high class comedy was well presented to appreciative audiences. The presence of Jefferson de Angelis linked the company with a bygone era. His rendering of his role was one of the most finished of the evening. A close second was the acting of Haidee Wright.

The appearance in an intermission of a numerous delegation of Allendale boys in natty uniforms and military formation was the evening's high spot from a sentimental point of view. It must have been a hard old heart that wasn't touched by the sight of those solemn, eager young faces gazing intently at the rows of misty strangers in the darkened theater.

"Apropos of matters theatrical, I think I never saw a better amateur performance than the presentation of one of the three French playlets given at the Goodman theater last Sunday evening and Monday afternoon under the direction of Georges Casuet in what is known as the International Theater of Chicago. If the other two pieces were as brilliantly done as "La Carosse du St. Sacrement," by Mrs. Howard Linn and five Frenchmen, M. A. L. Puel, Louis Scheyven, P. d'Ennery, G. P. Laurent and Henri Bougearel, the occasion was an extraordinary one.

NEWS OF CHICACO SOCIETY

This dramatic sketch was presented with a grace and ease that almost removed it from the category of the amateur. The five men had that Gallic finish and competency which gives France the lead in matters dramatic.

A Fine Piece of Acting.

When your scribe ventures to say that they in no way outdid in deft, expert and exquisite acting Mrs. Howard Linn, it is not overstating the case. Hers was the best bit of unprofessional acting I've ever seen. Gay, vivid, with never a moment of uncertainty, she carried her rôle from beginning to end with a finish and dash that was a joy to watch. She looked the part to perfection in the dazzling gown and veil, a genuine old Spanish creation lent her by Mrs. John A. Carpenter, and her French, to the non-French, sounded perfect.

The whole performance was a delight to the connoisseur and emphasized the fact that of all the spoken languages there is no product of or heir to the stately old Latin tongue so beautiful and satisfying as French when spoken by the French. It is musical, aristocratic, mellifluous, ill-adapted to war, but admirably so to cultured society and to love making. My apologies to the actors in the other two pieces that I had not the time to see that busy Monday afternoon.

M. Cauuet's International theater is the only one of its kind in the country. He aims to present the latest and best dramatic work of France, Germany, Italy and Spain at stated intervals. It appeals to the cultivated element in Chicago, an element which does exist, although at times it is not easy to discover its members.

News of the Judahs.

Rumor has it that Col. Noble Brandon Judah, American ambassador to Cuba, has sent in his resignation to Washington. This will be a real loss both to us and our Cuban neighbors. He has made an exceptionally fine record in the scant two years of his service there. Small as the island is in size and population, it is nevertheless important both on account of our financial and commercial relations with it, and because ever since the Spanish war we have had a somewhat paternal interest in its welfare. Under that great administrator, the late Gen. Leonard Wood, this country brought order out of chaos and set a hygienic standard never previously attained there. When I visited Cuba in 1920 several of the upper class Cubans said: "Ah, how we wish that you were still running things here! It was much cleaner and safer under the American administration than it is now."

Among those who know Col. Judah the opinion seems to be that he prefers to be in the more active politics of his part of the U. S. A. than in directing our diplomatic relations far from home. Their friends in Chicago and Lake Forest will welcome the return of the Judahs to their place in this region. Both enjoy a well earned popularity in their wide circle of acquaintances. They are genial hosts, and appreciative guests, as well as playing their parts ably in the larger civic life of the community.

Will Occupy New Home.

They will probably occupy their handsome new house on the western borders of Lake Forest, an abode that has been in the process of construction so long that its final completion will be a real event in that part of the land. The mansion and its spacious surrounding gardens will be among the most beautiful in the west. It would be hard to find any region in the east where there are more fine places than just hereabouts. Perhaps Long Island may outclass us, but certainly neither Newport and its countryside, nor Tuxedo and both shores of the Hudson have anything more lovely than our country places in the matter of up to date finish and taste. A few easterners admit this.

When, during a little sojourn near Tuxedo last summer, some of those I met heard that I was from Chicago, they said: "O, those gardens and places near Chicago that we visited during the meeting of the Garden Clubs of America were more beautiful than anything we can show you." Perhaps it was just politeness, but there was a grain of truth, as the houses and estates in our part of the country are of a sufficiently recent vintage to be a part of the new and increasing movement to create really beautiful and classic house and garden architecture.

The average mortal, nowadays, knows so much more about these matters than did our immediate forebears, who were uneducated in either the old or new ideals of what makes for esthetic perfection. The houses and gardens of thirty, forty, fifty, sixty years ago as seen in the glow of today's enlightenment often look grotesque and unsightly. Will what we are doing today seem equally unattractive in the coming decades?

New Apartment House.

That much discussed cooperative apartment house on the corner of Astor and Goethe streets, planned by a group of well known society leaders, will soon be under way. All of the apartments are now taken, except for some two roomed studios on the second floor. The latest to join this select circle are the Howard Gillettes, who will have the flat on the fourth floor. Robert Alierton is to occupy the third floor one. Over the Gillettes will come the James M. Hopkinses, who will occupy two floors. Above them will be the Tiffany Blakes on one floor. Above them, in what order I've forgotten, come Mrs. C. M. Ely with one and a half floors, the Frank Hibbards, one and a half; the Potter Palmers, with three, and the John H. Winterbothams, with one and a half stories.

Except for the control that will be exercised by water and drain pipes, and chimneys running through the structure, every set of apartments will be specially planned for the occupants, and a good deal of interest is being felt in the differences that will be observable in the designs for occupying the same space. Character and personality are as much expressed in houses and furnishings as in attire and outward appearance. In passing judgment on an abode you are, perhaps without knowing it, passing judgment on the owner of it.

The exterior of the building is to be of the most modern type, black marble pilasters alternating with a gray limestone facing, long, perpendicular lines being emphasized. As all of the occupants are by way of being esthetic experts, there will be not a little rivalry and friendly emulation in the furnishing, equipping, and adorning of these seven interiors. Their friends might offer a prize to be awarded to the apartment which met the most universal favor, the winner to be adjudged by a vote among their friends. They all have about the same set of acquaintances.

Occasion for Entertaining.

There still lingers on in Chicago a goodly legacy of the old frontier traditions of hospitality handed down by our immediate ancestors. Newcomers feel it, and ex-Chicagoans mark its presence. The visit here of Dr. and Mrs. Arnold Klebs, who arrive at the Lake Shore Drive hotel tonight to spend a week, will be the occasion of much entertaining.

Mrs. Klebs is a daughter of the late Charles King, and sister of Charles Garfield King. Her sister, Mrs. Herman Gade, is the wife of the Norwegian minister to Brazil. The Gades have been stationed at Rio for ten or fifteen years. News comes that Mr. Gade, well known and popular here, is resigning his post there, which means that the Gades probably will return to Chicago in the near future at least for a visit. Their friends hope that they will decide to settle down here in their former surroundings.

Today is the date set for the formal opening of the Harriet Hammond McCormick memorial, which takes the form of a stately and spacious home for 400 Young Women's Christian association girls. This is situated on the corner of Dearborn and Oak streets and is one of the most beautiful structures on the north side. It was opened informally a few days before Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. McCormick departed for their round the world tour late in December. At that time about twenty of their friends and co-workers met there to dedicate the building to its service. It was then not ready for occupancy.

Now it is, and phalanxes of young women are moving in. I venture to say that nowhere else in the world is there such a splendid home devoted to such a fine purpose. It is fitted up with perfect taste and good judgment. It is both extremely attractive and equally practical. It has drawing rooms, libraries, recreation halls, dining rooms, and innumerable bedrooms and bathrooms. The young women who qualify to be admitted there as residents are fortunate. It will do much to take the curse of living and making one's way in a great city from the young women who will come within its scope.

It is a fitting memorial to a beautiful personality, the late Harriet Hammond McCormick. Mrs. W. L. Hodgkins is president, Mrs. Silas H. Strawn is first vice president, Mrs. Harold L. Blood is second, Miss Elizabeth Webster is recording secretary, Mrs. Robert De Golyer is corresponding secretary, Miss Elizabeth True is treasurer, and Miss Anne Guthrie is executive secretary of the Chicago branch of the Y. W. C. A.

A Remarkable Bequest.

While on the subject of such memorials a few words about the remarkable legacy of a former Chicagoan, the late Mrs. Edmonde Bruwaert, are not out of place. As all who read their W-G-N last Tuesday will have seen noted on the front page, Mrs. Bruwaert, who died not so very long ago in Utica, N. Y., left most of her goodly fortune, amounting to over $2,000,000, to found a home for single women of gentle birth who might be left in a semi-impoverished state. It is an interesting legacy, both from the fact that up to now there is nothing just like the institution in this community, and also because of the striking personality who made the bequest.

Mrs. Bruwaert was Miss Susan King, a sister of Mrs. William Burry of this city and of the late Rockwell King, also of Chicago. She was perhaps the greatest belle of her day in Chicago when she was young, which was far back in the period following the civil war. She was very good looking, with Titian red hair and dark, brilliant eyes, and she had that rarest of attributes, real charm. She could have married any one of a dozen men prominent in the Chicago of that day. But she turned all her suitors down.

Time went on and she was no longer very young. There came to Chicago as French consul a delightful, polished Frenchman, Edmonde Bruwaert. He, like many others, promptly fell in love with Miss Susy King and wooed her long and zealously. Years sped by. He declined other positions more exalted than that of French consul in Chicago so as to be near her. Finally, his persistence won out and she consented to marry him. After the wedding they went to the Argentine Republic, where he had been appointed French minister. They did not stay there long.

Mme. Bruwaert did not care for the duties and life she had to face in that far away country, so they returned to Europe where they lived first in two rooms in an obscure little hotel in Paris. Later they went to Lausanne, Switzerland, where they had similar quarters. They never kept house. They did not travel. They indulged in little recreation, few pleasures, and no extravagances. Gradually their not large fortune grew and grew.

With abstemious living and wise investments it crept up out of five figures into six and finally into seven numerals, until the former Chicago belle, by now almost forgotten in the city of her birth, died leaving this handsome fortune to her less fortunate sister women. So long had she remained unmarried that she understood their estate better than if she had taken unto herself a husband in youth and had a family of children. She always retained that rather indolent charm and alluring personality that made her in her time Chicago's foremost belle.

In Memory of William McKee.

Apropos of such things is the fund being now collected by the friends of the late William McCallin McKee, curator of the prints and etchings at the Art institute, to create a fitting memorial testifying to the affectionate and admiring esteem in which he was held in this community. Walter S. Brewster heads the committee in charge of the enterprise. It is hoped that all who knew and appreciated Mr. McKee will contribute to this sum, even if it be only a small sum, so as to have it rest on the broad basis of the many friends he had here in all ranks of life.

The money will be devoted to making a collection of prints and etchings to be kept in his department and to bear his name.

MRS. JAMES JOSEPH O'ROURKE.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward McDonald of 6932 Jeffery avenue, announce the recent marriage of their daughter, Hannah, to James Joseph O'Rourke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael J. O'Rourke of 7432 Euclid avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Wernz Leonard of La Grange announce the engagement of their daughter, Virginia Louise, to Clarence Boyd Haste, son of Hames Haste of Manito, Ill. Both Miss Leonard and Mr. Haste are graduates of Knox college at Galesburg. The wedding will take place in June.

Interesting Guests Liven Miami Days

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 9.—One must be blasé, indeed, to find Miami [which includes its sister cities of Miami Beach and Coral Gables] uninteresting this year. Men eminent in other fields than finance are here in numbers. Lindbergh's flight to Panama on his 27th birthday gave Miami an opportunity to entertain for him with a birthday cake on Saturday, Feb. 2, when he gave several complimentary flights at the Pan-American flying field. Then we have had with us this week the Chinese Lindbergh, Tien Lai Huang, touring the United States to obtain ideas for the development of aviation in his own country.

The Al Smiths had much hospitality shown them while they were in these parts and their appearance at the races was met with much applause. They were guests of Mr. and Mrs. A. Mitchell Palmer at the Bath club, one day.

New Homes on the Increase.

The number of beautiful new houses going up in the Indian creek neighborhood on Miami Beach is quite surprising. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Moos of Lake Forest have named their handsome new Indian creek home "Casa Maruva"—the house of the sea grapes—because of the numerous sea grape shrubs on the place, which slopes gently down to the water.

To return to the Bath club, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Heyworth of Chicago entertained in that exclusive rendezvous for Miss Eunice Emery of Miami Beach, whose marriage to Haskell Massengale Rhett of Chicago will be an event of Tuesday, Feb. 12. Miss Emery, who has had a large part in Junior league affairs in Miami, is a former Chicagoan who is quite popular here. She will live in Chicago after her marriage. The Heyworths have taken the Russell Pancoast house for the rest of the season.

Mrs. Jacob Bauer of Chicago called at the Hoover home at Belle Isle last Tuesday, accompanied by Mrs. C. H. Chadwick, also of Chicago. Alfred S. Austrian of Chicago is at the Roney Plaza for an indefinite stay. Mrs. Austrian has been called to England because of the serious illness of her mother, Mrs. M. M. Rothschild.

Two Extremes of Climate.

Mr. and Mrs. George Boyden of Sheffield, Ill., have ben in Miami Beach for some weeks and are about to go to Palm Beach, after a visit to Havana. Mr. Boyden is as well known in Illinois as is his brother, W. C. Boyden of Winnetka.

The George Boydens are amusing their friends with the story of their experiences with two widely varying kinds of weather. In early January Mr. Boyden was taken ill with flu in Chicago, and his doctor advised his coming to Miami to sun himself on the beach. But before they could get away, Mrs. Boyden, walking two blocks on State street, frosted her legs to an extent which caused her much suffering.

Arrived at Miami Beach, Mr. Boyden hastened to carry out the doctor's prescription of sun baths, and, arrayed in a bathing suit, proceeded to stretch himself on the sand. He took the precaution to lie under an umbrella, but, as he fell asleep during his siesta, one foot which was exposed to the sun's rays, was so badly burned that he was quite miserable, and had to have medical treatment for it. So, within five days, say the Boydens, one can be both frozen and burned in the United States, illustrating the vast extent of our country.

Hosts to the Hoovers.

Mr. and Mrs. Cyrus H. K. Curtis of Philadelphia, who always come to Miami during the winter, use their yacht, Lyndonia, as a home while they are here. They entertained the Hoovers on board for dinner during their stay. Mr. and Mrs. Fred A. Poor of Chicago spend much of their time aboard their yacht, Granada Four, and often have guests on trips in these waters.

Mrs. Chauncey McCormick arrived recently at the James Deering estate, and will be joined by Mr. McCormick soon. Mrs. Charles Deering, Mrs. McCormick, and the Duchess Calonia were guests of Richard F. Howe on his beautiful boat for three days last week on a fishing trip.

100 Take Part in Aiken Drag Hunt

AIKEN, S. C.—[Special Correspondence.]—Hunting and riding clothes are the last word in dress at this most exclusive of winter resorts. Almost a hundred riders took part in a drag hunt through the Hitchcock woods. Many others followed the run in traps and carriages, which were massed at the finish.

Thomas Hitchcock was M. F. H. and the whips were Marleigh Kramer, Anne Schley and James Curtiss. Mrs. Thomas Hitchcock is still recovering from an injury to her ankle.

Polo continues to hold interest here. Among the players this week at Meade field were Frederick H. Post, F. Skiddy Von Stade, Pete Boswick, Regan McKinney, and John W. Converse. Seated along the side of the field in traps and carriages were Mrs. John W. Converse, Mr. and Mrs. Clarry Dolan, Yale Dolan, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Grace, Mr. and Mrs. C. Oliver Iselin, and Baroness de Villiers du Terrage.

Children's Museum Shows Valentines

Gift of Mrs. Hodge Traces History Back to Rome

Who are you that I should love,
Who indeed?
A red rose that flaunts its passion—
Or a reed?
Cool you stand there sheathed in silence;
Are you cold?
Perhaps you have your youth to warm you—
I am old.
Reed and rose have touched in passing,
Thence this song.
If you pray for Spring's renewal—
You are wrong.

—E. J.

By Eleanor Jewett.

IN the children's museum in the Art institute there has been gathered a most timely exhibit. February is a month devoted to patriotism and to love. There are the three dates—the twelfth, the fourteenth, and the twenty-second. Scarcely any one will confuse them and surely no one is unconscious of the subtleties perpetrated under the sign of Cupid on each recurring Feb. 14. It is to commemorate the beauties of the 14th that the exhibit in the children's room has been arranged.

The exhibit consists of valentines and they are the gift of the late Mrs. Emma B. Hodge. For the history of the valentine you must go back to Roman days when there lived a handsome youth named Valentinus. His fate was that of many of the early Christians who incurred the enmity of the ruling classes. He was a member of one of these persecuted families, persecuted by Calpurnius. Valentinus was seized and imprisoned and held captive for some time. He was finally ordered to be beheaded and his execution took place on the fourteenth of February in the third century A. D.

Because he was a martyr he became a saint and in the church calendar was spoken of always as "Saint Valentine." From his cruel fate alone there seems no reason to have called our day of pretty sentimental exchange for him, but more than his death lies in his story. While Valentinus was in prison in Rome he succeeded in restoring the sight of a blind girl, the daughter of his jailor. The girl conceived a great affection for the young man and he loved her in return. He had been in the habit, while imprisoned and deprived of books, of cutting out curious devices from paper. On one of these he wrote some endearing verses and sent it to the girl on the morning of his execution, signed "Your Valentine." There is the origin of our St. Valentine's day with its gifts of valentines and flowers and candy. Our difference is found in the fact that generally our tokens go unsigned and Valentinus signed his verse.

Owns Largest Collection.

The largest collection of valentines in America is said to belong to Frank House Baer of Cleveland, O. The valentine as a modern missive of affection came into considerable prominence in England during the courtship of Prince Albert and Queen Victoria, which culminated in their marriage on Feb. 10, 1840. A few valentines appeared in America shortly afterward, but they were so expensive that their sale was limited. Miss Esther Howland of Worcester, Mass., was the first to introduce the printed verse to accompany the valentine.

Miss Howland was a clever New England girl and after studying the English valentines she decided she could improve upon them and she did. She made two from some lace paper, colored paper and paper flowers, which were pronounced superior to the English examples. Her brother, who was a stationer, took these two samples and after a trip among his patrons returned with orders amounting to $5,000. Miss Howland was aghast. At first she did not know how to fill these huge orders. Then she appealed to her friends. They consented willingly to help her, and so began an industry which has grown to enormous proportions. Many of the valentines in the current exhibit in the children's museum are from Miss Howland's original collection.

This little history, culled from the Art institute's news letter, increases the interest with which one looks at the exhibit. The exhibit itself is fascinating. The rise of the valentine through layer upon layer of quaint conceits into the truly gorgeous effusion it sometimes can be is clearly and beautifully shown. When we consider the hearts, now stilled, which beat faster upon reception of these dainty confections in the days when they were fresh, we might think we had a sentimental history of the United States spread for us to read.

Two Shows at Institute.

Two most important exhibitions, besides that of the valentines, are current in the Art institute. In the east wing galleries is the exhibition of painting and sculpture by artists of Chicago and vicinity [which opened last Thursday] and in the print rooms is the nineteenth annual exhibition of etchings under the management of the Chicago Society of Etchers. This last exhibit opened informally a few days before the seventh, for which it was scheduled.

In both exhibitions fewer pieces of work are hung than last year, but those which are hung are of larger size and the wall space has all been used to the best advantage. A number of new names are found in the Chicago artists' exhibit. The paintings as a whole are moderate and low keyed. A number of original canvases will be found, making for a diversified show. Among names which are familiar to us we find Gerald Frank, Rudolph Ingerle, Oskar Gross, Claude Buck, John F. Stacey, John T. Nolf, Rudolph Weisenborn, Archibald T. Motley, Frederic Tellander, Paul Trebilcock, J. Theodore Johnson, Edward Timmons, Carl R. Kraft, Marie Blanke, Marques E. Reitzel, A. Lou Matthews, Ivan Albright, John David Ercin, Ruth Sherwood, E. Martin Hennings and Walter Williams, as exhibitors.

News of Art and Artists.

"Lizard Gap" is the title of the play which will open at the Goodman theater tomorrow night. It is what is called a farce-comedy, and something on the order of "Camille in Roaring Camp," which was a great success last year in the Goodman. "Lizard Gap" was written by Harry Lacy Hamilton and it is a clever and vigorous comedy set in the all folk of the southwest.

The Chester Johnson galleries announce a current exhibition of interesting paintings. There are some particularly fine examples of the French modernists.

The February exhibit in the rooms of the Chicago Camera club consists of forty-one gum platinum and bromide prints by J. J. Dudley Johnson, Hon. F. R. P. S., London, England.

"LANDSCAPE," by Flora Schofield, awarded the Mr. and Mrs. Jule F. Bower prize of $300 in the Chicago Artists' exhibition current in the east wing galleries of the Art institute.

Renaissance Club Gives Annual Luncheon

Members Will Tour Institute Art Galleries

By Roberta Nangle.

THE fifteenth annual luncheon of the Renaissance club will be held tomorrow and will be followed by a tour of the galleries of the Art Institute. Members and guests will view the current exhibition of Chicago artists, with Edward J. F. Timmons acting as docent and Mrs James McAlear as hostess.

This organization of women is strictly an art club and its activities are devoted exclusively to the study and furthering of music, painting, sculpture, architecture, and drama. Meetings are held on lecture days in the Art institute clubrooms, with programs built around some branch of art, and on music and drama days at the Edgewater Beach hotel.

Funds Used to Encourage Art.

At least 20 per cent of the club's funds are used to help and encourage young artists by purchasing the works of Chicago artists and by donating prizes for deserving paintings. Members have coöperated with the Art institute by the contribution of sums for the founding and support of the school of metal craft and jewelry, the provision of slides for the Ryerson galleries and of antiques and other objects of art, donations to the children's room and for the decoration of the clubroom, and funds for scholarships.

Last year members of the club pledged themselves to establish in the Art institute a permanent fund to be known as the Renaissance Scholarship fund, which, when completed, will approximate $4,300. The income from this fund will be applied annually to a scholarship in the school of the Art institute. An initial donation of $500 was made and a second payment of $500 was added this year.

Members Make Tours.

Another interesting feature of the club's activities is its tours, made under the auspices of the outing committee, which arranges trips to the forest preserves, the sand dunes of Indiana, studios of artists, art crafts shops, buildings of unusual architecture, etc. The club is affiliated with the Outdoor league, the Municipal Art league, the Drama league, the Civic Music Association of Chicago, and the Chicago Public School Art society.

The officers are Mrs. James P. Latto, president; Mrs. Roger F. Rugg, first vice president; Mrs. John Magnus, second vice president; Mrs. Harold Wayne Miller, recording secretary; Mrs. Herman C. Gresens, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. John J. Rubien, treasurer.

MRS. RUSSELL DEAN COMFORT.

CLUB ETHICS - - - - - - By Maude Swalm Evans

THE past presidents were in the midst of a luncheon given in honor of two of their number who had just returned from a trip to South America. Pictures and souvenirs had been passed around, talked about and admired.

"And when we were in Montevideo we went to the American Women's club located there," related Mrs. Rogers, one of the travelers. "We had a letter of introduction to a member and she showed us every courtesy. We got to see many things and places we wouldn't have seen otherwise."

"Tell them about our visit to that club of native women," suggested Mrs. Bush, the other traveler.

"The American Women's club member took us to it," recalled Mrs. Rogers. "The meeting was held in the home of one of the members—an old rambling house built around a patio, or paved courtyard. Almost all the Spanish houses are built like that. During the meeting we sat in an adjoining room and looked out on the most gorgeous foliage and flowers. The club was called the Legion Feminstra Pro-Culutra and it was starting out much the same way our clubs started here—mostly cultural, with a growing desire to participate in civic things."

"And Mrs. Rogers talked to them," added Mrs. Bush. "They couldn't understand her, so the American club member translated the talk into Spanish, the only language most of them understood."

"My, but it was thrilling, girls," enthused Mrs. Rogers. "I had no idea that anything I said could sound so perfectly splendid, especially as it was only what the clubs in our country are doing, the thing they seemed to be anxious to know. If ever you want to feel puffed up have what you say translated into Spanish."

"In time all the women of the world will be organized," prophesied the past president, whose pet interest is international relations, "and then we'll see—"

"What we'll see," finished the one who goes on the theory that seeing is believing.

WASHINGTON—DEMOCRACY'S DRAWING ROOM

by GENEVIEVE FORBES HERRICK

Social Secretary Is an Important Personage There

Mrs. Herrick wrote last Sunday of the rules of caste that prescribe precedence in social Washington. This article is the eleventh of this series.

'TIS a clever woman who can make a Washington front door swing wide on hospitable hinges.

It's a shrewd woman who knows when to let that big front door slam sharply on a petitioning entrant. But it's only a Washington social secretary who, in the same general gesture, can close doors, and open them.

The social secretary is the patrician policeman who stands at the cross roads of obscurity and distinction and directs a feverish two way traffic up and down democracy's troubled streets at the nation's capital.

With one hand she beckons to a rich motor car, with a mud covered license from a state west of the Mississippi and directs, perhaps even pushes, it along the narrow road leading on to a coveted inner circle of society where every auto wants to park. With the other hand she turns back another car, equally rich looking, and shunts it off to the broad path that leads nowhere in particular.

Her clients are of two classes: the somebodies who want to guard against the nobodies struggling to get into society; and the nobodies who want tips as to the best way of hobnobbing with the somebodies.

Her task is a difficult one, but not without its compensations. For the wife of one newly elected senator, weighed down with money but mindful of the fact that you can't set a dinner table with dollar bills, clung wistfully, her first official season, to a social secretary. At the end of that time the wife handed over the senator's entire salary, in gratitude for service rendered. Both parties thought it was a fair bargain.

In her book, "Social Washington," Ann Squire, herself a social secretary, lauds her profession by quoting a Washington hostess who said: "The social secretary is a luxury, to have which I would do without necessities."

And that is something that has never been said of Mr. Mellon, Mr. Kellogg, or those other gentlemen whose portfolios may seem more definitely connected with the business of government but which are often less political than the portfolio of a leading social secretary.

A Complex Job.

This woman of importance has duties more complex than the masculine jobs of taking care of the nation's budget, investigating the multilateral treaties, or figuring out the tonnage of battleships. She is a fashion expert, a politician, and above all, a historian with a long, cruel memory. She keeps books on grandfathers; she has an index of dinners and diplomatic differences; she worries over a client's grammar and her gin. She plans menus, hires butlers and sees to it that the flowers don't kill the complexion of the hostess.

Sometimes, she is a climber's dearest pal. Sometimes, when her job so directs, she is a climber's severest critic. Sometimes she is a bouncer at a fine party where the uninvited try to crash the gate.

She teaches the silent what pleasant things to say to the President of the United States. She teaches the talkative what not to say to an ambassador. Sometimes she walks the full length of the White House dining room to see that the celebrity from the Argentine isn't seated next the wife of the man who stirred up a lot of trouble at the Pan-American conference. Occasionally she may sell her exclusive list of "who's who" to the sponsors of a charity concert. Often she convinces the merry widow of, say, a big shoe and boot man, that there really is a difference between the fork for oysters and the one for ice cream.

She reminds the wives of senators that they precede the wives of congressmen, and the job is simple. She reminds the wives of senators that they are preceded by the wives of cabinet members, and the task is not so easy.

Serene and Subtle.

In the matter of rules of precedence, she begins where the state department leaves off. The dicta of the newly established division of protocol are concerned, impersonally, with the various ranks of the various officials. But the social secretary, with the long memory, knows all the little nuances of feeling between the officials, the cave dwellers, the residentials, the army and navy set, the highbrows, and the climbers. She can warn the prospective hostess that, while it is officially all right to have Senator So and So and Ambassador So and So at the same dinner party, actually it will be very disagreeable if she does it. For the social secretary's province is one of fact, while the state department arbiters don't go much beyond the theory.

The customers that come to the secretariat represent all social circles in Washington, from the cave dweller who wants Cerberus to guard the portal to the climbing millionaire who wants some raw meat to toss at Cerberus so he'll wag his tail and let a few pilgrims, without credentials, slip in through the gate.

The hierarchy of social secretaries is serene and subtle, and stubborn. Some of the most distinguished of the group refuse to take on a client of whom they don't approve entirely. Instead of asking for jobs they frequently turn them down. Which moved one Washington newcomer to say that it had been harder for her to get a certain social secretary to show her how to get on a certain exclusive dinner list than it was for her, the newcomer, to get on the dinner list herself.

The Pick of the Flock.

One member of the craft has a tea every fall, to which she bids the débs (they usually number from 100 to 150) who are to make their debut that winter. The hostess looks over the crop, notes a patrician profile, listens for a nasal twang, watches mamma's manners even as she has previously, perhaps, glanced at papa's bank account. Then she studies the genealogical charts of her guests and presently she selects a few, a very few, whose coming out parties she will consent to direct.

The debutantes so selected are marked from the beginning with her stamp of approval; while the unfortunate girls who have to struggle along with a more commercial social secretary, who demands that her client be solvent rather than that she have a corridor full of ancestors, feels that life for a debutante is hard, indeed, at democracy's capital.

Another woman of the cave dwellers' own tribe rejects the checks of the climber by saying that she refuses to sponsor any one who "is not ready for the social life here."

The social secretary started as a gentle-born, but somewhat impoverished, daughter of a cave dweller's family whose purse was no longer as lengthy as its roll call of ancestors. Where, in other cities, the daughters of the new poor go in for interior decorating, in Washington, back a few decades ago, if your grandfather had been a Supreme court justice and you needed money you became a social secretary. You merely capitalized your knowledge of persons and things in a way that was much more dignified, it was reckoned, than selling ribbon or doing dressmaking.

Miss Squire says of these early custodians of etiquette: "The pioneers in this new profession found it untried, and have made it very important. They were singularly qualified, both by birth and breeding, to appreciate the difficulties as well as the possibilities of their work. With expert knowledge of social conditions, they combined qualities of resourcefulness, tact and breadth of vision; necessary accessories where one must be largely responsible for the coordination of political entertainments of importance."

Then came the climbers, seeking to mount higher on the social ladder. This called for more social secretaries; some, as we have already said, to protect the old timer against the newcomer; others, to boost the newcomer into the old timer's front parlor.

The Best Detective.

Now the social secretariat is large and varied in the federal city. There are still some, fewer than a dozen, who might be labeled "the social secretary with a grandfather," and there are many who run competent, efficient bureaus to which nearly any one may come. But today the theory is still that a white sheep is the best detective when it comes to searching out the social black sheep. So the secretary with the ancestors and the membership card in the cave dwellers' group is in highest favor. Next to having an ancestor that was Supreme court justice, the best recommendation for a social secretary seems to be that she has once worked at the British embassy.

Gossip gives many women credit for having had the first social secretary, but history bestows that honor on Mrs. William C. Whitney, stylish wife of Cleveland's secretary of the navy. It was she, you will remember, who dazzled society by scattering orchids lavishly about the dinner table. To the real cave dweller, Mrs. Whitney was indeed an outsider, but that made her all the more determined that no newer outsider would get to her parties. Hence the social secretary.

Back in Cleveland's day, the White House kept "lists" for official functions. But these lists were kept by men and were more a matter of bookkeeping than social surveying.

In President Harrison's administration, Mrs. Levi P. Morton, wife of the Vice President, followed Mrs. Whitney's example. About this time the hitherto feminine problems of whom to invite to what began to be taken most seriously by a soldier, one Col. Theodore Bingham, but lately returned from service as military attaché of the American legations in Berlin and in Rome to the less glamorous post of "superintendent of public grounds and buildings in Washington."

A New Dictator.

Washington was taking on the dimensions of an international tapestry now, with legations being raised to the rank of embassies, and local ladies fluttered about, worried over the proper way they did this and that in European capitals. Col. Bingham always seemed to know the answer, and loved to give it. He soon became military aide to Harrison and general boss of all things social.

His power, of course, increased with the coming of the McKinleys. For Mrs. McKinley, the invalid, was much too ill to try to write the social calendar for the official years at the White House, and her husband was too loyal to her to permit any other woman to act as hostess to the nation. So Col. Bingham made the rules. He is charged with the responsibility of having made the rule that an unmarried woman could not take precedence over a matron, even though the matron's husband was of lower rank than the father of the girl who was acting as official hostess for him.

A case in point was that of Marguerite Cassini, the unmarried grandniece of Count Cassini, Russian ambassador. As official hostess for her grand-uncle, she ranked, so her friends insisted, the wives of the cabinet members. Col. Bingham declared that she fell in the unmarried daughters class and should be placed after the cabinet members' wives. This was later to develop into a crisis at a White House dinner, where the married women refused to go to the party unless Countess Cassini was pushed down the line.

But, to return to the McKinley administration, which was so completely dictated to by Col. Bingham, there was at that time a young woman giving aid to several important members of the official family. This young woman was Isabelle Hagner, daughter of Dr. Charles E. Hagner, one time a leading physician at the capital. When she made her debut in 1895, Miss Hagner was one of the most popular buds of the season. Her father was invalided; a fortune, left her by her mother long since dead, was lost in bad investments.

The First Secretary.

She had to make a living. Her uncle, Augustus B. Hagner, was an associate justice of the Supreme court. Rather naturally, she turned to government service and went to work in the surgeon general's office of the war department at a salary of less than $1,000 a year.

That was in 1897. The following year Mrs. Russell A. Alger of Michigan, whose husband was secretary of war, asked her counsel on some social matters and she gave it for friendship's sake. Mrs. Cornelius Bliss, wife of the secretary of the interior, begged for a similar service, but insisted that it be on a business basis. Miss Hagner took the money and squeezed in the work after office hours.

Then the daughter of James Wilson, secretary of agriculture, asked for an hour or so a week.

Miss Pauling, niece of the late Chauncey Depew and his hostess for the winter, persuaded her to give them some time. It is said that Isabelle Hagner is the only person out of the family who ever knew why Miss Pauling broke her engagement to Lieut. Edie. If she knew she never told.

Mrs. Mark Hanna, whose famous "little White House" across the square from the big White House was a welcome rendezvous for Washington celebrities, needed Miss Hagner's help on a calling book. That was more than a quarter of a century ago, and the capital was still in the hansom cab muslin gown stage. But even then the duties of keeping a calling book were burdensome.

Recalling that work, Miss Hagner, who is now Mrs. Norman James of Baltimore, has said: "That was the most tedious task of the day, both for myself and the person making the calls. I would look over every card, enter in a book under that day's date the name and address of every house at which she must leave cards, how many to leave, the name of the house guests, if any, and the occasion of the call—official, after ball or dinner, or courtesy to a newcomer. The lady for whom this was done would take the pack of cards and the instructions, put them in front of the brougham and direct the coachman.

And, it might be added, a slip on their part meant often a political slip.

Dynamite in a Democracy.

After McKinley casualness about ceremonies, came Roosevelt carefulness about them. Mrs. Roosevelt found things confused. Since the days of Cleveland, men had been keepers of the White House entertainment lists. Their policy had been to add but never delete. Once a name was placed on file, nothing, not even death, could remove it. And, worse for Washington, those who were politically dead were still included.

Mrs. Roosevelt, the new mistress of the White House, had a social background that many a predecessor might have envied. She didn't need any one to tell her how to do things, but she did need some one to help her do them. She thought immediately of Belle Hagner, once a pupil in Col. Roosevelt's Sunday school class at St. John's Episcopal church and since those days her own warm friend. So she sent for Miss Hagner.

The name "social secretary" was, in those days, dynamite in a democracy. So the young woman was listed in the government books as "Hagner—Isabelle L., clerk, White House, $1,400."

But she was really the czar of the blue room and the nemesis of the climbers. She went to work on the lists, cutting off old names, adding a few new. She made some people mad, some glad. She whipped the calendar into shape with four state receptions a year: diplomatic, judiciary, congressional, and army and navy, in that order: and two state dinners: one for the diplomats, and one for the Supreme court. The dinner for the speaker of the house was added to the list in Taft's time, and the dinner to the cabinet, which starts the season, was added later. And Miss Hagner clashed with Col. Bingham, and conquered.

Superseded.

This handsome military man was no longer the overlord of social procedure that he had been in the McKinley administration. Even his own chief, Secretary of War Elihu Root, had, it was rumored, called him down because he had rebuked Chauncey Depew for telling such funny jokes at state functions that the President's guests laughed too boisterously, in the opinion of the colonel.

Miss Hagner's first conflict with him was at a series of afternoon receptions where, she quickly saw, the guests had been served through the netting of Col. Bingham's favor. At the first reception those guests who had been most carefully percolated—ambassadors, very rich senators, and very important cave dwellers—were in evidence. At the second reception the guests were fairly important, but not so good as the first group. But the law of diminishing returns was operative, and by the time the fourth reception was held everybody saw the pattern, and all but those who had been bidden to the opening party of the series were furious.

Nobody knows the real inside of the story, but gossip trails the plan back to Col. Bingham. At any rate, the plan was displeasing to Miss Hagner. She called in the alphabet, that impartial arbiter, and, thereafter, sent out invitations to a series of receptions in alphabetical sequence.

The Red, Red Rose.

Then came the now famous tea of Dec. 19, 1902. Mrs. Roosevelt's gown was to be of a salmon pink. So Miss Hagner, the story goes, asked Col. Bingham to have ten dozen roses, of a pretty pink hue—for she was mindful of the fact that pink harmonizes with salmon pink—sent up from the botannical gardens to the drawing room.

The tea started, Mrs. Roosevelt, in her salmon pink gown, was busy greeting guests which Col. Bingham, as aide, presented to her. But, in her place at the tea urn, Isabelle Hagner saw one, two, seven, ten dozen vivid red roses, each one screaming at the salmon pink. And she was very angry. She reported the incident to Mrs. Roosevelt, who suggested that perhaps there had been no pink roses available.

But no, that was not true. For hadn't Miss Hagner taken the trouble to find out that there were pretty pink roses at the botannical gardens? And today the feminists in Washington will point back to this incident and will insist that it was the beginning of the feud between the colonel and the social secretary which ended, they maintain, in a victory for the social secretary which sent the colonel down to Buffalo to make a survey of docks.

But the anti-feminists will snort and ridicule and declare, "Poor devil! To a man any rose that isn't yellow or white is a pink rose."

At the end of the Roosevelt régime Miss Hagner went back, simply, to her former job in the war department, to stay for four years at an increased annual salary of $1,600. For the Tafts did away with a social secretary and introduced into the executive mansion a new official, the housekeeper. Elizabeth Jaffray held that post.

Miss Harlan Enters.

When the first Mrs. Wilson was about to come to the White House she was searching for an experienced aide and summoned Miss Hagner down to Princeton for a conference which resulted in the woman once more leaving the government office for the chief executive's home. It wasn't so very long after this, however, that she married Norman L. James, a wealthy Baltimore widower, and Washington lost its first and, many swear, finest social secretary.

During the war the attention of Washington was engaged with other rules than the formularies of social secretaries, though it was this same war, with its corollary of social change, which brought to these women scores of new clients once the armistice was signed.

On the 5th of March, 1921, the government, according to the provision made in the Roosevelt régime, sent a social secretary over to the White House, to be paid from government funds. The salary by then was raised to $3,000 a year. The woman they sent to Mrs. Harding was Miss Laura Harlan, qualified through heredity and environment for the position, which seems to demand lots of important ancestors or association with the British embassy.

Miss Harlan was the daughter of the late John Marshall Harlan, for 34 years associate justice of the Supreme court, where his independent decisions won for him the nickname "the Great Dissenter." A brother, John Maynard Harlan, was one time Chicago mayoralty candidate and, more recently, has been sponsor of the Lisman traction plan for Chicago.

Upon the death of her father in 1911 Miss Harlan undertook to help the family finances. In 1920 she was social secretary to Lady Geddes, wife of the British ambassador.

So she came to the White House with good credentials tucked away in her important portfolio. She took complete charge of the social program, though some of the technical details were under the direction of the state department.

Miss Harlan Leaves.

When Calvin Coolidge stepped into the presidency made suddenly vacant by Harding's death Laura Harlan retained her position, and Mary Randolph, who had been Mrs. Coolidge's personal secretary at a salary of $1,800 while Coolidge had been Vice President, continued to serve the wife of the President, in her old capacity and at her old salary.

But one June morning Washington was surprised to hear that the position of official social secretary had been abolished; that Laura Harlan was to go; that much of her work was to be done by the third assistant secretary of state, and that Mary Randolph, retained as personal secretary, was to get Miss Harlan's salary of $3,000 per annum, and her own $1,800 would thus be saved in the yearly budget.

Miss Harlan's friends were furious. The state department boys, under the third assistant secretary, were none too pleased. Some speculated that Charles Lee Cooke, for 20 years in charge of White House ceremonials, might resign rather than assume the minute details of, as it were, social housekeeper and master in etiquette. But "Doc" Cooke did not resign. He took on his extra burdens with an extra smile and discharged his complicated duties efficiently.

Last winter, with the establishment of a definite division of protocol, under the state department, Cooke was made an associate of James Dunn, and together the pair hold sway over a kingdom of precedence, customs, and costumes.

And Miss Harlan has taken refuge in that respectable haven for the genteel of Washington who want a pay check—the real estate business. She no longer seats dinner parties; she goes to them, some of the most distinguished.

The Toga Slips.

With Isabelle Hagner married, and Laura Harlan selling real estate, the toga of the social secretary has slipped on to many other shoulders. One of the better known of the group is Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner, who married a cousin of Isbelle Hagner's, and therefore can claim relationship, if only by marriage, to a Supreme court justice—Augustus B. Hagner.

On the wall of her office hangs a large map. No generals planning a campaign ever consulted a diagram more seriously than do the hostesses who peer at it daily before starting their winter campaign. It's not a chart of hills and rills, states, city blocks or square miles. It's a map of months and weeks and days. Even the fragmentary portions of the fleeting hour are recorded. It is the basis of the social calendar at the federal city.

A black pin stuck into a certain hour of a certain day indicates that one entertainment is scheduled for then. A cluster of black pins means a number of simultaneous entertainments. A white pin means an open date. The black pins are all carefully keyed, and consultation of the book of records will tell just what functions are to be given on a specific date.

Independent.

This clearing house is available to others than Mrs. Hagner's own clients. So the mother of a debutante will, before she arranges with her own social secretary for the coming out ball, check up with the map to see that her daughter will not have to share honors with half a dozen other debutantes the same night.

Mrs. Hagner, like many of her associates, turns author once in a while and writes of social precedence.

Another social secretary who has put her ideas on etiquette, ritual and ceremony into a book is Anne Squire. In a chapter devoted to the "Social Secretary," she makes it plain that hers is a guild of extremely independent women. For she says, pertly: "It is not to be supposed that this chapter is intended as a plea for social secretaries. It is the last thing they need. Their time is always filled and their only problem is how to make it more elastic. They usually have two or three regular appointments each day. They must go from one to the other and clear the desk at each place, if possible.

"Often there are dinners or luncheons to seat. They have their own obligations of keeping in touch with the official world in order to do their work with understanding. And they have novices to train who send out calls for help when they get nervous, or are confronted with one of the strange, new difficulties apt to crop up suddenly. In addition to all of this, there is the work on receptions, dances, teas, and temporary appointments to keep."

Miss Squire's sister, Helen, was one of the fraternity until her marriage to Maj. Gen. Joseph E. Kuhn. Laura Harlan's sister, Ruth, is in the business. And, speaking again of ancestors, Mrs. Rose Gouverneur Hoes, director of a large social bureau, is a direct descendant of President Monroe, through his daughter, Maria, who married Sam Gouverneur, her father's secretary and her own distant cousin.

Mrs. James Mandeville Carlisle, war widow of one of the cave dwelling Carlisle's and mother of Katharine, prominent debutante of last year, attends to the many social duties that fall upon Mrs. Dawes, as wife of the Vice President. Mrs. Blair Banister, Senator Carter Glass' sister and Mrs. Woodrow Wilson's intimate friend, holds the portfolio of social relations at one of the large hotels.

The Power of the Press.

And there are many others. Some are enterprising, energetic press agents who see to it that the name and the fame of their clients is sent, daily, to the newspapers, together with her favorite photograph. The value of proper mention in the society columns is tremendous at the capital. Tradesmen, they say, scan the pages eagerly and are willing to extend credit to the women whose goings and comings are frequently recorded.

Kings, sitting in throne rooms away across the sea, are also supposed to read the society columns of a Washington, D. C., U. S. A., newspaper. These sovereigns, says the grape vine whisper, often judge the relative value of ambassadors by their success in publicity. All the embassies and legations are careful to send into the society editors all their dinner lists, with the name of every guest, all ranked properly, of course.

In fact this ranking, in print, is so accurate that Congressman A——, invited to a dinner party at the Italian embassy on Tuesday night, has only to read the announcement of the dinner in Tuesday morning's paper to know just how many guests are going to rank him, and just whom he can high hat. If he has time and is quick at arithmetic, he can figure out exactly where he is going to sit, and what women will be either side of him.

Occasionally a social secretary, forgetting whether she is playing the social game under the new or the old rules, is confused about placing the speaker of the house, and sends it out incorrectly. Secretary Mellon's social secretary made such a mistake for the early editions of the papers last winter, and telephoned the correction with as great zeal as if she had been making a deadline with the solution of a crime.

Three Sets of Books.

The duties of a social secretary fall into three general classifications: First, she will be hired for the entire season by one client, as Mrs. Dawes employs Mrs. Carlisle; second, she will give regular time, daily, or several times a week through the season, to a small number of clients; third, she will do piece work.

This piece work may be brief, as the seating of one dinner party, of the instructing of a new hostess in the proper way to write to ambassadors, senators and justices. Or it may be prolonged, as when a social secretary guarantees to see a debutante through her first season.

In connection with her work the social secretary keeps three sets of books. The dinner book contains all the rules, and all the exceptions, in rank and precedence. In addition it has something that the division of protocol will never have—a gossipy list of personal preferences among local celebrities, and of pet grudges In this book, for instance, might be a notation to the effect that it is not wise to invite Senator and Mrs. A—— and Senator and Mrs. B—— to the same party, even though the men are close friends. For didn't Mrs. A say of Mrs. B, "She is blonde, though 65," and doesn't Mrs. B as well as all Washington know that Mrs. A said it?

Snubs and Smiles.

The luncheon book is similar to the dinner book, but its data are more feminine, for luncheons, although they have more male guests than anywhere in this country, still are more essentially for the amusement of women.

The calling book is the most complicated. It is kept separately for each client. All her calling obligations are listed and properly checked off when discharged. All calling cards left at her door are identified and indexed. And the everlasting element of the book lies in the fact that it can never be complete, for one call calls for a return call, and so on, and on, and on.

Yes, the social secretary in Washington, with or without an illustrious great grandfather [though preferably with one] is an important person. She can snub, or she can smile. She can elevate or she can demote. Often she can make a goat of a sheep. And sometimes she can make a sheep of a goat.

Tampa Carnival a Colorful Affair; Resort Capitulates to Pirate Band

TAMPA, Fla., Feb. 9.—[Special.]—Chicago and midwest visitors to Florida west coast resorts followed a gay band of bloody sea roving pirates into Tampa this week and joined in the city's greatest annual carnival festivities of King Gasparilla and his krewe.

They sailed with the jolly old king from out in the bay, up the Hillsborough river to the very heart of the city, and cheered while the buccaneers demanded Tampa's surrender, under a terrific bombardment with cannon.

A colorful parade followed the landing of the brigands, and the krewe's annual coronation ball climaxed the winter's social season here.

The winter colony here received another thrill last night in the appearance of Jack Dempsey, promoting the Sharkey-Stribling fight at Miami, and Jack Sharkey of Boston. Society turned out in force to greet the two fighters at the Benjamin field arena, and found their exhibition something out of the ordinary.

The center of seasonal activity will shift next week to Fort Myers, where President Elect Hoover and Henry Ford will congratulate Thomas A. Edison on his eighty-first birthday anniversary. Mr. Edison's birthday at Fort Myers, with the attendant horde of correspondents and cameramen, are always high points of interest to Florida visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Gardiner of Chicago and Mrs. James M. Studebaker Jr. of South Bend, Ind., were guests this week at a dinner party given by George Balch of Cincinnati at the Belleair Country club.

Arrivals at Belleair this week included Mrs. George S. Bird and Miss Henrietta Bird of Chicago.

Among the Chicago arrivals at St. Petersburg were Mr. and Mrs. John C. McCarthy, Mrs. Charles Ringer, Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Fitch and Miss Patricia Fitch, Mr. and Mrs. John N. Cadogan, Mrs. H. H. Gallarneau, and Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Donnellan.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

Churches Observe Race Relations Day

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE observance of Race Relations Sunday today will be held with an exchange of pulpits by white and Negro ministers. This way of promoting good will has been arranged under the auspices of the commission on interracial relations of the Chicago Church federation, of which Dean Shailer Mathews of the divinity school of the University of Chicago is chairman. Regarding the project, Dean Mathews said: "The problem of race relations is not primarily economic but religious. In other words, it will be solved by the elements of good will and human brotherhood—which are essentials of Christianity.

"More than sixty years have passed since emancipation. During that time the progress of the Negro people through their own struggle with the sympathetic cooperation of white friends in the face of great handicaps and opposition from many directions shows the high quality of their ability. Statistical figures cannot measure progress of a people but they indicate the strength and volume. Available figures of Negro life show decided economic progress, educational advancement and religious development of this striving people.

"In 1866 there were, according to the Negro year book, 12,000 homes owned by Negroes; there were 20,000 farms operated by them; 2,100 businesses conducted by them, and their accumulated wealth was estimated at 20 million dollars. In 1926 there were 700,000 homes owned by Negroes; 70,000 businesses conducted by them, and their accumulated wealth was about two billion dollars. The interracial commission of the Chicago Church federation feels that its most effective work can be done in getting the races acquainted and in informing each group of the advancement of the other. No better way is possible than in the exchange of pulpits by Negro and white ministers."

The program to be followed contains these churches and speakers. At 10:30 a. m.:

Oak Park Baptist—the Rev. Moses H. Jackson.

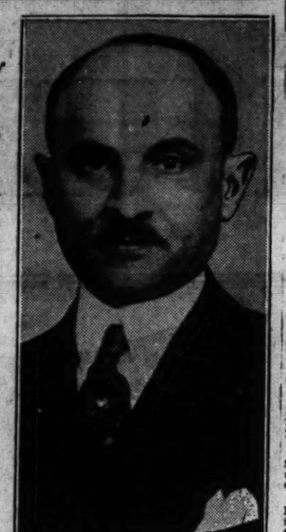
The Holy Name Society of the Holy Cross will present a St. Valentine's program on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock as the feature of an "open house" night. A one act comedy, "Between Trains," will be given, and also a debate on some well known topic of the day. The debaters will be John Sheridan and Stephen Brogan, students at Quigley seminary. It will be held at the Holy Cross School hall, 65th street and Maryland avenue.

This evening at 8 o'clock Bishop Francis J. McConnell of the Methodist Episcopal church, president of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, will speak before the West Town Forum at the Washington Boulevard Temple auditorium, Washington boulevard and Karlov avenue (4100 west). His subject will be "Religion's Challenge to Industry," and the address will be followed by a discussion period.

The Alden-Tuthill foundation in the Chicago Theological seminary, 5757 University avenue, this year is providing a course of three lectures on Wednesday and Thursday by the Rev. Mordecai Wyatt Johnson, D. D., president of Howard university, Washington, D. C., on "The American Negro and the Christian Church." Dr. Johnson received the degree of A. B. from Morehouse college, Atlanta, Ga., in 1911, and from the University of Chicago the same in 1913. He also received B. D. from Rochester Theological seminary, S. T. M. from Harvard university, and the honorary degree of D. D. from Howard.

From 1917 to 1926 he was pastor of the First Baptist church of Charleston, W. Va., when he became president of Howard. President Johnson is widely known among students of the United States. Wednesday at 8 p. m. the subject will be "Missionary Creativeness in the South"; Thursday at 4:30 p. m., "The Northern Church and the Migrant Negro," and at 8 p. m., "The Negro and the World Mission of the Church."

Bishop Charles P. Anderson, on advice of his physician, expects to leave Chicago this week for the south for an extended period of rest and has advised his diocese that in his absence, Bishop Sheldon M. Griswold, suffragan, will be delegated as much authority as it is possible for a suffragan to assume. Bishop Anderson will return to the diocese in two or three months.



THE REV. LESLIE G. WHITCOMB.

The Rev. Leslie George Whitcomb began his new pastorate with the coming of the new year and was installed as pastor of the Lake View Presbyterian church by representative ministers of the Presbytery on Jan. 24. He comes from the Glen Ellyn Presbyterian church which he has served for the last two years.

The Rev. Mr. Whitcomb obtained his early education in South Bend, Ind., where he also taught for two years before going to California. Here he spent some time as evangelistic singer with the Barrett party under the auspices of the Los Angeles Bible institute. He continued his studies at Hanover and Wabash colleges, and then entered the Presbyterian Theological seminary, at that time McCormick, Chicago.

After his graduation he was for seven years pastor of the Walnut Street Presbyterian church, Evansville, Ind., until a merger of that church left him free to accept the pastorate of the newly organized church at Glen Ellyn, Ill. The family consists of Mrs. Whitcomb and three children of school age.

The speaker at the Congregational Ministers' union tomororw morning at 11 o'clock at 19 South La Salle street will be Dr. Romain Dyboski, head of the English department of the University of Krakow, who will speak on the subject "Poland, Old and New." Dr. Dyboski is also lecturer in the Slavonic department of the University of London and holds degrees from several European universities. He is here in America now at the invitation of the University of Chicago and has been lecturing at Dartmouth, Harvard, Vassar and other colleges in the east. He was in the Polish legion in Siberia, was captured by the bolsheviki and suffered many things.

The annual meeting of the board of pensions and relief will be held at the La Salle hotel on Wednesday. Executive business will occupy the morning session and there will be the annual luncheon at 12:30. The feature of the afternoon service will be the report of the secretary and the presentation of an engrossed and illuminated testimonial to Dr. J. B. Hingeley, the founder and former secretary and now the general counsellor and research secretary.

Two volumes intended to stimulate interest in the Bible by adding quotations in prose and poetry in harmony with the themes and spirit of the sacred book have recently come from the press and are worthy of comment. Both volumes are octavo in size.

The Supplementary Bible [Buxton-Westerman Company, Chicago, Ill.]—This book is edited by the Rev. W. B. Millard, D. D., in collaboration with seventy ministers, educators and authors, thirty-eight of whom live in or near Chicago, as does the editor in chief. These co-editors represent seventeen different religious denominations. More than 800 authors are quoted, including those found in the ancient and modern classics, as well as authors still living in active literary production or those who have recently died and had achieved for themselves recognition. Three indexes make all references quickly available. They include an index each of subjects, authors, titles and first lines of familiar quotations. Such an arrangement is indispensable to any anthology and in this case has been thoroughly and helpfully done.

The idea of the book is to take the great themes of the Bible—God, devotion, the church, sin, salvation, providence, the state, immortality, heaven and others—and supplement what the Bible has said by what other inspired men and women have said through the years since the Bible was completed. It is held that when Sarah Flower Adams prayed for God's guidance as she wrote "Nearer, My God, to Thee," it is for us to believe she was as truly if not as mightily inspired as was Isaiah or St. Paul. There are 32 full page illustrations in color, chiefly of Bible characters and scenes, but the same thought of supplementing Bible truth is carried out in the use of Millet's painting of the Angelus, showing a peasant man and woman in prayer in a field while the angelus sounds from the visible but dstant church steeple. The book is intended for the family and for the minister's study table.

Among the Chicago ministers who have collaborated in selecting the anthology are Dr. James Madison Stifler, the Rev. Frank Fitt, Dr. Hugh Elmer Brown, Dr. Ozora S. Davis, Dr. George Craig Stewart, Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Dr. Ernest Fremont Tittle, Dr. John Thompson, Dr. Frederick F. Shannon, Prof. Fred Merrifield. Among the more modern poets or authors quoted are Katherine Lee Bates, Francis William Bourdillon, John Kendrick Bangs, Berton Braley, Bliss Carmen, Thomas Curtis Clarke, Edwin Markham, Florence Earle Coates, Edgar A. Guest, A. S. M. Hutchinson, David Starr Jordon, Harry Kemp, Rudyard Kipling, Douglas Malloch, John Masefield, Wilbur B. Nesbit, Thomas Nabb, Henry Van Dyke, and Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

As Dr. Charles E. Jefferson of Broadway tabernacle, New York City, one of the eastern co-editors, has said: "The wisdom of the editor is exhibited at its highest in his devoting only five pages to heaven and thirty-three pages to the state. The chief defect of the New Testament is the silence on civic virtue and public spirit and patriotism."

Tinker and Thinker: John Bunyan [Willett, Clark & Colby, Chicago-New York]. The Bunyan literature is now abundant, owing to the present celebration of the 300th anniversary of the birth of the famous author of "Pilgrim's Progress." This book by William Hamilton Nelson, San Francisco, Cal., is one of the best. It is brief, succinct, covering the life and times of Bunyan, and is written with the enthusiasm of a man who says his entire life has been revolutionized for good by the life and writings of his hero. Other works by Bunyan, "The Story of Christiana and Her Children," "The Holy War," and "Grace Abounding," are also described. Bunyan's saving sense of humor, his courage, heroism, and world-wide influence are all told in a most graphic way. Here is orthodoxy, vital and at its best.

"Awakened China" will be the subject of an address before the River Forest Sunday Evening club in the church auditorium at Jackson and Quick avenues by Dr. Tehyi Hsieh, the "Roosevelt of China." The Rev. Irving E. Putnam will offer the invocation and benediction. George Lane, baritone, will be the soloist. George H. Clark will give an organ recital from 7:15 to 7:30.

Tomorrow evening at 7 o'clock, under the auspices of the Salem Men's club in the Salem Evangelical church, 6324 Emerald avenue, the annual Father and Son's night will be observed. James Hibben, a member of the Chicago bar and a descendant of an old abolition family of North Carolina during the civil war, will speak on "One Phase of the Negro Question" after the dinner hour. The male quartette and the church orchestra will furnish musical numbers on the program.

The Harriet Hammond McCormick memorial, Chicago's new hotel for women, with individual rooms for 500, opened its doors Feb. 1 and will hold an "open house" to the public today from 4 to 9 p. m. This new gift to the Y. W. C. A. from Cyrus Hall McCormick is located at Oak and Dearborn streets, 1000 north. Mr. McCormick has given the home in memory of his wife, Harriet Hammond McCormick, a former member of the board of directors, and with his wish that this be "a perfect tribute," every detail of furnishing has been carefully chosen. With this addition to its other residences, a total of 1,100 girls may enjoy the protected roofs of the Y. W. C. A.

Two other housing units have officially opened during the year. The Carrie McGill memorial residence takes care of 110 girls at 4938 Drexel boulevard, while the South Park way residence at 4555 South Park way, houses 75 Negro girls provided for in the Victor Lawson bequest. The home life which these centers makes possible for students of art, music, and business who come from small towns to our city is one of the definite services the Y. W. C. A. offers.

Social Calendar Has Several Blanks

By Mildred Jaklon.

THE social calendar for this week is letting us down in our valiant efforts to propagandize Chicago as a late winter resort with attractions that rival those of places which enjoy brief but strenuous popularity by virtue of their weather, and which appeal to those whose appetite for city life is jaded at this particular season. The society editor's day book for the coming seven days is bare of smart events, save for the reception Mr. and Mrs. Silas H. Strawn are to give at their apartment at 219 Lake Shore drive to the American Friends of China for his excellency, Dr. C. C. Wu, Chinese minister to the United States on Thursday afternoon, and so we might as well abandon the attempt to make social life sound busy.

There are plenty of smaller affairs going on, much charitable and political work is being done, and to tell the truth, the smart folk who are remaining in town are liking it.

Life Is Fair and Fine in Nassau.

But if you aren't contented with your stay at home lot, don't read these comments on Nassau in the Bahamas where a contingent of our fashionables are: "Everywhere the eye meets the luscious greens of verdure, grass, and trees; nothing is scorched and arid, and the gardens are replicas of those to be found in old world English homesteads, to which are added the exotic brilliance of Poinciana and the glory of Bougainvillea. . . . Motoring is a leisurely joy—the native folk are charming. . . . The peaceful unruffled life on the islands seems to have molded their natures to a calm enjoyment of life. . . . In little sheltered bays, the sands are pearl white, and the sea an incredible sapphire blue." But enough of some writer's impressions.

Charles T. Atkinson of Lake Forest, one of Nassau's faithful summer visitors, arrived recently, having made record breaking speed on the trip. His time for doing the journey, which he has probably traversed oftener than anybody else, was 43 hours and 10 minutes. Leaving Chicago at 2:45 on a Saturday, he arrived in Miami at 8 o'clock the following Monday morning, and left by air, after breakfasting, to arrive in Nassau at 10:55 o'clock.

Will Leave for the Amazon.

But the John T. McCutcheons, who own that delightful spot of the earth's surface known as "Treasure Island," near Nassau, are foregoing the delights of late winter life there for a strenuous but interesting trip to South America. Mr. McCutcheon told me the other day that they expected to use almost every known kind of transportation on their trip, including mules, canoes, and airplanes, as well as the more conventional modes of travel. They will fly for about 800 miles from the headwaters of the Amazon river to somewhere else in tropical wilds.

Condé Nast and his bride, the former Leslie Foster, daughter of the Volney Fosters, whose marriage took place during the Christmas holidays at Aiken, S. C., have been at Nassau, also.

SOCIETY PERSONALS

Mr. and Mrs. Mark Lyonal Salomon of 4910 North Francisco avenue, Mr. and Mrs. Walter G. Leininger, and Miss Edith Valentine sailed on Jan. 29 on the Scythia for a Mediterranean cruise and a tour of Europe.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert J. Wagner and their daughter, Alice, of 2418 Greenleaf avenue, are now in Cuba for a short stay before going to Miami for a six weeks' visit.

Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Ewell of the Edgewater Beach apartments are at the Biltmore hotel in Los Angeles for the remainder of the winter.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert W. Dillings of Kenilworth and their children returned recently on the Ile de France from a trip through North Africa, Egypt, and Palestine.

Mrs. George H. Jones and Miss Dorothy Evans of Oak Park sailed last Monday from New York for a Mediterranean cruise and tour of the continent.

Chicagoans wintering in the south include Mrs. Ella Wood Dean of the Cooper-Carlton hotel, who is at Palm Beach, Fla., for several weeks before going to California, and Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Saylor of 4513 Dover street and their niece, Miss Cecil Steffin, who are in Miami.

Mr. and Mrs. Gale Smart of 424 Melrose street are expected to return on Friday from a six months' tour of Europe and the orient.

Art Notes

The fourth exhibition of the year sponsored by the Renaissance society of the University of Chicago opened last Wednesday afternoon, and will continue until March 1 in 205 Wieboldt Hall, 1050 East 59th street. It consists of American oil paintings and French water colors loaned by Martin A. Ryerson.

The new exhibitions at the Arts club are drawings by Modigliani and water colors by Rodin, and, in the oval room, antique jewels, rare gems and fine pearls, collected by Olga Tritt of New York City.

An exhibition of paintings by contemporary German artists opened yesterday in the reception hall of the North German Lloyd, 130 West Randolph street, and will continue through February. The paintings are loaned by the Art Museum of Bremen.

The Swedish-American Art association is planning to hold an exhibit of work by members from March 3 to 11, in the attractive gallery offered by the Illinois Women's Athletic club.

The Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors met at dinner Feb. 1 and later visited Pauline Palmer's studio at 4 East Ohio street. Alfaro Figueirop, a distinguished Mexican, who has been called the "man of three hundred faces," gave a unique entertainment.

The National Academy of Art announces an exhibit of sixteen lithographs by Ivan Mestrovic, loaned by Viola Norman. The exhibit opens today and will continue through Feb. 24.

Divorces on Rise; Reno Is Popular

By Nancy Randolph.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

NEW YORK, Feb. 9.—[Special correspondence.]—Reno has suddenly come into favor again. That, of course, means that divorces are on the increase once more and we are finding things to talk about. Somehow, a Reno divorce seems much closer than a Paris one, and judging by the number of freedoms accomplished and the number yet to come, a broad readjustment of marital couplings is under way.

Every week brings its two or three. First it was the Raymond F. Bakers, whose parting was followed by their almost immediate remarriage. Then that somewhat amazing person, Gloria Gould Bishop, Jr., attained her freedom, and this week none other than the demure Marion Tiffany Saportas bent the knee before the Nevada courts and was told she could go forth and find herself another helpmeet should she so desire.

Not Likely to Remarry Soon.

Marion, however, now that she is free, is not likely to marry in a hurry. Married in 1921, she and Martin Brown Saportas have never been too much together in the social scheme. Both are very much outdoor sportsmen, and a United Hunts or Meadowbrook polo match without Marion would be something inconceivable. Always a noted figure, though never an active one, Marion is one of the most popular of the younger matrons. For some two years now, she and Martin were agreed upon going their seprate ways. The divorce, however, was not generally expected.

On the other hand, the news that Mrs. Frederick Cameron Church Jr., daughter of Mrs. Graham Fair Vanderbilt and W. K. Vanderbilt, is asking for her freedom form the young Bostonian she married some few summers ago, is far from unexpected. Muriel, like her mother, is a most energetic person. Socially she believes in accomplishing as much as possible. Newport, New York and Washington are always being honored with her presence, and like her mother and the present Mrs. Charles Minot Amory, no equine event of any importance is just right unless Muriel is there.

Debutantes at Yale Prom.

With Lent beginning this week, the social mill is turning slowly. The debutantes finished their reign by dashing up to New Haven at the beginning of the week to grace the junior prom of the Yale undergraduate body.

Most of the girls made the run by motor, many being guests at parties over the week-end preceding the ball in University hall. The rest of the undergraduate program was almost as feverish an exhibition as the prom, which lasted well into the dawn.

Famous Watteau Offered for Sale

By May Birkhead.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]
[Copyright: 1929: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—Considerable interest was aroused here by the announcement that one of the world's greatest paintings, secretly abstracted from the former kaiser's collection at Potsdam, had been bought by Sir Joseph Duveen with the intention of reselling it in the United States.

No one has even visited the Louvre without admiring that great—some call it the supreme—French masterpieceby Watteu, "Embarquement pour Cythere." Although this is not a recent story, says Sir Joseph, the French are particularly surprised, not only because no notice was taken at the time of the sale, but because the picture in question is a replica of the one in the Louvre.

With Paris having the dullest season of the year, social interests have largely been combined with art. A young woman and a cosmopolitan figure, Miss Isabel Nelson, whose parents are well known in Chicago, is holding her first private exhibition of her sculptures and works. She has often been a contributor to the spring salon here, but for the moment she has turned her studio into an attractive art gallery, where she daily invites groups of her friends to tea. The father of the sculptress, although of English birth, has lived much of his time in America and in 1917 took as his second wife Helen Swift Morris, widow of Edward Morris and daughter of Gustavus Swift of Chicago.

Mr. Nelson was for several years member of parliament for Liverpool, England. His daughter took up modeling for an amusement, but her exhibition has made such a hit that she is going to take up sculpture seriously by preparing a life size statue for the forthcoming salon.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence A. Powell are among the Chicagoans who have just arrived. They are stopping at the Ritz for a short time before going south.

NEWS OF THE RELIGIOUS WORLD

The Church Club of Chicago [Episcopal] will conduct daily Lenten services each noon, except Saturdays and Sundays at the Garrick theater, 68 West Randolph street. Mr. Courtenay Barber, chairman of these services for more than fifteen years, announces the following schedule: Wednesday to Friday, Bishop James Wise of Kansas; next week from Monday to Friday inclusive, Dr. Frank Wilson, bishop elect of Eau Claire, Wis.; Feb. 25 to March 1, Bishop Irving Peake Johnson of Denver; March 4 to 8; Capts. B. Frank Mountford and Tom Greenwood of the Church Army in America, New York; March 11 to 15, the Rev. C. Leslie Glenn, New York, secretary of college work of the Episcopal church; March 18 to 22, Dr. Phillips E. Osgood, Minneapolis, Minn.; March 25 to 29 [Holy week], Bishop Ernest V. Shaylor of Omaha, Neb. These services are interdenominational in character and will be conducted in the loop throughout the Lenten season.

The Catholic Club [Episcopal] will hold noonday masses in the loop during Lent in Room 425, 137 South La Salle street. D. D. Doolittle is president.

Garland Anderson, the colored dramatist, whose drama, "Appearances," has been a great success on the American stage, will speak on "Race Relations in America" at 11 o'clock this morning at Hull house, 800 South Halsted street, under the auspices of the Religious Society of Friends (Quakers). Mr. Anderson was formerly a bellboy at a large hotel in San Francisco and he wrote his play while he was at work. "Appearances" has been running at the Shubert Princess theater since Dec. 23.

Tomorrow evening at the Chicago Temple, Clark and Washington streets, Bishop Robert E. Jones will be the speaker at a special Lincoln day observance before the Methodist preachers' meeting.

Granville Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, Granville avenue at Lakewood, the Rev. Garfield Dawe, pastor, will observe an appropraite pre-Easter program. The church interior has been remodeled and a modernistic altar front has been installed. A suggestion toward a more formal service of worship has been made in the artistic setting of a rood-beam cross set out from an illuminated background of the rising sun. These emblems are symbolical of the passion and Easter seasons.

Beginning this week, each Thursday morning at 10:30, this church will hold a Lenten preaching service. Speakers of city-wide repute are on the program. The service will last one hour. Come in quietly and, when you must, retire in the same manner.

The Parish of St. Thomas the Apostle, 55th street at Kimbark avenue, the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Shannon, pastor, will have a Parochial Retreat opening on Wednesday, which is Ash Wednesday, the beginning of Lent, and closing on Sunday, March 31. This retreat will be conducted by the Jesuit Fathers Donohue and Powers with the Rev. M. J. O'Connor, S. J., in charge. The hours of the exercises are as follows: Wednesday, 3 p. m., beginning of the daily afternoon Lenten services —solemn mass—distribution of ashes; beads, short instruction, benediction; 8:15 p. m., sermon and benediction, distribution of ashes. Feb. 17-24, retreat for children of the parish; Feb. 24-March 3, retreat for married women; 6 a. m., mass and instruction; 8:30 a. m., retreat mass and sermon; 8:15 p. m., sermon and benediction; March 3-10, retreat for married men, services as above; March 10-17, retreat for unmarried women, services as above; March 17-24, retreat for unmarried men, services as above; March 24-31, holy week, special liturgical week.

This afternoon at the 4 o'clock vesper service at the Fourth Presbyterian church, North Michigan boulevard and Delaware place, Dr. John Timothy Stone and Dr. Harrison Ray Anderson, pastors, Dr. Robert E. Speer, senior secretary of the board of foreign missions of the Presbyterian church, will speak on "The Light of the World." W. Chester Ewers, tenor, will sing "To the Lord Our God," by Gaul, and Eric De Lamarter will be at the organ.

The Holy Name Cathedral, State and Superior streets, will hold a mission during the first two weeks of Lent, beginning next Sunday, and three priests from Notre Dame, Ind., the Rev. Father James French, the Rev. Father Wendell P. Corcoran, and the Rev. Father T. J. Kearney of the Congregation of the Holy Cross, will preach. The mission services the first week will be for the women and will include low masses at 5:30 and 8 a. m., each followed by instructions, the stations of the cross, in the afternoon and evening devotions at 8 p. m., consisting of instructions, rosary, sermon, and benediction of the Blessed Sacrament.

There will also be mission services for the children in the grade school on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday afternoons of the first week. The men's mission will open Sunday, Feb. 24, and will follow the same program as the women's mission except that the second mass in the morning will be at 7 o'clock.

Dr. Arlo Ayres Brown, for eight years head of the University of Chattanooga (Tenn.), was unanimously elected president of Drew university, Madison, N. J., at a recent meeting of the board of trustees. He succeeds Dr. Ezra Squier Tipple, who presented his resignation as president in November to take effect when his successor should take office. It is expected that Dr. Tipple will carry on the work until July 1. Dr. Brown graduated from Northwestern university in 1903.

The climax of the interracial Sunday meetings will be the presentation of the Harmon awards to two of the recipients living in this area: the Rev. L. K. Williams, D.D., LL.D., pastor of the Olivet Baptist church and president of national Baptist convention, and Archibald J. Motley, artist. The presentation will be at the Olivet Baptist church, 31st street and South Parkway, at 8 o'clock this evening by Dean Shailer Mathews, who will preach and preside at the service under the auspices of the interracial commission of the Chicago Church federation.

Beginning next Sunday, the first Sunday in Lent, there will be given a two week's mission at St. Vincent's Catholic church, Webster and Sheffield avenues, by Father McCabe, C. M., assisted by Fathers Cannon, Frommell and Kermaghan, all Vincentians. The first week of the mission will be for the women and the second for the men, while the children will be given their mission afternoons the second week.

The purpose of a mission is to stir up the faith of those who are the good people of the parish, to call back those who may have fallen back in the fulfillment of their duties, and to explain the teachings of the church to non-Catholics. The instructions deal with the sacraments of the church and the commandments of God and the church.

The Correct Way to Remove Wrinkles

There is one way—a simple, pleasant, sure method that thousands use to drive wrinkles away. That way is to get two ounces of Spiol from the drug store, mix with half pint of water, adding a tablespoon of glycerine. This makes a delightful, rich cream which you may spread thinly over forehead, temples, cheeks, around eyes and rub in until absorbed. Instantly the pores tighten, dead outer skin sloughs off and new, smooth, plump, youthful skin appears. With this action, AWAY go wrinkles, lines and crow's-feet.

There is a simple method that makes blackheads go as if by magic. Get two ounces of Calentio powder from your drug store, sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth, rub briskly over the affected parts, and in two minutes you will find every blackhead dissolved away entirely.

TRIBUNE STARTS MODEL AIRPLANE ARTICLES FEB. 17

Youngsters Are Invited to Join League.

Starting next Sunday, THE TRIBUNE is going to help boys and girls engage in that most fascinating of sports, airplane model building and flying—to find out, first hand, just the things that make airplanes soar and sail and swoop—to join a national league of airplane model enthusiasts — to compete in contests that will lead to local and national championships, handsome trophies, medals, certificates, and other awards—and, for three national champions, free trips to Europe!

MERRILL HAMBURG.

THE TRIBUNE is sponsoring the activities of the Airplane Model League of America, in coöperation with representative newspapers throughout the nation and the American Boy Magazine. It has arranged with Merrill Hamburg, secretary of the league, for a series of weekly articles telling exactly how to build and fly brand new airplane models—gliders, pushers, championship outdoor models, record-smashing indoor models, exact-to-scale scouting models. Through these articles Chicago aviation enthusiasts will be enabled to construct the best models known to the science.

"Fine Lessons in Aviation."

"Building and flying models is the finest way I know to learn the fundamentals of aeronautics," says William B. Stout, president of the league. Mr. Stout is designer of the famous Ford-Stout all metal trimotor monoplane, and he started model building thirty years ago. He ought to know!

But model articles aren't all that THE TRIBUNE is offering. Everybody who is interested in the sport may join the A. M. L. A.—the accompanying coupon tells how—and get the official membership card and button. All members of the league may

COLLEGE SATIRE TO BE STAGED AT N. U. TUESDAY

Cast Includes Students and Townsfolk.

"B. A., B. A., Black Sheep," a satirical comedy of modern college life, will have its world premiere Tuesday at Annie May Swift hall, on the Northwestern campus, as a presentation of the University theater.

The play, written by Prof. Burdette Kinne of Columbia university, in collaboration with Elmer Rice, unfolds the story of a "big man" on the campus who was so valuable in every way except scholastically that the authorities refused to expel him in spite of insulted professors and shattered rules.

Parodies Nursery Rhyme.

The peculiar title, incorporating the insignia of the bachelor of arts degree, is taken from Prof. Kinne's arrangement of the nursery rhyme.

B. A., B. A., Black Sheep,
Have you any wool?
Yes, sir; yes, sir;
A whole head full.

Prof. Kinne, Barrett H. Clark, New York drama critic, and representatives of the New York Theater guild, from which the play was obtained, will be on hand to witness the performance.

Garrett H. Leverton, dramatic director of the school of speech, is directing the play, assisted by Miss Winifred Ward, director of the Children's theater; Mrs. Charlotte Chorpenning, and Theodore B. Hinckley. Dean Farnsworth is designing and executing the scenery.

Town and Gown Cast.

The performance will be repeated Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings also. About sixty persons will take part, some of them drawn from the student body and others from north shore amateurs. Some of those taking part are Miss Dulah Pulskamp, Miss Dorothy Verges, Samuel S. Otis and Malcolm Fyfe.

ADD 27 POLLS ON THE NORTH SIDE FOR FEB. 26 VOTE

There will be 27 more polling places on the north side at the aldermanic election Feb. 26 than there were last November, John S. Rusch, chief clerk of the board of election commissioners announced yesterday.

Increases in voting population have necessitated adding nine precincts to the 50th ward, six to the 49th, six to the 43d, four to the 40th, and two to the 45d in order to keep the number of voters in each precinct close to 400.

Scout Leaders to Hear Northwest Executive

Stanley R. Miller, field scout executive of the northwest district, will speak at the session Tuesday evening, of the newly formed University of Scouting, in the Berry Memorial Community house, Giddings and Leavitt streets.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs Anent the Passing Throng.

BY FRED PASLEY.

WE note with pleasure that Neighbor Tommy Airth, who runs Chandler's book store, the Parnassus on Davis street, Evanston, is displaying a variety of remembrances for St. Valentine's day, which falls on Thursday of this week, come Shrovetide. They are of fetching design with fitting sentiments, and embody the gamut of emotions, from the jocular to the poignantly tender. One, particularly, is attractive, depicting a heart prettily transfixed with a Cupid's arrow and bearing the legend, "To My Valentine." The whole but typifies the enterprising spirit of Fountain square's popular bookseller, whose sterling qualities, we are glad to report, have been recognized by his fellows in his elevation to the vice presidency of the Evanston chamber of commerce and the presidency of the Kiwanis club.

Mrs. Linnie Reckzeh, comely matron, whose two daughters, it will be recalled, Lalla and Adair, were formerly belles of Lake View High school, but latterly are attending Lake Forest college, fashionable co-educational institution in the suburb of that name, north of here, and whose son, Jack, is a student at Lane Tech, specializing in chemistry, in which he has achieved considerable success, heading his class at this writing, had a minor conflagration in her home at 2042 Bradley place. The damage, which was slight, has been repaired.

CENTRAL NORTH MINISTERS VOTE TO WIDEN AREA

Enlargement of the membership and scope of the Central North Ministerial association was discussed at a recent meeting of the church representatives at the Larrabee Street Y. M. C. A. It is proposed to include the area bounded by North avenue on the south, Ashland avenue on the west, Barry avenue on the north, and the lake to the east.

The Rev. Dore N. Ester, pastor of the Diversey Parkway Evangelical church, 925 Diversey parkway, presiding officer at the meeting, announced that steps are also being taken toward organizing union Lenten services. The association was organized several years ago to foster union services, especially on Thanksgiving day, and has a membership of eleven churches in the north central district.

Members of the association are: The Rev. Ray Berger, Christ Presbyterian church; the Rev. Lester Laubenstein, Second Evangelical church; the Rev. Robert D. Clements, Church of the Covenant Foundation; the Rev. John W. Funston, Wesley Methodist Episcopal church; the Rev. J. Schott, Centennial Methodist Episcopal church; Dr. E. S. Mills, Wellington Avenue Congregational church; Dr. E. Scharf, Grace English Lutheran church; the Rev. L. Hegmaier, Third Reformed church; the pastors of Belden Avenue Baptist church and Fullerton Avenue Presbyterian church, and the Rev. Mr. Ester.

900 Organize for Concerts in Evanston

The Civic Music association of North Evanston, organized two weeks ago and sponsored by the North End Mothers club, completed its membership drive last night. According to Mrs. Charles C. Wells, chairman of the organization, there seems little doubt that when the records are tabulated the full quota of 900 members will have been obtained.

MRS. C. C. WELLS. [Modlett Studios.]

"The project," said Mrs. Wells, "was launched with the idea of giving residents of the north end of Evanston three gala occasions each year when they may meet and listen to really good music

Membership Limited to 900.

"The membership is limited to 900 because that is the seating capacity of the Haven school auditorium, where the concerts will be given. But we are trying to give every one in the north end a chance to join."

Mrs. William P. Turner, president of the North End Mothers' club, is co-chairman with Mrs. Wells. Mrs. A. J. Hennings is secretary and John A. Brooks of the Central State bank of Evanston is treasurer.

The advisory committee includes Eddy S. Brandt, president of the North End Men's club; Lambert Kaspars, president of the North End Improvement association, and Mrs. Turner.

Others Active in Movement.

Others who have been active are: Mrs. William L. McKay, Charles T. Beall, Dr. Wilson K. Fisher, and Walter E. Hardy. Miss Dema Harshbarger, president of the National Civic Music association, has assisted in the organization.

The first series of programs is planned for the winter season next year. On Friday evening of this week, however, an opening program is to be held at the Haven school.

Mexican Oil and Turmoil to Be Topic of 'Y' Lecture

"Oil and Turmoil in Mexico" will be the topic of the second of a series of lectures on "Christianity and Politics" to be given Tuesday evening at the Wilson avenue Y. M. C. A., 1726 Wilson avenue, by Prof. W. D. Schermerhorn of Northwestern university.

MOVE TO WIDEN WILSON AVENUE EAST OF CLARK

Property Owners Ready to Sign Petition.

Business men, residents, and property owners on Wilson avenue met Thursday at the Sheridan Plaza hotel, Sheridan road and Wilson avenue, to discuss plans for a movement to widen Wilson avenue. The meeting was sponsored by the Wilson Avenue Property Owners and Business Men's association, a temporary organization formed to promote the proposed plan.

Various individuals and groups on Wilson avenue have sought the widening of the street for several years, and the most recent movement has grown out of a report made by a committee, appointed by the Wilson Avenue Property Owners association, two months ago, to investigate the possibilities of the improvement, which reported that a large number of the property owners were in favor of the widening. Following this report the temporary organization was formed.

Petition to Be Circulated.

William H. Fisk, 344 Wilson avenue, president of the new organization, said that a petition recommending the widening will be circulated among the property holders, and that Ald. John A. Massen [48th] will then be asked to present the petition to the city council.

The proposed plan calls for the widening of the roadway, which is now 40 feet, to 50 feet by cutting off five feet of the sidewalk on each side of the street. The sidewalks are now 20 feet wide.

The principal reason for the widening, as reported by Mr. Fisk, is to provide a wide through street to connect the new Lincoln park extension with the north and south thoroughfares, Western avenue and McCormick road. There are only three through streets in the uptown district, he pointed out, Wilson, Montrose, and Lawrence avenues. The last two have street car tracks, which make their use for vehicular traffic unsuitable.

Cemeteries Affect Traffic West.

St. Boniface cemetery, north of Lawrence avenue, and Graceland cemetery, south of Montrose avenue, block any other through traffic route to the west. It was further pointed out that Addison street, more than a mile

PUPILS TO HONOR LINCOLN IN SONG, STORY, TABLEAU

Most North Side Schools Arrange Programs.

The life of Abraham Lincoln will be commemorated in song, story and tableau tomorrow in most north side schools. Recitations, reading of the Gettysburg address and flag drills will also be a part of the programs which will be presented by the pupils either in assembly or in class rooms. In most cases the entertainments will be given tomorrow, due to the closing of the schools on Tuesday, Lincoln's birthday, although in several schools the emancipator will be honored later in the week.

All school children have been invited to see a motion picture of the life of Lincoln, which will be shown at the Field museum in Grant park Tuesday.

Tableaux Program at Hibbard.

At Hibbard Junior High school, 3244 Ainslie street, the drum and bugle corps, composed of 65 pupils, will be in charge of the program in the assembly hall. A salute to the flag will open the entertainment, consisting of tableaux depicting five characteristic rôles for which Lincoln was known: "Boyhood," "Young Lawyer," "Rail Splitter," "Lincoln and Douglas," and "The Emancipator." The corps, which is under the direction of James E. Mason, will be uniformed in orange and blue capes and white hats.

Pupils of the 8-A class will present the program at Stockton Junior High school, 4430 Beacon street, which will be given on Thursday. Two playlets entitled "Present for Mr. Lincoln" and "He Keeps His Word" will be given under the direction of Miss Emily Hammond, teacher of the class.

Varied Show at Sullivan.

"The Life of Lincoln in Song and Story" is the title of a show honoring Lincoln at Roger Sullivan Junior High school, 6631 Bosworth avenue. Various events in his life will be portrayed in scenes and tableaux by students of all the classes of the school. Music of Lincoln's time will complete the program, under the direction of Miss Mabel J. Hansen, dean of girls.

In the elementary schools the programs will be given generally in the different classrooms. At Armstrong, Bateman, Field, Hamilton, and Le Moyne schools a part of the regular assembly period will be devoted to honoring Lincoln. Students will give readings, recitations, poems, and flag drills and patriotic music will aid in observing his birthday.

Joint patriotic programs honoring both Lincoln and Washington will be given at Stewart school, 4525 Kenmore avenue, and Stone school, 6239 North Leavitt street, on Feb. 21. Playlets portraying the principal events in the lives of the two Presidents will be provided by the students.

Mobers, Adolph J. Seidner, Milton R. Tausig, and William Wolken.

The association is seeking to have the Cuyler station of the Chicago and Northwestern Railway at Irving Park boulevard, renamed "Northcenter," Mr. Wermich announced. A letter requesting the change has been sent to officials of the railway.

The organization has also indorsed the movement to secure the replacement of the name Robey street for Damen avenue.

Joint meetings with the Northcenter Lions club are planned by the members of the association.

James Thomson, graduating representative of Parker High school, was asked by the junior department of the Chicago chapter to attend the convention with Miss Miller as a delegate for the junior and senior organizations.

ANSWERS

Following are the answers to quotations previously published:

Quotation—My politics are short and sweet like the old woman's dance.

Answer—This phrase was used by Abraham Lincoln in the first campaign speech he ever made. It was in 1832, when he was 23 years old and a candidate for the legislature of Illinois. The incident is mentioned in Wayne Whipple's "The Story Life of Lincoln." Whipple quotes from T. P. O'Connor's "Some Old Love Stories." According to O'Connor, it was Lincoln's "maiden effort on the stump, made at Pappsville, a village eleven miles from Springfield. The full speech, given by O'Connor, is as follows:

"Follow citizens, I presume you all know who I am. I am humble Abraham Lincoln. I have been solicited by many friends to become a member of the legislature. My politics are short and sweet, like the old woman's dance. I am in favor of a national bank. I am in favor of the internal improvement system and a high protective tariff. These are my sentiments and political principles. If elected, I shall be thankful; if not, it will be all the same."—A. A. Freedlander, Allerton house, 701 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.

NOTE.—This first campaign of Lincoln for a public office occurred shortly after he had returned to New Salem from the Black Hawk war, in which he was chosen a captain of volunteers, but saw no fighting. He was defeated at the polls and entered an unsuccessful storekeeping venture. Two years later, however, he was elected to the legislature. His delivery of the above speech is verified by Herndon and by Nicolay and Hay.

Quotation—You can fool all the people some of the time, and some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time.

Answer—During the Lincoln-Douglas debates of 1858, which marked the senatorial campaign between Lincoln and United States Senator Stephen A. Douglas, Douglas made the attempt to fix on Lincoln, by documentary proof, the charge of abolitionism which he had been making for some time. He read a set of resolutions which he said had been adopted at a convention in Springfield in 1854, in which a radical anti-slavery group voted Lincoln to be "of their stripe."

Lincoln replied, denying subscribing to or being present at the adoption of the resolutions, but it was a halting disavowal with no proofs. However, a lively young Chicago reporter, Robert Hitt, discovered the "set of resolutions," whether known or not to Douglas, to be a set adopted at an entirely different meeting.

Lincoln's supporters cried "Forgery," and the incident led to a growing doubt of Douglas. Hence it was while further refuting the charges of Douglas that Lincoln, in his speech at Clinton, Ill., on Sept. 8, 1858, used and made famous the above quotation. For a long time Lincoln was accepted as the author of the statement, but it has since been established as an expression borrowed by him from the witty philosopher, P. T. Barnum (1810-1891), a contemporary and keen sympathizer with Lincoln. Barnum at this time was lecturing in England.—Mrs. Gladys M. Still, 4643 Massachusetts street, Gary, Ind.

NOTE.—To prove her point, Mrs. Still exhibits a letter received from an informant in Washington, D. C., three years ago, when she was having an argument with a friend in Denver as to the authorship of the expression. The information comes from the library of congress, as follows: "P. T. Barnum is accepted as the author of the expression. Lincoln has been called the author, but this has since been denied. It is said to have been quoted by Lincoln in his speech at Clinton." There is some doubt, however, as to whether Lincoln ever used this exact expression, although several who heard the speech have said that he expressed a similar thought.

Quotation—Now he belongs to the ages.

Answer—Five days after Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox Court House President Lincoln met with his cabinet to discuss plans for reconstruction. That was Good Friday, April 14, 1865. In the afternoon he and Mrs. Lincoln took a drive through the parks of Washington. That night they went to Ford's theater, where "Our American Cousin," a comedy, was being performed.

As the President, Mrs. Lincoln, and their guests, Miss Harris and Maj. Henry Rathbone, daughter and stepson of Senator Harris of New York, entered the box, the orchestra struck up "Hail to the Chief," the actors stopped, and the audience rose, applauding and cheering.

About 10 o'clock an actor, John Wilkes Booth, called by historians a fanatical secessionist, entered the President's box by the back door, which he barred. Standing behind the President, he shot him in the head with a pistol. The President fell forward. Maj. Rathbone attempted to grapple with the assassin, who slashed him with a knife. Booth then leaped upon the stage. His spur, however, caught in the American flag draped around the box, and in his fall his leg was injured. Shouting "Sic semper tyrannis!" he strode across the stage and disappeared. Eventually he was trapped in a burning barn in Virginia and killed.

In the theater there was grief and consternation. The President was carried to the house of a Mr. Petersen, across the street from the theater. All night he lay unconscious. As the day dawned his pulse grew weaker, and at 7:22 a. m. he died. When the strong heart ceased to beat it was Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war, who broke the silence with the words, "Now he belongs to the ages."—Miriam M. Whitehead, the Greenwood inn, Evanston, Ill.

(In addition to a description of Lincoln's death another contributor has told something about the life of Secretary Stanton. That part of his answer is deemed worthy of a prize. It is given below.)

Answer—Edwin McMasters Stanton (1814-1869), a native of Ohio, was a noted lawyer before he became a cabinet officer. Before the civil war Stanton was a Democrat, opposed to slavery but a firm defender of the constitutional rights of the slave holders. He was a bitter opponent of Lincoln, whose party he hated and distrusted.

In the reorganization of President Buchanan's cabinet in 1860 Stanton became attorney general. Although he had often violently denounced President Lincoln, the latter saw in him a good war minister and in January, 1862, invited him into the cabinet. In his administration of the war office Stanton was vigorous, rigid, and often harsh, but he kept the armies in the field well equipped and infused energy into procrastinating generals.

Remaining in the cabinet of President Andrew Johnson after Lincoln's assassination, Stanton clashed with Johnson over reconstruction policies and was suspended. The senate refused to concur in the suspension and Stanton was returned to his duties. When the senate's impeachment proceedings against Johnson failed, Stanton resigned. In 1869 he was appointed justice of the United States Supreme court, but he died four days after his appointment.—Leon Lelkin, 3315 Douglas boulevard, Chicago.

Two commissioners are to be elected in the Albany Park district, one in Hollywood park, two in Ravenswood Manor Gardens, and two in the River park district.

Those who have filed petitions to run for commissioner of the Albany Park district are Clarence Hansen and Arthur C. Wilhelm, "nonpartisan candidates for lower taxes"; Fred W. Lee and C. Freeman, "lower taxes and better playgrounds."

Albert H. Wolff is running on a platform for "reduced taxes"; Morris Seigleman for "more athletic activity," and Selma Savit, the only woman to run for commissioner of any park, says, "Give the women a representative."

Arthur L. Paulson is the only candidate who has thus far submitted his name as candidate for commissioner of Hollywood district. He represents the people's nonpartisan group.

In Ravenswood Manor Gardens district there are four people's nonpartisan candidates—John A. Miller, Charles G. Carlson, George T. Schmidt, and Charles H. Eckel. Two men, Paul W. Herbst and Joseph Casterton, are running on a platform for "reduced taxes."

Three "community playground builders" are running for office in the River Park district. They are Fred J. Bohn, Albert F. Otte, and Elroy C. Sandquist. Maurice E. Walsh, Alexander J. Topp, Irvin W. WOMEN'S CLUB TO HEAR AIMS OF CANDIDATES

Invites Council Aspirants of 50th Ward to Speak.

All the 50th ward aldermanic candidates will speak at the community meeting of the Lincoln Square Women's Civic club Thursday afternoon at the Three Links building, 4740 North Western avenue. Mrs. Josephine Clemens, president of the club, announced that the candidates have been invited to attend the meeting and outline their platforms.

"Several years ago women's organizations never thought of requesting candidates to appear before the members and explain their stands on ward and city questions," Mrs. Clemens said. "The Lincoln Square Women's Civic club believes that it will aid the members in casting their ballot for alderman in the coming election if they are given an opportunity to meet each of the candidates and hear each outline his platform.

Club to Make No Indorsement.

"The women of the 50th ward are as interested in the campaign and the needs of the ward as are the men voters," she continued, "and although we, as a club, do not intend to indorse any candidate, the members of our group will be greatly aided in voting for the candidate who seems best qualified to represent the citizens of the ward."

The five candidates who will address the club women are Arthur W. Arneman, Wiley K. Galloway, Carl Lundquist, Curtis F. Mellin, and A. K. Mose, the present alderman, who is seeking reëlection.

Mr. Arneman, running on a nonpartisan platform, is a contractor at 4448 North Western avenue. His candidacy has received the approval of the civic safety commission. Mr. Galloway is said to have the backing of the Deneen group in the 50th ward. He is an attorney by profession.

Democrats Back Lundquist.

Mr. Lundquist, who was defeated in the run-off in 1927, again has the backing of the Democratic organization of the ward, headed by Henry A. Zender, ward committeeman. Mr. Mellin, who has announced he is running on a strictly nonpartisan platform, is said to have the backing of Richard B. Prendergast, Crowe-Thompson leader. Mr. Mellin is a member of the Chicago crime commission, president of the 50th Ward Community club, and is in the sporting goods business at 219 West Madison street. He has been indorsed by the 50th ward nonpartisan association.

Ald. Mose, who is completing his first term in the city council, has the backing of the 50th Ward Regular Republican club, including County Commissioner Louis Nettelhorst, and State Representative Emil A. W. Johnson. He has not received the indorsement of the Municipal Voters' league, due to his votes to oust Ald. Albert for the sale of Holden court and for the Faherty appropriation, the three issues listed by the league in its judgment of the present aldermen.

PRIZES AWARDED FOR PHOTOS OF CHILDREN

All three prizes in The Tribune's contest for amateur photographers of the north side were awarded this week for pictures of children. The first prize of $5 went to Mrs. Richard Campbell, 1525 Granville avenue, for "A May Day," a picture of Anne Stuart Campbell. "Story Time," showing Helen Jean, Robert V., and Harriet O'Brien and made by R. V. O'Brien, 821 Foxdale avenue, Wilmette, won the second prize of $3. The third prize of $2 was awarded to Mrs. Harold Wallace, 5950 North Paulina street, for "Our Backyard," showing Carleton and Marjorie Wallace.

Mrs. Seaverns at first thought the robins were harbingers of spring, but while they were still lingering in the buckthorn hedge along came a flock of Bohemian waxwings, arctic birds, which seldom fly this far south. Now Mrs. Seaverns isn't sure they weren't the last robins of summer.

In our last issue we recorded the marriage of John J. McPhaul, civic leader, author and journalist of Rogers Park. It now develops no mention was made of the bride. We now propose to mention her. The bride was the former Miss Margaret [Peg] Callison, whom Mr. McPhaul had been courting some time. An impetuous wooer, Mr. McPhaul unexpectedly decided upon the trip to the altar, to the utter surprise of the couple's hosts of friends. They were pronounced one by Judge Francis Borrelli.

PLANS PREPARED FOR $3,598,000 SEWER SYSTEM

Antiquated sewers which served the then sparsely settled Rogers Park district in 1880 before it was annexed to Chicago will soon be replaced by sewers large enough to accommodate the thickly populated apartment house district that it is today, according to plans recently completed by engineers of the board of local improvements. The estimated cost of the new system is $3,598,000.

Scores of flooded basements at every heavy rain have resulted in meetings of property owners at frequent intervals during the last few years, and formal requests have reached the board from citizens of the district demanding the installation of a modern sewer system. The board is ready to comply with their request, and the clerical division is now making a list of property owners in the district served, preparatory to a public hearing which is expected to take place within a few weeks.

A sewer system must be installed with as little delay as possible, according to Ald. E. I. Frankhauser [49th], who has recommended the project to the board, and has been working with property owners on the matter for the past few months.

The sewer system for Rogers Park consists of pipes running east and emptying into a sewer running south along the lake. This intercepting sewer carries the flow south to Lawrence avenue, thence west to the river.

The diameter of the new sewer is planned to be from 11 feet at the mouth to three feet at the north end, with branches three, five, seven, and eight and half feet in diameter.

The main line will be in Magnolia avenue from Lawrence avenue to Argyle street, thence from Argyle street to Pratt boulevard, in Glenwood avenue, and in the boulevard from Glenwood avenue to Ashland avenue, where it will run to Birchwood avenue.

COLLECTOR

NAGOZRUK.

ESKIMO OBTAINS RARE BIRDS FOR CHICAGO MUSEUM

The only Eskimo with a government permit to collect scientific specimens, Nagozruk of Cape Prince of Wales, is now hunting rare birds and mammals up in the Arctic circle for the Chicago Academy of Sciences free museum in Lincoln park.

Several years ago when Alfred M. Bailey, director of the museum, was on an expedition in northern Alaska, he met Nagozruk, who had received an excellent education and at one time taught at Cape Prince of Wales. Realizing the advantage of having a native collector, Mr. Bailey tutored him in the science of ornithology.

Recently the museum received from Nagozruk a shipment of more than 60 specimens of rare birds, including the Emperor goose, spectacled eider, king eider, ivory gulls, crested auklets, and diving birds. A pomarine jaeger, a hawklike gull that preys on birds three or four times his size, and the Arctic tern, known as the world's greatest traveler because it annually flies from the Arctic to the Antarctic and back, were also in his collection.

Nagozruk is embarking on a new expedition to obtain specimens of mammal life for the museum. His territory is about three hundred miles within the Arctir circle, where the temperature runs 40 to 50 degrees below zero and the scenery is ice and more ice, icy waters and barren tundra.

ROGERS-CLARK GROUP STARTS MEMBER DRIVE

Plans Protest on Surface Car Service.

Plans for a new membership drive are being made by the Rogers Park-Clark Street Business association, Frank M. Schutz, president, reports At a recent directors' meeting it was decided to admit any business man in Rogers Park who desired to become a member, instead of restricting the membership, as in former years, to business men and merchants on Clark street.

Letters will be sent to all business men in the district soliciting membership, Mr. Schutz said. In addition to the president, other members of the committee are George P. Phillip and Ralph Johnson.

Committee Heads Named.

Other committee chairmen recently appointed are: Program, Dr. F. Patrick Machler; auditing, Jack Roach; advertising reference, Fred Katz; streets and alleys, Harry Feites; public affairs, Charles W. Reilley; social service, Mrs. Anna E. Kelsey, and publicity, Ludwig Sussman.

The association plans to send representatives to interview officials of the Chicago Surface Lines regarding what is declared to be poor service given by Clark street cars, stressing the fact that south bound cars often fail to stop for passengers. Numerous complaints have also been made to officers of the association. It is reported, that Clark street cars scheduled to go to the end of the line at Howard street often do not go beyond Devon avenue.

Cites Lines' Explanation.

Officials of the transportation line previously declared that the cars were forced to turn back at Devon avenue when running behind the schedule, Mr. Roach said.

Dates of future association events were also decided at a recent meeting. The annual card party for members and guests will be held Feb. 27 at the Knights of Columbus hall, 7000 North Clark street. Harry Levin is chairman of the committee in charge. The annual picnic will be held during July.

TRIBUNE STARTS MODEL AIRPLANE ARTICLES FEB. 17

Youngsters Are Invited to Join League.

make use of its free question and answer service—they'll find out about this invaluable feature when the first article is published.

They may compete in official contests to be held here in Chicago, and the winners here will be sent to Detroit to compete in the Second National A. M. L. A. contests to be held in June by The American Boy.

They may earn honor certificates for meritorious work in building models.

And in their work they will have the backing of William B. Stout, the league's president; Commander Richard E. Byrd, now exploring the white Antarctic by air, who is honorary president; and the following vice presidents, all aviation notables: Clarence Chamberlin, New York-to-Germany flyer; Maj. Thomas G. Lanphier, former commander of the famous First Pursuit squadron; Eddie Rickenbacker, America's premier ace; Eddie Stinson, twice holder of the world's endurance record in the air; Alvan Macauley, president of the company which makes Packard aviation engines; Thomson Burtis, flyer and writer of air stories; and Frank A. Tichenor, publisher of Aero Digest.

First Step in Joining League.

The first step for boys and girls who want to help themselves to become more air-minded is to join the league. Clip the coupon, fill it in and mail it, following the instructions it gives. It will bring back the membership card bearing the signatures of Commander Byrd, Mr. Stout and Mr. Hamburg, and the membership button.

Then watch for the first article. It will describe a dandy beginning model—an all-wood glider that is easy to construct and a cinch to fly. The article will tell, too, how to obtain materials for building the glider and other ships to follow in the series.

When the series of articles has been completed, there will be local contests to determine the local champion in outdoor and indoor model flying, and in scale model building. There will be valuable prizes in these contests—watch THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE for details of them. There will be junior and senior contests—in all probability the junior contest will be open to those 16 years old or younger, and the senior to those between 17 and 21.

Then, following the local contests, trips to Detroit for the winners!

And what fun the hundreds of entrants in the national contests will have!

"There will be banquets and sight seeing and exhibitions and other entertainments by the dozen," says Griffith Ogden Ellis, editor of The American Boy and general chairman of the second National A. M. L. A. contests. "Detroit has a thousand interesting sights for its visitors, and we plan to make it possible for champions from all over the country to take full advantage of them.

Trips to Europe Offered.

"And there will be, of course, the official national airplane model contests. Boys will compete for the Stout indoor trophy and the national outdoor trophy, as well as for the scale model championship. Winners of all three contests will win trips to London and Paris, with all expenses paid and with an adult in charge of the party.

"In each class of each contest, moreover, there will be trophies, medals, certificates—more than 400 awards in all."

Outdoor and indoor championships will go to the builders whose models make the best endurance records. The outdoor contest will be held at Selfridge field, home of the first pursuit squadron of the army air service. The indoor competition will be held at Olympia arena, the giant auditorium where 15,000 people may gather to watch the events.

The scale model championship will go to the builder of the model most closely corresponding in scale dimensions and appearance to the large ship after which it is copied. It is not necessary for scale model builders to go to Detroit—they may enter their models by mail if it is impossible for them to attend in person.

Great news, isn't it? Model airplane builders of Chicago may win one [or two or all three!] of those championships. Watch for the first article.

CELEBRATE 53D ANNIVERSARY

MR. AND MRS. PAUL O. FIEDLER.

VOICE of the NORTH SIDE

LIKES NEIGHBORLY NEWS.

Chicago, Feb. 1.—Would a word of thanks and appreciation from an old lady for your lovely metropolitan section be out of place? My husband and I have lived in Chicago all of our lives and watched the city grow from a small city to this great metropolis.

And I can truly say that the metropolitan section brings back memories of the old days when a person was not entirely lost sight of in the town, when every one knew what other people were doing, and when the whole city was quite neighborly. To us old people your section of the paper helps to bring back that old neighborhood spirit, which has, except in certain localities, completely gone.

Thank you so much for the golden wedding announcements which mean so much to an old couple who have been happily wedded for so many years and have watched this city grow from its infancy, almost. Most sincerely, MRS. B.

DRUNKEN CAB DRIVERS.

Evanston, Ill., Feb. 5.—Why can't Evanston do something about the drunken taxi drivers that infest the town? I have occasion to take a taxi at the Central street "L" in Evanston frequently late at night and sometimes I think it is better to walk home along the dark street than trust myself to one of those cabs. YOUNG GIRL.

YOU SURELY CAN.

Chicago, Jan. 29.—Some of the boys are counting on taking part in the model airplane contests by THE TRIBUNE. I will be 13 in March. Can I take part in the contests, too?

JAMES W.

Same Home 43 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Paul O. Fiedler celebrated their fifty-third wedding anniversary Monday evening at their home, 617 Arlington place. They were married Feb. 4, 1876, on Goethe street near La Salle street, when that section of the city was recovering from the effects of the Chicago fire. In 1886 they moved to Frederick street, later renamed Arlington place, where they have resided for forty-three years.

The party was also in celebration of Mrs. Fiedler's 74th birthday. She was born in Altona, Germany, and came to Chicago in 1868. Mr. Fiedler was born in a suburb of Boston in 1854 and came to Chicago in 1864. Two great granddaughters were present for the celebration Monday night.

Robert J. Casey to Give Loyola Theater Lecture

Robert J. Casey will give an illustrated travelogue on the "Mystery of Angkor," Feb. 18, at St. Ignatius auditorium, Loyola and Glenwood avenues, as the seventh of a series of entertainments sponsored by the Loyola Community theater.

Edgewater Valentine Party.

The annual Valentine party of the Edgewater Catholic Women's club will be held Thursday afternoon at 616 South Michigan avenue. Mrs. James P. Hackett, 5250 Kenmore avenue, is president of the club.

Fund for First Offenders.

The Women's Protective association sponsored a benefit card party Monday afternoon at 2413 Lawrence avenue, proceeds of which will be used to aid first offenders appearing in court. Mrs. Helen Hartough is president of the association.

UNITE TO FIGHT ASSESSMENTS ON KIMBALL AVE.

Civic Groups Say Levies Are Unjust, Too High.

Notices of special assessments sent out by the board of local improvements last week to property owners for the proposed widening of Kimball avenue between Grace street and Lawrence avenue brought scores of expressions of indignation and resulted in their filing objections to the amount of the assessments with the county clerk last Thursday.

The Montrose District Improvement association, through its secretary, Sheldon H. Haddock, is supporting property owners in their contention that the assessment are exorbitant, according to B. A. Rooney, president. His group has obtained the coöperation of the Northwest Federation of Improvement Clubs in the matter.

Says $400 Should Be Maximum.

While lots along the street have been assessed from $850 to $500, or approximately $17 a foot, the amount in no case should be more than $400, Mr. Rooney said.

Residents are particularly at odds with the board over the amounts of assessment, since they say they were previously informed that an entirely new street would be laid. In the assessment notices received last week it became apparent that from Irving Park boulevard to Lawrence avenue new concrete foundations would be provided only for the widened section, while the present foundation would be used in the center.

Cite Benefit to Other Streets.

Another objection set forth by Mr. Rooney is that the assessment should not be spread only among residents of Kimball avenue, because the street, which is expected eventually to become a bus line, will also be of benefit to residents in streets at least two blocks on each side.

As for the amount to be paid out of the public benefit, Mr. Rooney said that while there was $250,000 assigned to this improvement by a bond issue passed in April, 1927, it now turns out to be only $61,500, according to figures given the property owners by the board of local improvements.

Board of local improvements officials, however, explained that the $250,000 was not assigned to the Grace-Lawrence improvement alone, but also to improvements on three other sections of Kimball avenue. The $61,500 represents one-fourth of that amount, which the board says is the correct figure for the section in which Mr. Rooney is interested.

The estimated cost of the Kimball avenue widening from Grace street to Lawrence avenue is $247,000, of which $185,000 is to be borne by the special assessments.

LEGION POSTS TO CELEBRATE LINCOLN'S DAY

So. Side Groups to Have G. A. R. Vets as Guests.

Among the Lincoln's birthday programs planned this week by various Legion posts will be that of Jackson Park post No. 555, on Tuesday night. Arrangements have been completed for a dinner at the Southmoor hotel, 67th street and Stony Island avenue, in honor of the six remaining members of H. L. Drury post, No. 376, G. A. R. The dinner will begin at 6:30 o'clock. It will be followed by dancing. The event will be informal. Music and entertainment are promised. Edward Schneider is in charge of reservations.

Woodlawn post, No. 175, will have an Americanism program on Lincoln's birthday. The meeting will start at 8:30 p. m. in the post's new headquarters, 1208 East 63d street. Mrs. George Macauley, Americanism chairman, has arranged to have Fred E. Busbey, state Americanism officer of Illinois, as speaker for the occasion.

Chairman William Russakov of the entertainment committee of North Town post, 431, is giving an informal dinner-dance at the Chicago Town and Tennis club, Tuesday evening. A gala event is promised those who attend. The post has been promised two sketches from loop productions by Past Commander Martin Callahan of Galbraith post. Those in charge of picking up old newspapers and magazines in the district have reported favorably during the last two weeks, but their plea is still out for more papers. These papers are collected by the post every Saturday at different stations. North Town post is leading in the bowling tournament held by the seventh district. Athletic Officer Leonard Sachs, also coach of Loyola university, has the post basketball team in A1 shape and issues a challenge to any post which has a team entered according to the rules of the American Legion tournament.

A new membership record has been established by Chicago Elevated post, No. 184, with the signing up of more than 525 veterans among employés on the Rapid Transit lines. Commander George R. Apfel declares that the membership drive will continue until every veteran on the "L" has joined in helping put the department of Illinois over the top for 1929. An extensive program of social events is being undertaken by Elevated post this year as a means of stimulating interest in the legion and its activities. The latest affair was a gala dance and cotillion party, held in the Louis XVI. and Crystal ballrooms of Hotel Sherman last night. Among the features of an elaborate entertainment program was the appearance of radio stars.

Le Roy A. McCullough post, No. 123 will hold its regular meeting Feb. 12. There will be a Lincoln birthday party after the regular session, with entertainment and refreshments.

During the recent cold snap officers of Portage Park post, No. 183, were instrumental in having sand placed on the slippery platforms of railway stations on the northwest side. The post has joined the Northwest Federation of Improvement Clubs with a quota of three delegates and three alternates.

The post invites all C. M. T. C. men and their friends who are eligible to attend the summer training camp and who live in the north half of Chicago to a whoopee party to be held Monday evening, Feb. 18, at 8 o'clock in the Legion hall, 4050 Milwaukee avenue, over the Portage Park theater. There will be music, vaudeville, motion pictures, and other features. Some of the pictures will feature C. M. T. camp activities of 1927 and 1928.

Libertyville Legion post No. 329 will hold a Valentine dance party on Saturday night at Hartman house in Wheeling. Announcement is made that music will be furnished by a Chicago orchestra and that the dance will last all night.

Thornton Anthony Mills will again be the speaker at the meeting of Advertising Men's post No. 35 on Monday at Hotel Sherman. Preliminary to the talk, parts of the patriotic movie, "The Eve of the Revolution," will be shown.

North Shore post, No. 21, has started an exhaustive collection of portraits either of the present or of 1918 vintage from the members of the post. The pictures and the veterans' service records will be permanently recorded in the archives of the historian.

A program commemorating the birthday of Abraham Lincoln will be held by Ravenswood post, No. 149, Tuesday evening.

First Tank Corps post, No. 345, will hold its annual past commanders' banquet Friday, April 15, at 7 p. m., at the Stevens restaurant, 17 North State street. At this annual celebration, the commander for the previous year is honored by the post, thus Past Commander C. A. Uller Jr., 1928, will be presented with a solid gold past commander's button. A dinner will be served, after which a short business meeting will be held. Prominent Legionnaires will be present. Among those who have already accepted the invitation are: Dave L. Shillinglaw, department commander; L. R. Benston, department service officer; Edward Clamage, past vice commander of Illinois, and Dr. Charles Schott, commander of the second district.

"I KNOW What the Sunday Tribune's 1,251,304 Circulation Means in Sales Power!"

—says

a Neighborhood Merchant who spent $6.60 for his first Ad— and doubled his business in one year!

S. E. HILLMAN, owner of the Marbro Fur Shop, 4126 West Madison Street, decided in July, 1927, to find out what Sunday Tribune advertising could do for his business. As a try-out he spent $6.60 for a 20-line advertisement in the Metropolitan Section.

The ad paid. He tried another—and it paid, too. He ventured a larger one, and again it paid. Then he tried a still larger one, until he was running 100 and 200 line advertisements regularly.

His business grew to a point where he could handle no more until he enlarged his shop!

"My business last year showed an increase of 100% over 1927," said Mr. Hillman. "But this increase didn't cost me a cent. My advertising in the Sunday Tribune paid for itself as it went along."

Every merchant and retailer in Chicago, no matter what the size of his business or his pocketbook, has the same opportunity to duplicate Mr. Hillman's success. The last barrier—the cost—has been swept aside. By taking advantage of the specially low rate in the Metropolitan Section you can place a strong, business-pulling offer before practically every family on your side of the city with money enough to make good customers. You can make your ads pay for themselves in new business from the start, just as Mr. Hillman did.

There's no fuss, no bother, no details to take your time. If you wish, the Tribune will help you in the preparation of your ad and make any necessary drawings without cost. All you have to do is decide to make a start.

Call Superior 0100 early tomorrow morning. Ask for "Local Display" and say that you would like to find out more about Sunday Tribune advertising in the Metropolitan Section. No obligation to you whatever. Tear out the memo coupon now so that you won't forget to take the step that will make 1929 your banner year!

TWO SELLOUTS EXPECTED FOR WILMETTE PLAY

Women's Club Building Fund to Benefit.

That the building fund of the Wilmette Women's club will be substantially swelled this week is becoming a certainty as reports are received from members of the ticket committee for the benefit play which will be presented Tuesday and Wednesday evenings in the club house, 10th and Greenleaf streets, Wilmette. Mrs. Ira L. Reynolds, chairman of the committee, reports that a capacity house is assured for both performances. On Friday night the play will be repeated for the patients in the naval base hospital at Great Lakes.

The play to be presented by the Wilmette Barnstormers to raise funds for the club's building program is the comedy, "Lombardi, Ltd.," by Frederic and Fanny Hatton. The Barnstormers are a group of players, including business men, club women and young people of Wilmette and neighboring towns, who confine their efforts to farce and comedy, particularly the home grown compositions.

Promise Laugh a Minute.

The Barnstormers' slogan, "A laugh a minute," is exemplified in the present offering, which deals with the tribulations of Tito Lombardi, Italian dressmaker de luxe, beloved of mannequins and chorines. The cast of fifteen players, including stars of several dramatic organizations in Chicago and vicinity, is being directed by Mrs. Charlotte Chorpenning of the Northwestern university playshop.

The part of Tito will be filled by J. Lincoln Gibson, whose name carries with it a long list of dramatic associations. He has been a member of the North Shore theater since it started and has played with the North Shore players and the Rosenberg players, which he organized. He has appeared in several casts at the Northwestern University playshop, Evanston Community theater, Ravinia players, Studio Players of Chicago, and the Medievalists of Chicago.

Other Members of Cast.

Other members of the cast are Mrs. George Lamb, William J. Weldon, Fred Borgfeldt, John Panushka, John Behr, Mrs. J. Nye Macalister, Miss Esther Gilbertson, Dr. W. W. Hawkins, Mahlon Challinor, Miss Anne Boddie, Miss Marion Ortseifen, Miss Edith Challinor, Miss Mary Martin, and Miss Dorothy Rohol.

In connecion with the play a fashion revue will be staged by Mrs. N. A. Hanna of Wilmette, who also is in charge of the costumes for the players in "Lombardi, Ltd." Mrs. John Boddie is general chairman in charge of the presentation and Mrs. Gordon Wilson of the club's art department is in charge of the settings.

The Wilmette Women's club, which was organized in 1899, is planning for the construction of an addition to the clubhouse. Work will start in April for the new building, which will contain, among other things, a new auditorium and stage. More than 600 women are members of the club, of which Mrs. Hayes McKinney is president.

Luther League Social.

The Luther League of the Immanuel Lutheran church of Evanston will hold a Valentine social Tuesday evening at the church house.

THIS CAST PROMISES A LAUGH A MINUTE

"Lombardi, Ltd.", to be presented at the Wilmette Woman's clubhouse, 10th and Greenleaf streets, Wilmette, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, will be a fulfillment of the Wilmette Barnstormers' slogan of "A Laugh a Minute," according to its promoters. The picture shows some of the members of the cast. Left to right: William J. Weldon, Miss Marion Ortseifen, J. Lincoln Gibson, Miss Mary Martin, Miss Anne Boddie, and Miss Dorothy Rohol.

TEACHES POLICE ABOUT HABITUAL CRIMINAL LAW

Lieut. Moss Shows Severe Penalty for Violence.

BY GEORGE WRIGHT.

Lieut. Stewart P. Moss, president of the Lieutenants' association and author of the Chicago police manual, has written a treatise on the old but seldom used habitual criminal act, which was recently ordered strictly enforced by Commissioner of Police William F. Russell and State's Attorney John A. Swanson. It is the lieutenant's purpose to inform his fellow officers concerning the effectiveness of the law passed in June, 1883, but only successfully enforced in one case in which Moss was the arresting officer.

"Although not known to the general public, and this includes some police officers, Illinois has a habitual criminal act far more drastic than either the much discussed Michigan or New York laws," said Lieut. Moss.

Life Term Among Penalties.

"The habitual criminal law is enacted to protect society against the habitual offender. Such persons, by repeated violations of the law, prove themselves a menace to society, and their persistent indifference and contempt of the law and of property rights of others necessitate an increased punishment, in many cases extending to life imprisonment.

"This is absolutely necessary for the protection of society, and acts of this kind do more to rid the state of such offenders than any efforts at reformation."

Lieut. Moss calls attention to the fact that the Illinois law is not one fashioned by fanatics, carrying life imprisonment for misdemeanors such as liquor law violations, but is a statute which deals severely with crimes of violence such as robbery and burglary.

Life for Second Conviction.

It is pointed out that robbery, for instance, carries on first conviction an indeterminate punishment of [illegible] one year to life in the penitentiary. Burglary is punishable by a similar sentence. The second conviction for either crime calls for incarceration for life.

Automobile theft, the foundation for most crimes of robbery, is punishable by a penalty of one to twenty years. The second conviction calls for the imposition of a definite twenty year sentence. The punishment for other crimes frequently committed, such as counterfeiting and forgery, carries fifteen year sentences for third convictions.

Asserts Jurors Must Know.

"Not only policemen, but jurors or prospective jurors as well should have these facts brought to their attention," said Lieut. Moss. "A recent order of Commissioner Russell calls the habitual criminal act forcibly to the attention of the police department.

"The greatest quality in a nation is justice, and properly to administer the fullest coöperation of the citizens, partment and judiciary should have the fulest coöperation of the citizens. All are equally essential. Coöperation of all parties makes them a tower of strength, lack of coöperation renders them ineffective."

THE CHUCKLE COLUMN

CHUCKLES WANTED.

The Tribune wants some smiles, chuckles, and hearty laughs for this column from the high school students of Chicago. Two dollars will be paid for each original contribution, joke, jingle, verse, or anecdote. Address them to the Metropolitan editor of The Tribune, Tribune Tower, Chicago.

TRAFFIC LIGHTS ARE URGED AT CLARK-WILSON

Robert Christianen, 4617 North Clark street, has been elected president of the Clark-Wilson Center Business Men's association, it is announced. Other new officers are: Vice president, Ira A. Brown; secretary, P. E. Osterholm; and treasurer, Albert Reverzs. The association is attempting to get more street lights for the district and also the installation of traffic signal lights at the intersection of Clark street and Wilson avenue. Mr. Brown and Mr. Osterholm compose the committee to take up the question of the traffic lights with city hall officials. Letters have been directed to Ald. John J. Hoellen [47th], Ald. John A. Massen [48th], and Ald. A. K. Mose [50th], asking their aid in the matter of street lights.

Evanston Garden Club to Plan Exhibit for Show

The Little Garden club of Evanston will meet next Wednesday at the home of Mrs. F. C. Minkler, 1143 Forest avenue, Evanston. The meeting will take the form of an informal discussion of exhibits for the coming flower show at Hotel Sherman. Mrs. J. W. Strong Reid is president of the group.

PROPOSAL PENDING TO BUILD SENECA ST. TO CHICAGO AVENUE

An appropriation for cutting Seneca street through from Chicago avenue to Pearson street is now pending before the finance committee of the city council. Action on the proposed improvement now depends on whether $275,000 is available to reimburse the water fund, present owner of the property which must be dedicated.

The North Central association has been fighting for the improvement on the ground that it is a necessity for adequate fire protection of the district, since there is at present no street north of Chicago avenue through which the fire trucks can travel between Lake Shore drive and Michigan avenue. A loss of about five minutes is necessitated in going around to Michigan avenue while answering a call north of Pearson street.

Since there is no left turn for motorists coming down Michigan avenue from the north a good deal of time is lost in getting to the hotel district which would be served by the new improvement.

Action on the improvement will be delayed until the end of May, however, since the Chicago Real Estate board has leased the property for temporary buildings for an Own Your Own Home exposition during April and May. The North Central association is reported as being in accord with the action on the part of the city in leasing the property temporarily, but will resume negotiations for the improvement after the exposition.

EVANSTON CLUB TO HEAR TALK ON LINCOLN'S IDEALS

Dr. Horace J. Bridges will talk on "Lincoln's Ideals of Citizenship" Tuesday afternoon at the Evanston Woman's club in the clubhouse, 1702 Chicago avenue.

In connection with the art study class Tuesday morning, Miss Mildred Chamberlain will discuss pictures in the home, illustrating her talk with crayon drawings and pictures.

The club has planned a dinner bridge party for next Saturday evening, the third of a series of evening parties. Hosts and hostesses for the evening will be Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Baxter, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh W. McCullough, Mr. and Mrs. James G. S. Orchard, and Mr. and Mrs. James R. Skiles.

Shelter Sheds Ordered Built in North Side Ward

Construction of a ward office and shelter sheds in the 46th ward by the commissioner of public works was authorized by the city council last week. An expenditure of not more than $32,000 was allowed for the work.

SCHOOL OPENING STRESSES NEED OF BIRTH REPORT

Many Mothers Find Children Unrecorded.

Scores of mothers who stormed the health department offices in the city hall at the beginning of the school term last week in quest of birth certificates which would allow their children to enter school discovered that the youngsters' arrivals had not been officially recorded.

Three out of every hundred children born in Chicago are unable to prove their birth and are headed for considerable embarrassment and trouble Health Commissioner Arnold H. Kegel said. Failure to report a birth is the fault of the attending physician or midwife, who is required by law to make a report within ten days. But they forget, or neglect to do so in hundreds of cases, the commissioner said, and should be reminded by the parents.

Most Calls from Near Loop.

Experience of the health department during the last few years has indicated that while residents from all parts of the city find themselves in the same plight during the annual invasion of the health department for certificates, the greatest number are from the near south side, the near west side, and the section immediately north of the loop.

Many of the anxious mothers will be back at the department in a few years when they say that Johnny or Jimmy is 14 and should get a working certificate. The child labor law requires that a birth certificate must be presented in requesting permission to work.

Introduce Double Check.

A plan for making a double check on birth registration is now being put into effect by the department, according to the commissioner. As soon as notice of a birth is received the person recording it will receive a card acknowledging receipt of the notice, and giving the spelling of the name as interpreted by the clerks.

Registration is also important to the mother, it is pointed out, because she receives thereafter monthly letters from the health department on the care of the baby.

State-Grand Traffic Lights Voted, but Wait on Funds

Traffic control lights will be installed at State street and Grand avenue by the department of public works as a result of action taken recently by the city council. Ald. George M. Maypole introduced the order directing the department to erect the lights. The work cannot be done immediately, however, officials of the department of electricity said, since the city has no funds available for the purpose.

GUARD DIVISION CLEANS RIFLES FOR INSPECTION

Enlisted Men Draw Lots for Night Flights.

Illinois National Guardsmen are shining up their bayonets and cleaning their rifles these days in preparation for the annual general armory inspection.

Every unit in the 33d division and attached troops is to be inspected, both as to efficiency in drill and condition of uniforms and ordnance.

Among the outfits which will receive the "double O" next week are division special troops, 108th Medical regiment, 33d Tank company, and 108th Observation squadron.

108th Observation Squadron.

Enlisted men of the 108th Observation squadron are given a taste of night flying before the drill periods Thursday evening in the recently inaugurated night flying activities of the 33d division air service. The names of two passengers are drawn from a hat the week before. The commissioned personnel takes turns in giving the men short training flights over the blinking city.

With two of the latest type of planes, Douglas 02Hs, already in the two modern hangars at the Municipal airport, the squadron is awaiting the arrival of three additional Douglases form Santa Monica, Cal. Lieut. Wilson V. Newhall, engineer officer of the squadron, expects to leave for California soon to bring the first of the three new planes here. Capt. C. A. McElvain, operations officer, and Maj. Merrill D. Mann Jr., commanding officer, brought the first two through from California several months ago. The other air equipment in the squadron consists of one PT training plane and a Douglas 02C.

Despite the icy condition of the runways at the field, the organization has put in many hours in the air in training and cross country missions during the last month.

Lieut. N. B. Clinch flew to Springfield a day or so before the inauguration of Gov. Emmerson, to visit with Adjt. Gen. Carlos E. Black. After returning to Chicago Lieut. Clinch flew to Kansas City and visited Fort Leavenworth before the return hop.

Maj. Mann and Capt. V. L. McElvain, accompanied by Lieut. Jean Fogle, commanding officer of the photo section of the squadron, flew to Culver City, Ind., where the major's son is in school. They landed on the fast frozen ice of Lake Maxinkuckee, an excellent airport in winter, they said.

202d Coast Artillery.

A veritable foreign legion exists in the 202d's ranks of anti-aircraft gunners.

Just next door, in the dugout of Battery B, Capt. George F. Gorey will introduce you to Private Fred C. Kober, former German soldier, who served with the Death Head Hussars of the Crown Prince Frederick Wilhel mduring the world war.

Then there is Corp. Patrick J. Hannan, who saw service in the 2d Munster fusiliers at Tralee, County Kerry, Munster, Ireland.

Private N. V. Noble served a hitch with the 55th division, Royal Field artillery, British territorials.

Private Roy Middleton was initiated to rookiedom in the 3d infantry, Australian Military Citizens forces.

He will leave for that school about March 1.

KEARNS AGAIN HEADS IMPROVEMENT GROUP OF ARCADIA TERRACE

J. N. KEARNS.

James N. Kearns, 5841 North Washtenaw avenue has been reelected president of the Arcadia Terrace Improvement association, it is announced. Other officers selected for the year are vice president, Theodore Kruse, financial secretary, Frank Adrian; treasurer, John Overbeck; secretary, George W. Schmidt, and attorney, Harry Moran.

Members of the River Park district board, attended a recent meeting of the association and told the members that the new field house under construction in Green Briar park, which borders the Arcadia Terrace district, will be ready for occupancy April 1. The boundaries of the Arcadia Terrace district are Western avenue on the east, Peterson avenue on the north, Lincoln avenue on the west, and Catalpa avenue on the south.

The association recently led a drive for a new school for the district, basing its argument on the fact that children are compelled to cross dangerous streets to attend overcrowded schools outside of the district. There is no school in the Arcadia Terrace district. A committee that interviewed H. Wallace Caldwell, president of the school board, was assured that the board and school site committee would immediately consider the question.

LUCREZIA BORI SINGS IN FAMILY PARTY TOMORROW

English Composer Also on the Program.

Modernism in music—the kind of modernism that puts the drama and poetry and romance of song uppermost—will be the keynote of the family party program tomorrow over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station, on the Drake hotel, when Lucrezia Bori, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, and Eugene Goossens, the famous English composer and orchestra director, will be introduced as guest stars.

Lucrezia Bori is becoming known throughout the world as one of the greatest of singing actresses and likewise one of the finest of vocal artists. Born in Valencia, Spain, and inheriting an understanding of poetry and rhythm for music that is latent in the Spanish people, she developed a voice and fame as an interpreter of character in song at the age of six.

Learned Opera as Child.

For many years the secret of Bori's wide operatic repertoire puzzled her parents and critics, and was only explained after she had achieved world fame. It seems that the Bori residence in Valencia was directly across the street from the opera house. Each night at about the time the operas were scheduled to begin, the child's parents would send her upstairs to bed.

They always were surprised that she went without any complaint, but they did not know at the time that as soon as she was left to herself she would crawl out of bed to a balcony which overhung the narrow street and was only a few feet from the opera house. There she would lie absorbing the music until she heard her parents start upstairs at their bed time. Then she would scamper into bed and pretend to be asleep. In this way, she learned most of the operas as a child.

Bori's ability to express the meaning of musical emotions of all types was made manifest immediately after she had made her debut on the operatic stage and all Europe hailed her as a new type of singer.

Credit to Goossens.

England has long been faintly knocking at the doors of musical recognition but only recently has there been any decided English music. This accomplishment is due directly to the efforts of a few composers foremost among whom is Eugene Goossens. He is credited with having the most acute poetic feeling and delicate expression in his many compositions. When the Eastman Foundation of Rochester was established, Goossens, who had already become noted throughout Europe as an orchestral director as well as a composer, was invited to take charge of the orchestral department. He has been in America but a few years but has impressed himself most favorably on the musical world of this country. He will be heard as director of the orchestra and will probably present some of his own compositions.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

ONE heap big advantage of the radio, we have never appreciated until recently is the absence, while enjoying a radio performance, of the many annoyances of the theater, principally the army of coughers.

Radio listening has spoiled us for the theater. Congratulate yourself, if you will, when you are enjoying an evening with the radio again, that you are isolated from the numerous coughers and wheezers who sit all about you in the theater—the squeaky aisles under the feet of the late comers—the idiots who giggle or honk at the wrong time all through the show—and the bum seats away off on the side where you can see and hear nothing.

A year ago every performance in the exquisite repertoire of the New York Theater Guild at the Studebaker theater was spoiled for us by late comers galumphing down the squeaky aisles. "Boots, boots, boots, boots, tramping over Africa." How we wished it were a radio performance, where we could sit in quietude!

Last week, at "Macbeth," we were sold impossible seats up front, but so far to one side that we could catch neither glimpse nor sound of the proceeding on the stage. Protesting to the box office, we were given a box, and then the fun began. Every time Macbeth, Macduff, or Lady Macbeth uttered one of the old familiar lines, a veritable tornado of coughing rumbled over the vast auditorium.

"Out, damned spot"—[cough, cough!]—"Tomorrow, and tomorrow, and tomorrow"—[hacking and coughing and clearing of a thousand throats]—"The labor we delight in physics pain"—[Kerchoo — cough — cough — cough!].

We think the radio audience has never stopped to appreciate the clear and perfect reception that is theirs when they receive performances from a radio studio—words and music—with none of the cacophonic irritations that beset them, and the actors, too, in the theater.

THE SLEEPYTOWN EXPRESS.

Just beyond the rainbow's rim a river ripples down
Beneath a bridge, around a bend, and flows through Sleepytown—
Through Sleepytown, where goblins toil to fashion wondrous toys
And make up fascinating games for little girls and boys.
And little autos, just the size for little hands to drive,
Await to whirl you all about as soon as you arrive.
But no one ever is allowed in Sleepytown, unless
He goes to bed in time to take the Sleepytown Express!

I know a foolish little boy who always starts to whine
When he is asked to trot upstairs before it's half-past nine.
And often he will stamp his feet and shake his tousled head,
And make a racket, even then, when he is sent to bed.
Of course, when he has said his prayers it always is too late
To catch the Sleepytown Express—it starts at half-past eight.
And so, in all his long, long life—he's five years old next fall—
That little boy has never been to Sleepytown at all.

But other wiser little boys, and little girls as well,
As soon as 8 o'clock has struck rush right upstairs, pell-mell,
Get off their clothes and say their prayers, just of their own accord,
And, when the train comes rolling in, they're there to climb aboard.
Then through a long, delightful night they wander up and down
And have a most exciting time in queer old Sleepytown:
And not for cake or anything that children could possess
Would any of them ever miss the Sleepytown Express!

WE KNOW that Master Pat Forbes, 6 year old author of Rockford, Ill., will not mind our publishing his story of Dr. Tidd. It is so truly and childishly naïve, so like all stories composed by authors of his age. We had asked the children to use the words, "Dr. Tidd," "hunting," "book," "radio" and "bridge" in original stories. And here is Pat's:

"Doctor Tidd went a-hunting and he took his gun. He packed up. Then he spied a rabbit. Then he had to cross a bridge and he aimed very carefully at him—the rabbit. But the rabbit didn't see him. And he went and shot the rabbit. Then he saw a fox. He aimed at the fox. The fox was so sly that he saw the man aiming at him and he ran as fast as he could. The man shot him and had to run very far across the bridge. He ran into the desert, where the fox was.

"He said, 'My dog, you catch that rabbit.' And the dog caught the rabbit. But he had to run to a bridge and ran across it. When he found the rabbit he saw a tree with a rabbit running around in the tree. And he sneaked up in the tree and you see the rabbit was making so much noise he couldn't hear the man sneaking up to the hole in the tree. And he shot the rabbit in the hole in the tree. But you see the rabbit was making so much noise with the squirrel as his company that he couldn't hear the gun go bang!

"He went to the tree and caught the rabbit. Then he went home with his gun, his dog, his things that he shot and his wife said, 'You shall have a good dinner with me and we shall eat the things that you shot.' Then he went to work and he worked and he worked and he worked. And when he went home he had his supper. Then he went to bed and slept very well. Then that is the end."

Static.

DID YOU ever see a statue whose clothes fitted him?

One half the world never knows how many holes most men have in their socks.

It takes the average man one-half of his lifetime to afford the better things of life, and the other half to learn to pronounce them.

The government continues to remind us that the piped must pay the piper.

And some departments of the local government remind us that there is no accounting for wastes.

These are hard times for most of us; even February is short this year.

The worst part of being bald is that you can't tell your wife that it's hair tonic she smells on you.

ALL THROUGH her girlhood the little singer's held high hopes for her career on the concert stage. They even gave her a pretty name, Esmeralda Du Pont, so it would look well in electric lights and headlines. Then, when she finished her education, she crashed into international fame—as the "Sycamore Suspender Hour Soprano."

League of Nations Will Make Short Wave Tests

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

AMSTERDAM, Feb. 9.—The Netherlands government is again placing the Kootwijk station at the disposal of the league of nations for the carrying out of short wave experiments, as was done last summer. The experiments, which will be made weekly, will be grouped into three series. The respective goals will be Japan, America, and Australasia.

"KOLSTER Radio advertising must never make extravagant claims," was the principle laid down at Kolster's first advertising meeting years ago. ¶ And Kolster has stuck to this principle ever since—but Kolster owners have not. ¶ Their word-of-mouth advertising has been as generous as the quality in the radio. ¶ Ask any Kolster owner and you will get this convincing reply, "Yes, Kolster is a fine set." Then ask your dealer for a demonstration and let your decision rest on merit alone.

U.S. SOON TO HEAR CHAIN PROGRAMS FROM EUROPE

Recent Test Proves It Is Feasible.

The recent broadcast of a London concert over a country-wide network, including W-G-N, the Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, and 33 other NBC stations is regarded by engineers as successful enough to warrant hope that European programs on coast-to-coast American chains will be a fact before the end of the year.

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, consulting engineer and vice president of the Radio Corporation of America, which assisted in the rebroadcast, said that the experiment "foreshadows regularly scheduled radio broadcasting service across the ocean."

First Chain Rebroadcast.

The test program came unexpectedly on the heels of a prediction that the National Broadcasting company, working with the RCA, would broadcast a special program from England over a chain of stations this spring. While single American stations have rebroadcast the chimes of "Big Ben," in London, this rebroadcast was the first from abroad over a number of stations.

The rebroadcast followed three years of intermittent work by radio engineers and several months of intensive experimenting which had led to a conviction that short waves in the 24 meter band were most likely to be available because of their relative freedom from severe static.

A number of Chicago shortwave experimenters have been tuning in 5SW, a powerful station at Chalmsford, England, operating in that band and transmitting programs that 2LO, London, put on the air for British listeners.

Station 5SW is located 30 miles from London. It is operated, as is 2LO, by the British Broadcasting corporation, which has a radio monopoly in Great Britain and is a quasi-governmental institution.

Symphony Orchestra on Air.

The concert broadcast was by a symphony orchestra in London.

A wave length of 25.53 meters was used by 5SW. After crossing the Atlantic the radio impulses were picked up by the RCA experimental station at Riverhead, L. I., where a multiple antenna and multiple receiving set were used so as to mitigate the effects of "fading."

"This marks the birth of a real international understanding," declared M. H. Aylesworth, president of the NBC, as the switch opening the network to the British program was thrown. "It presages the end of misunderstandings between nations. It will go far toward promoting good will between America and Europe."

Dr. Goldsmith and O. B. Hanson, manager of the plant operations and engineering for the NBC, agreed that the test rebroadcast was a success.

This Is London.

W-G-N listeners heard most of the concert in London distinctly. There was considerable fading, and the tone was somewhat thin, due to the filtering conditions created in the hastily set up network. But the music came through clearly and distinctly, as did the voice of the London announcer when he said, "This is London calling. That ends this evening's concert." Clearly heard also was the burst of applause in the hall as the concert concluded.

Serious problems remain to be solved before regular trans-Atlantic broadcasts both ways become a fact. The chief difficulty is the great difference in time. For example, a concert starting at 8 o'clock in London would be heard in Chicago at 2 p. m. Special program service will have to be developed.

Expert Demonstrates Brilliant Play in Radio Auction Bridge Game from W-G-N

The fourteenth of a series of twenty radio auction bridge games will be broadcast from W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, Tuesday at 8:30 o'clock.

The contestants will be E. E. Dennison of Portland, Me., the outstanding bridge figure of northeastern New England, who is teamed with Mr. Whitehead against John C. Gardner of Brooklyn, one of the youngest of all bridge devotees to attain prominence as a writer on various phases of the game, playing with Mr. Work.

Following are the advance hands for game fourteen:

Mr. Whitehead.
S—K, 4, 3.
H—A, 5.
D—A, 10, 9, 6, 2.
C—9, 7, 3.

Mr. Gardner.
S—7, 2.
H—9, 7, 4, 3.
D—8, 7, 5.
C—K, J, 9, 2.

N. / W. E / S.

Mr. Work.
S—Q, J, 10, 9, 6
H—K, J, 8.
D—K, 3.
C—8, 5, 4.

Mr. Denison [dealer].
S—A, 8, 5.
H—Q, 10, 6, 2.
D—Q, J, 4.
C—A, Q, 10.

The foursome for Tuesday's Radio Bridge game, broadcast from station W-G-N, was made up of Mrs. Oscar E. Busby of Dallas, Tex.; Mrs. W. C. Ryan, of San Antonio, Texas, Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead. Mrs. Busby and Mrs. Ryan are well known throughout their native state, both as players and as teachers of bridge.

These were the hands held:

Mrs. Busby.
S—Q, 6, 3.
H—10, 9, 4.
D—4.
C—K, 9, 8, 4, 3, 2.

Mrs. Ryan.
S—9, 7, 2.
H—K, 3.
D—A, Q, J, 10, 7.
C—Q, 10, 7.

N. / W. E / S.

Mr. Work.
S—K, 10, 8, 4.
H—8, 5.
D—9, 8, 3.
C—A, J, 6, 5.

Mr. Whitehead [dealer].
S—A, J, 5.
H—A, Q, J, 7, 6, 2.
D—K, 6, 5, 2.
C—None.

Mr. Whitehead, south, the dealer, opened the auction with one heart; Mrs. Ryan, west, bid two diamonds; and Mrs. Busby, north, passed. Although Mrs. Busby held the normal length of three cards of her partner's suit, which probably would be of use in ruffing diamonds, of which she had only a singleton, her side strength was only a king and a queen—insufficient to warrant an assist from one to two. Mr. Work, east, also passed. His spade suit was not strong enough to warrant a betterment takeout of his partner's diamond bid, for which he held normal support.

Mr. Whitehead, south, went to two hearts. Mrs. Ryan, west, said three diamonds—a bid justified by her four honors and the practical certainty of making her king of hearts. Mrs. Busby, north, bid three hearts, as her partner's rebid without any encouragement from her showed strength additional to that indicated by his initial bid. Mr. Work, east, went to four diamonds, an assist also warranted by his partner's rebid.

Four Hearts Doubled.

Mr. Whitehead, south, reasoned that with four diamonds in his own hand, and both of the adversaries bidding that suit, his own partner must be very short—probably void—of it, and consequently in position to ruff. Therefore, Mr. Whitehead bid four hearts.

Mrs. Ryan, west, doubled. Holding an apparently sure trick in hearts, considerable additional strength, and having a partner with some trick taking values, as shown by his assist, Mrs. Ryan's double was unquestionably correct. All passed, and Mr. Whitehead, south, became declarer with his contract four hearts doubled.

Mrs. Ryan, west, the initial leader, had the choice of three opening plays. Her own suit of diamonds was headed by ace-queen. Her partner assisted diamonds on the second round and might hold the king. If not, then Mr. Whitehead, south, probably held it, with protection. In that case Mrs. Ryan saw that if she led her ace Mr. Whitehead's king would become a winner. To prevent such possible happening, Mrs. Ryan avoided a diamond opening, and selected spades in preference to clubs. She led the 9 of spades. Mrs. Busby, north, spread her hand for dummy, and Mr. Whitehead, declarer, played from it the 3 of spades.

Must Ruff Diamonds.

Mr. Work, east, read Mrs. Ryan's 9 as the top of a short spade suit. It could not be her fourth best, as a 9 is not led as a fourth best card. When a 9 is fourth best of a hand then the three higher cards held must be honors, and a suit with three honors is opened by the lead of one of them. With the queen of spades showing in dummy, Mr. Work, east, marked declarer as holding the ace-jack. As the play of Mr. Work's king would make declarer's ace and jack and dummy's queen all winners, barring their being trumped, Mr. Work held off, playing the 4 of spades. Mr. Whitehead, declarer, won the trick with the jack of spades.

Studying his situation, Mr. Whitehead, declarer, saw he would have to ruff three diamonds in order to make his game contract. If he could do that, he might be able to limit his losses to three tricks—a heart trick [since the king was marked in the west player's hand], a diamond trick, and a spade trick. The lead of a trump would prevent the ruffing of three diamonds in dummy and thus stop game. Should Mr. Work, east, obtain the lead, his obvious lead would be a trump, because of dummy's singleton diamond. If Mrs. Ryan, west, were put in, she might not lead a trump, as it would cost her a trick to do so, if, as was possible, she had only two trumps to the king.

Brilliant Maneuver.

Mr. Whitehead, therefore, made a brilliant maneuver by leading the king of diamonds, quite naturally assuming that Mrs. Ryan, west, held the ace. Thus he planned to keep the lead from Mr. Work, east, while at the same time placing dummy in position to ruff diamonds. Mrs. Ryan, west, played the ace; dummy the 4; Mr. Work the 3.

Mrs. Ryan would have like to lead a trump to reduce dummy's ruffing possibilities, but was prevented by fear of sacrificing her king. She wanted to put her parther in, as she knew he would appreciate the necessities of the situation and would most certainly lead a trump through the declarer. Having figured out the probable spade situation, from her partner's low play to the first trick, Mrs. Ryan decided that her best chance to reach her partner was with a club. Therefore she led her queen of clubs. Dummy played the 2; Mr. Work the 5; and declarer won with the 2 of hearts.

Mr. Whitehead, declarer, then led the 2 of diamonds for a ruff in dummy. Mrs. Ryan played the 7; dummy trumped with the 4 of hearts; Mr. Work played the 8 of diamonds. Dummy returned the 3 of clubs; Mr. Work played the 6; declarer ruffed with the 6 of hearts; Mrs. Ryan played the 7 of clubs. Again declarer led a diamond, the 5 spot; Mrs. Ryan played the 10; dummy trumped with the 9 of hearts; Mr. Work played the 9 of diamonds. Dummy led the 4 of clubs; Mr. Work played the jack; declarer trumped with the 7 of hearts; Mrs. Ryan played the 10 of clubs.

Declarer led his last diamond, the 6 spot; Mrs. Ryan played the jack; dummy ruffed with the 10 of hearts; Mr. Work discarded the 8 spot of spades. Dummy led the 8 of clubs; Mr. Work played the ace; declarer trumped with the jack of hearts; Mrs. Ryan overtrumped with the king.

Mr. Work Praises Play.

Mrs. Ryan then led the queen of diamonds; dummy discarded the 9 of clubs; Mr. Work discarded the 10 of spades; declarer trumped with the queen of hearts. Mr. Whitehead, declarer, then led his ace of hearts, on which Mrs. Ryan played the 3 of hearts, dummy the king of clubs, and Mr. Work the 5 of hearts. Declarer then led the ace of spades, to which all followed, giving declarer his contract and game. Mr. Work, east, still held one trump, the 8 spot, which took the final trick.

Mr. Whitehead, declarer, scored 64 trick points for four hearts doubled; 50 points in the honor score for making his contract, and 40 for honors.

In his comments on the hand, Mr. Work praised highly the lead of the king of diamonds by declarer at trick two—the sort of play that seems obvious when it is made, but which, as a matter of fact, is the sort of play that marks the superexpert.

This same hand would be bid a little differently at contract. South would start by bidding two hearts; the hand is much too strong for a bid of one to furnish sound information to partner. West would doubtless bid three diamonds. North could furnish one raise for an initial two hearts. East would risk four diamonds. South would say four hearts. West would double. The play would be the same as in auction.

BETTER PLAN OF FINDING WRECKED SHIPS IS SOUGHT

Coöperation of two or more radio equipped ships to determine the position of a vessel in distress which cannot correctly give its own position is suggested by United States Commissioner of Lighthouses G. R. Putnam. According to Commissioner Putnam, when there is any doubt of the position of a ship sending out an S. O. S. the ship receiving the call should not depend upon its own radio bearings alone but ask other ships within range to also take bearings and report results with latitude and longitude from which the bearing is taken.

With this information, it is pointed out, a navigator can, by the method of cross bearings, plot on his chart the position of the distressed vessel. The accuracy of this position will, of course, be dependent on the relative positions of the ships, and the number of bearings reported, but in general it should give very promptly a position sufficiently close to enable the neighboring vessels to feel certain of the course to steer to render aid, and their respective distances.

This method is, of course, not necessary if the vessel in trouble knows its correct position, as then the rescuing vessel need only to lay its course by the radio bearing taken. But there will be cases, as in the recent notable rescue of the crew of the sinking Florida by the America, when there is so large an error in the supposed position, in this case 150 miles, as to cause confusion to the ships in the vicinity, and the possible loss of valuable time in reaching the sinking vessel.

There are other cases on record of large errors in reported positions of vessels, especially of smaller craft which may have been navigated for some days under difficulties. The suggestion above is for a somewhat further development of the most valuable radio bearing method of reaching a sinking vessel, which has been used in recent years in a number of remarkable rescues, including that of the Antinoe, by Capt. Fried. The suggestion is simply an application to such a rescue problem of known methods of hydrographic surveying and navigation.

The constant increase in the radio installations on ships, and the improvement in radio efficiency, are having the effect of saving from the sea the crews of many vessels which before the days of radio would oftentimes simply have been reported missing.

REBUILDS MEN AFTER QUITTING LOOP BUSINESS

Cathedral Shelter Head Feeds 600 a Day.

BY LILLIAN BUCKINGHAM.

"Be careful—it's through a rather tough neighborhood." With this admonition I set forth to visit the Cathedral Shelter at Washington boulevard and Peoria street, and to interview its priest in charge, the Rev. David E. Gibson, known throughout the Episcopal diocese of Chicago for his wonderful work among the so-called "down and outers."

REV. DAVID GIBSON

Formerly a successful photographer, president of a photographic firm in the loop, he relinquished his worldly profession and is now confidant and counselor to the discouraged—a veritable remaker of men. For nearly a quarter of a century he has labored among men, and was assisted, until her death five years ago, by his wife. For almost ten years of that time he has been a priest of the church.

As I approached the Shelter the remains of the burned Cathedral of SS. Peter and Paul came into view, and several men lolled in the sunshine on the tumbled down foundations. At the entrance to the clergy house a middle aged man was smilingly straightening the "squeegee" black bow tie of an elderly man with flowing white hair covered by a broad black felt hat. A long, old fashioned black coat completed the picture. Upon seeing me, both men laughed like children "caught in the act," and I had to join them. The tie straightener ushered me up the steps and into the small and plainly furnished room which served as an office; its high ceilings and long windows, the fashion of other days, seemed a fitting background to the kindly, white haired priest who came forward to greet me.

Proud of Old Sumner Hall.

His first concern was to show me the plant. His especial pride was the little church, with the bishop's chair

INTRODUCE BILL THIS WEEK FOR 'L' BOULEVARD

West Central Body Backs Plan Commission.

A bill empowering the west park commissioners to construct an elevated highway from the loop through the west side will go to the state legislature this week, Dr. John Dill Robertson, president of the board, told members of the West Central association at their annual meeting at the Union League club Wednesday night.

Proposed routes for the west side highway were the principal topic of discussion at the meeting. The park board believes it would be more advantageous for the highway to be constructed on Fulton street, while the association is in accord with the Chicago plan commission's recommendation to construct it over Congress, Polk, or Monroe street.

Hope for Completion by 1933.

Both Dr. Robertson and members of the association expressed a desire to decide on one of the routes mentioned in time for the project to be completed by 1933. It is estimated that the work on construction will take two years.

An overhead highway on Congress or one of the other streets recommended by the association would be a "Chinese wall," such as the "L" structure makes of Lake street, Dr. Robertson declared, but the same type of highway down Fulton street would not be undesirable from the standpoint of property owners. At no point along the way, he said, is there so popular a residential district as along Congress street, for factories occupy a large part of the remaining territory.

Furthermore, he said, Fulton street is wider, and construction of a highway there would not necessitate the condemnation of so much property as would be necessary over Congress street.

Another point brought out by Dr. Robertson was the fact that the cost of the road on Fulton street could be kept within $20,000,000, the amount which the parks propose to provide by a bond issue. It is his belief that the people of the west side will vote for a west park bond issue for the project.

OUR TOWN

Paragraphs Anent the Passing Throng.

BY FRED PASLEY.

DR. WILLIAM E. CODE has issued a prescription for tired business men and Al Barker respectfully urges that the 2,300 members of the Midwest Athletic club try it out. We quote:

A little nonsense is the way,
If not in work, at least in play,
To oftimes lift our spirits up
And bid us quaff Hygeia's cup.
Wouldst thou live long? Then thou must bowl;
'Tis great for body and for soul.
Then join the Midwest Bowling league
And work all day without fatigue.

It is Al's contention that this prescription, so easy to fill, not only solves the how-to-keep-well problem, but also eliminates the necessity of those expensive trips to Florida and Hot Springs, Ark. There is no gainsaying Al is a great Barker.

Frank B. Cholvin is a barber. Eleven years ago he set up shop on a lot with a 27 foot frontage at what is now 6107 Northwest highway, Norwood park, which he had bought for $110 a front foot. This section, for the information of those not entirely familiar with Chicago, is 7200 blocks due west of Edgewater. Barbers are popularly supposed to be good talkers. Frank is a good listener. Likewise, a good thinker. He listened to the story of Chicago's growth and in between shaves and haircuts he thought. And waited. His reward came last week when he sold his lot to the National Tea company for $23,000 cash. It figures $378 a front foot, an increase of 600 per cent. Frank and Mrs. Cholvin will take a vacation, after which he will rebuild on a lot he has bought in Devon avenue, near the highway and Harlem avenue, and resume barbering. Next!

WHEATON IS TRUE TO ITS TRADITION OF PEACEFUL LIFE

Churches, Schools, and Homes Tell Its Story.

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

The Gary Memorial church in Wheaton, which burned on Jan. 7, will not only be rebuilt, but a more modern and more extensive structure will replace the blackened walls. So I was told by Ralph Wheaton who, with his cousin, Henry, conducts a coal and lumber concern in the town named after their grandfather, Jesse Wheaton, and his brother, Warren L. Wheaton.

Frank Earl Herrick, poet as well as police magistrate at Wheaton, wrote a booklet touching on the disaster, which contains this paragraph: "Their ice coated and flame scarred ruins that fell before the fire and the north wind's breath, still smoke and steam, but as sure as flowers come in spring new beauty shall return."

Churches, schools, homes. Wheaton is particularly proud of its excellent opportunity for religious worship, in the fact that its educational facilities are of the best, and that its homes among the trees are protected by strict zoning laws.

Back in 1858, the grist mill of Peter Northrup burned down in Wheaton. There were other factories that in years to follow met a similar fate, among them the map factory of Rufus Blanchard.

Philosophical as to Fires.

Mr. Blanchard, recalled as a man of unusual culture, wrote a history of Du Page county in 1882, in which he spoke philosophically of Wheaton's visitation by fires that included his own loss.

"Had none of these establishments been burned," wrote Mr. Blanchard, "it is hardly to be supposed that Wheaton would ever have attained notoriety as a manufacturing town, for the reason that no streams of living water run through it, but its eligible situation as a place of residence commends it to those wishing a home in a healthy locality among intelligent and thrifty people."

The situation since 1882 has not changed.

"For a place of its size," wrote Mr. Blanchard, "few have such an extended reputation, and it is well known that its fame is due to the tenacious religious connections, not only of its

WHEATON IS TRUE TO ITS TRADITION OF PEACEFUL LIFE

Churches, Schools, and Homes Tell Its Story.

leading men, but of its every day sort of people, who follow the ordinary occupations of life."

Wheaton today is much the sort of place that Warren L. and Jesse Wheaton must have wished it to be. Back in 1850 they knelt in the prairie grass with others of their townspeople in preparations for starting a college building.

Has Distinctive Atmosphere.

The college had its financial struggles in early days. At the outbreak of the civil war—the originators were especially interested in the anti-slavery struggle—so many of the students went into the army that in 1861 there was no graduating class. Today it has approximately 500 students.

Wheaton has an atmosphere that is the result of plenty of background. You sense its distinctiveness despite the fact that each year Chicago, twenty-five miles to the east, has crept closer and closer with its subdivisions, and regardless of movies and radios and garages and gas filling stations that have standardized every town in the country, no matter what the location.

Wheaton can thank the little town of Pomfret, Conn., for much that gives it tone. It is said that the residents of that community were given courage and ambition by the proximity of their birthplace to the cave where Gen. Putnam bearded the wolf in his lair and slew him.

Erastus Gary First to Arrive.

Erastus Gary left Pomfret and came west in 1831. He crossed Lake Michigan in a dugout canoe in 1832 and, reaching this side, marched toward the sunset, gaining the Des Plaines. Next day he reached Naperville, where the seafaring Napers had formed a colony. From there he made his way northward and took up a claim. His son, Elbert Henry, as head of the great United States Steel corporation, was due to become deeply interested in manufacturing rather than in peaceful village life, but never to lose his interest in Wheaton.

Warren L. Wheaton, on coming from Pomfret to join the Gary colony, was not sure at first that he wanted to locate in the spot. He wished first to see more of the west. That was in June, 1837. Young Wheaton started on foot and visited points on the Mississippi. Returning footsore, he decided to cast his lot with his friends. Jesse Wheaton subsequently arrived. Jesse married Orlinda Gary, sister of Erastus and Jude Gary. The colony raised wheat for the market in Chicago—a city that they hoped some day to see rise out of the mud.

In 1849 came John B. Turner and William B. Ogden prospecting for a right of way for the Galena and Chicago Union railroad. The Wheatons invited the railroad representatives to dinner. It was a good dinner and the Wheatons offered a gift of land. The combination, under the circumstances—for other settlers had lent scant encouragement—was most effective. The station was named Wheaton, and even the effort of a Mr. Jewell in building a $400 depot near his place—Jewell's Grove—proved of no avail.

Bringing the county seat over from Naperville was a more difficult matter. There was a bitter fight connected with that. At each election Naperville would win the day. Wheaton folk claimed that fraud was practiced, and as a result are said to have imported votes from Chicago. Wheaton finally won.

Raid on Naperville.

Early one morning, veterans of the civil war organized a force and, going in lumber wagons, made a raid on Naperville. A poem about the event was written and read at Wheaton college:

"And now, my good fellow, you are beaten,
And the county seat is placed in Wheaton.
Your best plan is to take the old shell and rent her,
For the county seat must be placed in the center."

In the old family Bible brought from Pomfret I saw recorded in fairly fresh ink at the bottom of a yellowed page, these two items—Jesse C. Wheaton, died 1895; Warren L. Wheaton, died 1903.

The Bible was at the home of Mrs. Lucy Ellen Darling, daughter of Warren L.

"'Pomfret'," mused Mrs. Darling. "Well, Elbert (Gary) said when he saw it that it was the most beautiful street in America. Once, after father went back for a visit, he confided in me that he had taken occasion for the first time to visit Putnam's cave.

Such Town as They Dreamed.

"My father used to tell me how, in the early days out here, he could look across the prairie and see the smoke at Butterfield's. They were another early family. Nothing but prairie grass between. When my father planted those maples out in the yard passersby would say, 'Wheaton, what do you think they're going to amount to?'"

"Do I think Wheaton is the sort of town my father and his brother dreamed about? Schools, churches, homes—yes. Books and learning were my father's hobbies."

Houses have come between the old home places of the two pioneer Wheatons—Jesse and Warren—both on prairie knolls half a mile apart.

James and Washington Wheaton, sons of Jesse, live in the old home to the west. It was Mrs. James Wheaton who showed me the old family album—strong faces, those of the Wheatons and the Garys and the Blanchards, the Vallettes and the rest.

The acres on which Wheaton stands have been transformed by time, but the influence of the pioneers who sought a peaceful home atmosphere bids fair to linger for years to come.

Many well known Chicagoans, appreciating the scenic restfulness and the advantage of convenient location, have pretentious country estates in the vicinity. Among these are Col. Robert R. McCormick, E. N. Hurley, Arhur W. Cutten, R. R. Richardson, Col. William J. Sutherland, George A. Strom, Will H. Lyford, Richard Fox, Mrs. George Plamondon, Alfred T. Martin, Henry Hooper, John J. Bryant, and Albert J. Partridge.

Also a number of golf clubs have followed the example of the Chicago Golf club which laid out its grounds near Wheaton thirty years ago.

BORING 5-MILE WATER TUNNEL 200 FEET DOWN

City Workers Tell of Benefit for Flat Dwellers.

A water tunnel now being constructed from the lake to Springfield avenue, 200 feet beneath Chicago avenue, has been cut through rock as far west as Dearborn street and will be ready to carry water in 1931 if the 1929 water budget is passed, according to Loren Gayton, city engineer. The tunnel will be five miles long.

The large northwest side area which has been suffering from inadequate water service for the last few years will be benefited by the improvement, officials of the department of public works report.

Third Floor Dwellers Suffer.

Because of inadequate water pressure in outlying northwest sections, residents of some third floor apartments have been unable to get water during periods of greatest consumption. That condition will be remedied by the new tunnel, Mr. Gayton said.

One branch will run under Central Park avenue south to Fillmore street to the Central Park pumping station, and another north to the Springfield avenue station at Bloomingdale avenue. Present tunnels from the lake to these stations run under private property and must be replaced, according to a court order recently issued against the department of public works. They will be abandoned as soon as the new tunnels are completed.

Eventually to Cross City.

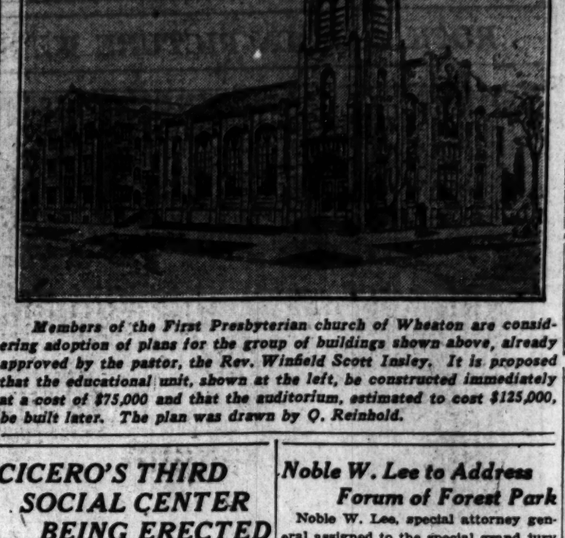
The Chicago avenue tunnel, which is horseshoe shaped and 16 feet across, is planned eventually to be extended west to the city limits at Austin boulevard, near which point another pumping station will be constructed to serve western suburbs. The Central Park and Springfield stations do not adequately supply this district, engineers of the department say.

On completion of the part to Springfield avenue, however, the entire area within the city limits will have sufficient water pressure for present needs and also to anticipate a number of years' growth, according to officials of the department.

Northwestern Group to Elect on Wednesday

The election of officers of the Northwest Town Business Men's association will be held Wednesday afternoon, at the Lion's hotel, 4250 West North avenue. Plans for local improvements which have been tabled during the last month will be brought forward by the new administration. The question of parking on North avenue is one of the questions to be considered.

Wheaton Church's Building Plan



Members of the First Presbyterian church of Wheaton are considering adoption of plans for the group of buildings shown above, already approved by the pastor, the Rev. Winfield Scott Insley. It is proposed that the educational unit, shown at the left, be constructed immediately at a cost of $75,000 and that the auditorium, estimated to cost $125,000, be built later. The plan was drawn by O. Reinhold.

CICERO'S THIRD SOCIAL CENTER BEING ERECTED

Cicero's bid for fame as a park town will gain new impetus with the completion of the Warren-Clyde community house at 57th avenue and 16th street, now under construction.

The new community house, the third for Cicero, is situated on a large plot of ground, part of which is already used as a playground. The ground immediately surrounding the building will be developed later into a park with a wading pond for children and an ornamental pagoda.

A. Z. Zelenka, architect and engineer, prepared the plans for the Clyde park commission, of which Robert Paci is president. Fred Mraz & Sons are the general contractors.

Modern colonial architecture is utilized in the structure, which is of brick construction. The building is set back from the street on a high terrace, and a wide circular drive leads to the entrance from 16th street. A stone monument, floodlighted at night, will decorate the central area before the drive.

The plans call for a main hall, equipped with a small stage and large enough to seat 400 people at cards, and a roomy second floor lounge. In the entrance lobby there is to be a colonial fireplace. The basement kitchen will be modernly equipped. The lounging rooms will be carpeted and completely furnished throughout.

The Cicero park board, the Clyde park board and the Hawthorne park board are the three bodies which have provided a total of twenty-two acres of parks and playgrounds for Cicero, a town of 70,000 population.

Noble W. Lee to Address Forum of Forest Park

Noble W. Lee, special attorney general assigned to the special grand jury investigations during the last six months, will be the speaker at the meeting of the Forest Park Community Forum tonight at the Community Methodist church, Forest Park. The Forum, which has recently been organized, was formed to provide a weekly meeting, open to all residents of the suburb, for the discussion of community problems. John Horton is president.

ASSERT CHICAGO REQUIRES 3,000 MORE POLICEMEN

"We wish to go on record as favoring the addition of about 3,000 police officers to the city's force, preferably at the rate of about 500 every six months," Harry W. Delano, secretary of the North Avenue Business Men's Improvement association, told Commissioner of Police William F. Russell last week in reply to his request for a statement of that group's views.

"While complimenting the department on the very good work it is doing, we feel that with an adequate number of men, just that much more can be accomplished," Mr. Delano observed.

Cites Needs of Lawndale.

From the neighborhood of Crawford avenue and 26th street came the statement: "Our community, which is in the Lawndale police district, is especially in need of more men to patrol the neighborhood, as evidenced by the many holdups, burglaries, and minor crimes that have occurred recently."

James F. Kuba, president of the Crawford Business Men's league, was the spokesman. The matter of more police will again be called to the attention of Ald. John Toman, [illegible], it is told the commissioner.

Appeals Made to Aldermen.

Ald. George M. Maypole [illegible], A. J. Horan [29th.], and John S. Clark [30th], against have been approached on the matter by business men of their wards, according to John F. Yates, president of the West Center Lawn club. The board of directors of that organization has agreed with the commissioner that the city is under-policed and has promised the support of the group to any further action that it may take in order to get a sufficient number of men.

LINCOLN DEATH STORY WRITTEN BY EYEWITNESS

Physician Answers Denial as to Booth's Cry.

As more and more interest is taken at each Lincoln's birthday in incidents pertaining to the great emancipator's character and career, there is a decrease in the number of eyewitnesses to events in which the civil war President was the central figure. Dr. Samuel R. Ward, pioneer physician of Richmond, McHenry county, was in the audience at Ford's theater in Washington, D. C., on the night of President Lincoln's assassination. Dr. Ward is now in his 85th year, but the tragic occurence still stands out vividly in his memory as will be noted by the details which he has prepared for the metropolitan section of The Tribune.

BY DR. SAMUEL R. WARD.

On the morning of April 14, 1865, at my home in Washington, D. C., I looked as usual at my morning paper and I saw it especially advertised for that evening the play, "The American Cousin," with Laura Keene, the star actress. It was also announced that there were to be present President and Mrs. Lincoln and Gen. and Mrs. Grant.

Having seen Mr. Lincoln several times and not having seen Gen. Grant, I was especially desirous to see Gen. Grant, and so took steps to attend the theater that evening. My brother, William, and his wife were living in Washington at the time. So we fixed it up to go, and invited a young woman to go, also.

I secured tickets for the bunch, being especially particular about the location of the seats because I was very anxious to see Gen. Grant. I selected four seats in what was then called the "dress circle," choosing them so they would be on the opposite side of the theater from where the boxes were located in which President Lincoln and Gen. Grant were to sit, so that I could have a good view of them.

Shortly after we reached our seats in the theater President and Mrs. Lincoln arrived, accompanied by a Miss Lewis, daughter of Judge Lewis of the Supreme court, and Maj. Rathbone of the regular army. We learned that Gen. Grant had gone to Philadelphia. Perhaps three-quarters of an hour, perhaps more, had passed in the play when all of a sudden a shot was heard, and all wondered what that could mean.

The dress circle was a gallery that extended clear around the auditorium about twelve or more feet above the main floor. The orchestra was on the main floor. The stage about four feet above the orchestra.

Lincoln Behind Flag.

The boxes in which President Lincoln and the others sat were on the same level and a continuation of the dress circle. Mr. Lincoln sat in the front of the box, the farthest from the stage, and had therefore the best view of the stage. The large front openings of the boxes were draped with the Stars and Stripes, a large flag mainly concealing Mr. Lincoln from the audience. All I could see of him was his left arm from the elbow down as it lay on the threshold of the window. I could see Mrs. Lincoln, who sat not far from Mr. Lincoln, and Miss Lewis and Maj. Rathbone, who sat in the other box.

Suddenly I heard a revolver shot. It was not more than a moment later I saw Mrs. Lincoln jump up, wringing her hands. We all realized then what had happened and all in the theater were on their feet and, of course, there was great excitement. By turning one crank on the stage back of the curtain all the lights of the theater could be put out, and one of the conspirators was stationed there, and it was his duty when he heard the shot to turn that crank and the theater would be dark and the assassin who had shot Mr. Lincoln would only have had to walk out and escape.

The other conspirator, however, did not turn out the lights, so there was nothing left for the assassin to do but to get out the best way he could. He decided to jump out of the window of the box Mr. Lincoln was in. Just as he put his foot on the threshold of the window he held a bright new dagger in his hand, and he looked out over the audience, waved his dagger, and said, "Sic semper tyrannis."

Sure of Booth's Cry.

Several years ago while in Beloit, Wis., I read a statement in a Beloit paper, by a man who said he was a former soldier, that Booth did not say "Sic semper tyrannis," but I say positively he did.

Just then Maj. Rathbone grabbed him by his arm near the shoulder, and the assassin struck the major with his dagger, cutting a long gash on the major's arm, and then turned toward the stage and made a jump for it. He did not quite reach it, however. One of his feet struck on the top of the stage, but the other missed and he went down on the floor by the side of the orchestra. He then immediately put both hands up on the stage and pulled himself up. There happened to be no one else on the stage at that time. He crossed diagonally to a door on the left side of the stage. Just as he reached this door he met Laura Keene, who was entering it. He pushed her to one side and passed out there through the hall to the back door and to his horse, which a boy held there, saddled and bridled. He mounted that horse and disappeared down an alley.

I parted with my brother and his wife and the young woman. My brother was going past her house and said he would escort her home. I had spied Charles E. Prentice down on the main floor as he stood up there not far from the orchestra. I called to him several times and he finally heard me. I motioned to him to wait, and he did.

Learns Name of Slayer.

I then started for the stairs to go down when a man said to me:

"Do you know who that assassin is?"

I said, "No."

"That was J. Wilkes Booth," he said. "I have known him a long time, and I know that is he."

I found Mr. Prentice where I first saw him. We went up on the stage and watched the audience. We looked up into the box just in time to see them arranging to carry the President out. Six young men, two of whom we knew, carried Mr. Lincoln out of the theater and across the street to a room that fronted on the street. It was located on the second floor. Mr. Prentice and I went across the stage and to the back door and were shown where the horse stood on which Booth had escaped. We spent perhaps fifteen minutes in the theater, among the actors and actresses, listening to their own stories. We then strolled down on Pennsylvania avenue. Crowds everywhere, excited and angry!

We heard that Secretary Seward had been assassinated at his home.

Mr. Prentice, about midnight, said he would leave to go home as his mother would be worrying about him and that if I would wait for him he would come back. So I stayed at the Metropolitan hotel until he returned. When together again, we went again as near as we could to the Ford theater. Every little while word came from the President's room as to how he was getting along and who was there.

TWENTY GROUPS JOIN IN BATTLE TO EXTEND "L"

Assert They Represent 400,000 Residents.

Twenty organizations representing 400,000 northwest side residents have come under the wing of the Chicago West Town Chamber of Commerce to carry through their fight for an extension of the Humboldt park elevated line west from its present terminal at Lawndale avenue to Austin boulevard. William F. McHugh, chairman of the transportation committee of the chamber of commerce, is in charge of negotiations with the transit company.

Following the passage by the city council of an ordinance enabling the company to build the extension, Mr. McHugh and his associates have opened negotiations with the elevated lines. Officials of the lines report that they are considering the matter, but are not yet prepared to commit themselves to any action.

Threaten Appeal to State.

"People of the northwest side are clamoring for an extension of the line," Mr. McHugh declared, "and if the company fails to agree to the improvement, we will go before the Illinois commerce commission and ask that the company be ordered to extend the line on the ground that it is a public necessity.

"We feel that the people of the district should get relief while the transition settlement is being made. The general settlement will not conflict with the construction of the extension, and the work might as well start now, since the section is 90 per cent built up."

Ald. Wiley W. Mills [37th], who introduced the enabling ordinance in the council, supports Mr. McHugh in his view that the matter should be presented to the commerce commission in the event that the company does not agree to make the extension.

Asserts Company Agreed.

Previous to the presentation of the ordinance the company agreed to build if the necessary legislation were passed, according to the alderman. Since this has been done, it should go through with its part of the agreement, he declares.

The elevated lines had the power to build this extension in 1906 when an ordinance granting the right to construct lines in the west side was passed, but at that time the area along North avenue between Crawford avenue and Austin boulevard was sparsely settled, and it was not believed that such an extension would be profitable.

The plan is to extend the line over the alley immediately to the north of North avenue to 4600, then through or around the property of the Continental Can company at 4622 West North avenue, and from there over the alley again to Austin boulevard. It is hoped in time to extend the line still farther west to Harlem avenue, since there are no transportation facilities for the section between this street and the proposed new terminal.

Miss Jean Savage, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Savage, 931 Clinton place, River Forest, led the grand march at the junior prom of the University of Notre Dame Friday night with Robert J. Kuhn of Lima, O., general chairman of the prom committee. Miss Savage is a student at Rosary college, Chicago.

WEST SUBURBS OPEN FIGHT ON CARCASS PLANT

Protest against the operation of the Western Rendering company, located near McCook, has been made in resolutions which the Western Gateways association recently sent to the state board of health and the board of county commissioners.

The Western Rendering company is engaged in reducing animal carcasses to fertilizer and other products. Complaint is made that the carcasses of the animals are transported through the villages contiguous to the plant. It is pointed out that the offensive odors pollute the air over a large area in the vicinity.

Word that the rendering company contemplates a series of additions to its present plant for the purpose of increasing its capacity has hastened action on the part of citizens of La Grange, Riverside, Lyons, La Grange Park, Summit, Western Springs, Brookfield, Hinsdale, and Argo in appealing to the Western Gateways association.

GUILD TO STAGE MUSICAL REVUE BY OWN MEMBERS

Will Publish Song Hits, President Announces.

"Royal Love," a musical revue in two acts written and directed by Miss Jeanette Krulewich, will be presented by the members of the Chicago Arts guild next Sunday evening at the Central theater, Van Buren street and Wabash avenue.

The words and music for the songs in the presentation were written by Irving White, Peggy Holt, and Harry Miller, members of the organization. All three of these persons have had their songs published and, according to Miss Krulewich, the songs written especially for the revue also will be published.

Variety of New Songs.

The theme song of the revue, "Dream of Dreams," was written by Mr. White. The other musical numbers are: "What You Can Do, I Can Do," "Is it Wrong?" "The Art of Making Love," "Pretending," and "Red Head."

The organization is composed of twenty-five young persons talented in either writing or acting. The purpose of the club is to develop the talent of its members by presenting plays once a month to allow the writers an opportunity of seeing what can be done with the plays and songs they have written and to give the actors an opportunity of improving themselves by having dramatic critics and professional directors watch and criticize their performances.

Headed by Miss Krulewich.

The officers of the organization are: Miss Krulewich, president and director; Ethel Goodman, treasurer; Sam Aplon, ticket sale manager, and Rosamond Tobin, secretary and publicity manager.

The cast for "Royal Love" includes Helen Herman, Herbert Hobson, Sidney Grass, Jack Friedman, Melba Goodman, Babett Froelich Sam Aplon, Milton Reis, Ethel Goodman, Irving White, Julius Siegel, Rella Wolfe, Peggy Holt, Emile Guttmann, Esther Goodman, and Sylvia Goodman.

STEP IS TAKEN IN EXTENSION OF DEVON AVE.

Extending Devon avenue through the northwest side, out to Norwood Park and other suburbs cutting in at that point, was discussed at a recent conference of authorities of the county and city, called by Mayor John E. Anderson of Park Ridge.

Although not worked out in entirety the plan finally decided upon was that the city is to provide the right of way, and the county to provide the paving. The needed cooperation of the county commissioners and Chicago authorities was promised.

Those attending the meeting were County Commissioners William Busse and Frank Wilson, George J. Eckhoff, president of the Greater Devon Avenue association; Ald. Thomas J. Bowler [25th], Eugene S. Taylor of the Chicago Plan commission, Engineer C. D. Hill of the board of local improvements, Arthur W. Consoer, engineer of the city of Park Ridge, and Earl Gubbins, president of the Cook County Real Estate board.

14 REPUBLICANS, TWO DEMOCRATS RUNNING IN CICERO

A dearth of Democrats in Cicero was indicated by the fact that of the 16 candidates who have filed petitions to run for town offices Feb. 26, all but two are Republicans. It will be necessary for the board of election commissioners to print ballots leaving blank spaces to be used by voters who wish to give their votes to a candidate other than the Republican, according to John S. Rush, chief clerk of the board.

The two Democratic candidates whose petitions have been certified in a statement from the town clerk of Cicero to the clerk of the board are Frank Drew, who is running for police magistrate, and Charles Bulvas, who will be on the ballot for trustee.

Republican candidates are as follows: For police magistrate, Henry J. Sandusky, and for trustee, Frank A. Kveton; for justice of the peace; Emil E. Fischer, Charles J. Nowak, Thomas M. Zasadil, Fred J. Loyda, and D. A. McDonald.

For constable: Frank Soucup, B. A. Urbanek, Henry Peters, Stephan Gendaszek and Thomas Slominski; and for director of the public library, Frank S. Matonisek and John Pocius.

In case a majority is not obtained by any of these candidates in the February election, another election between the two highest candidates will be held April 2.

LEGION POSTS TO CELEBRATE LINCOLN'S DAY

So. Side Groups to Have G. A. R. Vets as Guests.

Among the Lincoln's birthday programs planned this week by various Legion posts will be that of Jackson Park post No. 555, on Tuesday night. Arrangements have been completed for a dinner at the Southmoor hotel, 67th street and Stony Island avenue, in honor of the six remaining members of H. L. Drury post, No. 376, G. A. R. The dinner will begin at 6:30 o'clock. It will be followed by dancing. The event will be informal. Music and entertainment are promised. Edward Schneider is in charge of reservations.

Woodlawn post, No. 175, will have an Americanism program on Lincoln's birthday. The meeting will start at 8:30 p. m. in the post's new headquarters, 1208 East 63d street. Mrs. George Macauley, Americanism chairman, has arranged to have Fred E. Busbey, state Americanism officer of Illinois, as speaker for the occasion.

Chairman William Russakov of the entertainment committee of North Town post, 431, is giving an informal dinner-dance at the Chicago Town and Tennis club, Tuesday evening. A gala event is promised those who attend. The post has been promised two sketches from loop productions by Past Commander Martin Callahan of Galbraith post. Those in charge of picking up old newspapers and magazines in the district have reported favorably during the last two weeks, but their plea is still out for more papers. These papers are collected by the post every Saturday at different stations. North Town post is leading in the bowling tournament held by the seventh district. Athletic Officer Leonard Sachs, also coach of Loyola university, has the post basketball team in A1 shape and issues a challenge to any post which has a team entered according to the rules of the American Legion tournament.

A new membership record has been established by Chicago Elevated post, No. 184, with the signing up of more than 525 veterans among employés on the Rapid Transit lines. Commander George R. Apfel declares that the membership drive will continue until every veteran on the "L" has joined in helping put the department of Illinois over the top for 1929. An extensive program of social events is being undertaken by Elevated post this year as a means of stimulating interest in the legion and its activities. The latest affair was a gala dance and cotillion party, held in the Louis XVI. and Crystal ballrooms of Hotel Sherman last night. Among the features of an elaborate entertainment program was the appearance of radio stars.

Le Roy A. McCullough post, No. 128 will hold its regular meeting Feb. 13. There will be a Lincoln birthday party after the regular session, with entertainment and refreshments.

First Tank Corps post, No. 245, will hold its annual past commanders' banquet Friday, April 15, at 7 p. m., at the Stevens restaurant, 17 North State street. At this annual celebration, the commander for the previous year is honored by the post, thus Past Commander C. A. Uller Jr., 1928, will be presented with a solid gold past commander's button. A dinner will be served, after which a short business meeting will be held. Prominent Legionnaires will be present. Among those who have already accepted the invitation are: Dave L. Shillinglaw, department commander; L. R. Benston, department service officer; Edward Clamage, past vice commander of Illinois, and Dr. Charles Schott, commander of the second district.

Comrade Arthur Schroeder, master of Banner Blue lodge, has invited Square post, No. 232, to attend a patriotic meeting to be held Wednesday, Feb. 20, at Englewood temple, 6734 Yale avenue. A uniformed color guard from Square post will present the colors, and Comrade Tom Doonan will give "Ode to the Flag." There will be entertainment and refreshments. On Friday evening, Feb. 15, the executive meeting of Square post will be held at Hamilton park fieldhouse.

"The Mark of a Veteran—Plus" in the lapels of 551 ex-service men of the Roseland district by midnight, Feb. 28, is the goal of Roseland post, No. 49. The drive starts Wednesday night with the opening of headquarters at 11311 South Michigan avenue. A parade by the drum and bugle corps will let the town know that something is going on. A big sign in the window will list paid-up members, and the names of new members will be added as they come in. Commander Ralph De Cook and Mrs. Fay Leith, president of the auxiliary, will have members on duty at headquarters day and night during the two weeks of the drive.

During the recent cold snap officers of Portage Park post, No. 143, were instrumental in having sand placed on the slippery platforms of railway stations on the northwest side. The post has joined the Northwest Federation of Improvement Clubs with a quota of three delegates and three alternates.

The post invites all C. M. T. C. men and their friends who are eligible to attend the summer training camp and who live in the north half of Chicago to a whoopee party to be held Monday evening, Feb. 18, at 8 o'clock in the Legion hall, 4050 Milwaukee avenue, over the Portage Park theater. There will be music, vaudeville, motion pictures, and other features. Some of the pictures will feature C. M. T. camp activities of 1927 and 1928.

Maywood post, No. 132, and its auxiliary unit are arranging a joint initiation ceremony to be held Feb. 14 at Odd Fellows' hall, 5th avenue and Washington boulevard, Maywood. An excellent program is planned, including speaking by distinguished legionnaires, games and refreshments. Dr. Hugh Scott and Mrs. Scott and Maj. Perry of Washington will be special guests. Bill Schlupp, fifth district commander, will also be present. There will be no charge and any member of the Legion or the auxiliary will be welcome.

ANSWERS

Following are the answers to quotations previously published:

Quotation—My politics are short and sweet like the old woman's dance.

Answer—This phrase was used by Abraham Lincoln in the first campaign speech he ever made. It was in 1832, when he was 23 years old and a candidate for the legislature of Illinois. The incident is mentioned in Wayne Whipple's "The Story Life of Lincoln." Whipple quotes from T. P. O'Connor's "Some Old Love Stories." According to O'Connor, it was Lincoln's "maiden effort on the stump, made at Pappsville, a village eleven miles from Springfield. The full speech, given by O'Connor, is as follows:

"Fellow citizens, I presume you all know who I am. I am humble Abraham Lincoln. I have been solicited by many friends to becomq a member of the legislature. My politics are short and sweet, like the old woman's dance. I am in favor of a national bank. I am in favor of the internal improvement system and a high protective tariff. These are my sentiments and political principles. If elected, I shall be thankful; if not, it will be all the same."—A. A. Friedlander, Allerton house, 701 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.

NOTE.—This first campaign of Lincoln for a public office occurred shortly after he had returned to New Salem from the Black Hawk war, in which he was chosen a captain of volunteers, but saw no fighting. He was defeated at the polls and entered an unsuccessful storekeeping venture. Two years later, however, he was elected to the legislature. His delivery of the above speech is verified by Herndon and by Nicolay and Hay.

Quotation—You can fool all the people some of the time, and some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time.

Answer—During the Lincoln-Douglas debates of 1858, which marked the senatorial campaign between Lincoln and United States Senator Stephen A. Douglas, Douglas made the attempt to fix on Lincoln, by documentary proof, the charge of abolitionism which he had been making for some time. He read a set of resolutions which he said had been adopted at a convention in Springfield in 1854, in which a radical anti-slavery group voted Lincoln to be "of their stripe."

Lincoln replied, denying subscribing to or being present at the adoption of the resolutions, but it was a halting disavowal with no proofs. However, a lively young Chicago reporter, Robert Hitt, discovered the "set of resolutions," whether known or not to Douglas, to be a set adopted at an entirely different meeting.

Lincoln's supporters cried "Forgery," and the incident led to a growing doubt of Douglas. Hence it was while further refuting the charges of Douglas that Lincoln, in his speech at Clinton, Ill., on Sept. 8, 1858, used and made famous the above quotation. For a long time Lincoln was accepted as the author of the statement, but it has since been established as an expression borrowed by him from the witty philosopher, P. T. Barnum (1810-1891), a contemporary and keen sympathizer with Lincoln. Barnum at this time was lecturing in England.—Mrs. Gladys M. Still, 4043 Massachusetts street, Gary, Ind.

NOTE.—To prove her point, Mrs. Still exhibits a letter received from an informant in Washington, D. C., three years ago, when she was having an argument with a friend in Denver as to the authorship of the expression. The information comes from the library of congress, as follows: "P. T. Barnum is accepted as the author of the expression. Lincoln is often called the author, but this has since been denied. It is said to have been quoted by Lincoln in his speech at Clinton." There is some doubt, however, as to whether Lincoln ever used this exact expression, although several who heard the speech have said that he expressed a similar thought.

Quotation—Now he belongs to the ages.

Answer—Five days after Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox Court House President Lincoln met with his cabinet to discuss plans for reconstruction. That was Good Friday, April 14, 1865. In the afternoon he and Mrs. Lincoln took a drive through the parks of Washington. That night they went to Ford's theater, where "Our American Cousin," a comedy, was being performed.

As the President, Mrs. Lincoln, and their guests, Miss Harris and Maj. Henry Rathbone, daughter and stepson of Senator Harris of New York, entered the box, the orchestra struck up "Hail to the Chief," the actors stopped, and the audience rose, applauding and cheering.

About 10 o'clock an actor, John Wilkes Booth, called by historians a fanatical secessionist, entered the President's box by the back door, which he barred. Standing behind the President, he shot him in the head with a pistol. The President fell forward. Maj. Rathbone attempted to grapple with the assassin, who slashed him with a knife. Booth then leaped upon the stage. His spur, however, caught in the American flag draped around the box, and in his fall his leg was injured. Shouting "Sic semper tyrannis!" he strode across the stage and disappeared. Eventually he was trapped in a burning barn in Virginia and killed.

In the theater there was grief and consternation. The President was carried to the house of a Mr. Petersen, across the street from the theater. All night he lay unconscious. As the day dawned his pulse grew weaker, and at 7:22 a. m. he died. When the strong heart ceased to beat it was Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war, who broke the silence with the words, "Now he belongs to the ages."—Mrs. Ilam M. Whitehead, the Greenwood inn, Evanston, Ill.

(In addition to a description of Lincoln's death another contributor has told something about the life of Secretary Stanton. That part of his answer is deemed worthy of a prize. It is given below.)

Answer—Edwin McMasters Stanton (1814-1869), a native of Ohio, was a noted lawyer before he became a cabinet officer. Before the civil war Stanton was a Democrat, opposed to slavery but a firm defender of the constitutional rights of the slave holders. He was a bitter opponent of Lincoln, whose party he hated and distrusted.

In the reorganization of President Buchanan's cabinet in 1860 Stanton became attorney general. Although he had often violently denounced President Lincoln, the latter saw in him a good war minister and in January, 1862, invited him into the cabinet. In his administration of the war office Stanton was vigorous, rigid, and often harsh, but he kept the armies in the field well equipped and infused energy into procrastinating generals.

Remaining in the cabinet of President Andrew Johnson after Lincoln's assassination, Stanton clashed with Johnson over reconstruction policies and was suspended. The senate refused to concur in the suspension and Stanton was returned to his duties. When the senate's impeachment proceedings against Johnson failed, Stanton resigned. In 1869 he was appointed justice of the United States Supreme court, but he died four days after his appointment.—Leon Lefkik, 3315 Douglas boulevard, Chicago.

Michael Zimmer, warden of the Cook County hospital, was the speaker at an interclub meeting of the Park Ridge and Evanston branches of the Kiwanis. The gathering took place last Thursday evening.

ASSAIL GRANTING OF TEMPORARY BUS FRANCHISES

Business Men Protest to State Board.

Protest against what it declared to be the Illinois commerce commission's practice of granting temporary franchises to the Chicago Motor Coach company without giving a hearing to objectors has been made in a resolution adopted by the Crawford Business Men's league. The resolution also declared such franchises should not be granted while the city council is considering the traction problem of the entire city.

The city council is greatly handicapped by the commission's action, the resolution asserted, and as a consequence Chicago has no home rule. It was decided by the league that members of the group should urge state legislators of the southwest district to remedy this condition.

Urge Franchise Power for Council.

The league asserted legislation should be passed to give the city home rule in traction by giving the council full power concerning franchises without interference from the commerce commission. In the ultimate settlement the group believes that the franchise should include provision for a one fare system for all transportation facilities, as well as provision to give compensation to the city by the companies for privileges in the franchise.

Residents of the west side are entitled to convenient and economical means of transportation on a par with that in other parts of the city, the resolution said.

See Peril to Unified System.

It is also pointed out that action of the commerce commission in the motor coach affair interfered with the plan now being considered by city authorities to combine all the utilities into one system. If motor coaches obtain the right to traverse additional streets it will not be possible to obtain a satisfactory one fare system, the resolution declared.

"Be it resolved," it concludes, "that we recommend the passage of such laws as to give the city home rule and transfer the granting of all franchises from the commerce commission to the city council, as well as power to pass on all rates and fares of all utilities doing business in the city; that a fair compensation be paid to the city treasury for this privilege; and that the money be used to keep in first class condition the streets on which the utilities operate."

ROCKNE MENTOR QUITS TEACHING AFTER 39 YEARS

Headed Gym Classes in Six Schools at Once.

William Kopp, 69 years old, of 1343 North California avenue, a veteran of the old prairie school days, teacher of physical education for thirty-nine years and mentor of Knute Rockne in the days of 1907, has retired after 42 years of service as a teacher and will pursue his two favorite hobbies, reading and fishing. He had been a teacher at Tuly High school since 1890.

Mr. Kopp was born Aug. 12, 1860, at Milwaukee avenue and Erie street. He started his profession as an instructor of physical education immediately after he was graduated from the North American Gymnastic union. At that time Chicago had 48 grammar schools and was divided into eight districts. Mr. Kopp was given the eighth district and, in accordance with the custom of that day, he divided his time among the six schools in his district. The colonel, as he was called, taught in Burr, Wells, Anderson, Von Humboldt, Mechow and Central Park schools.

At Tuley Since It Started.

In 1899, the northwest division was created and Mr. Kopp was sent to the Mayfair High school, now called Schurz. One year later the Northwest Division High school was built at Potomac and Claremont streets. The school is now known as Tuley High school. Mr. Kopp was sent to the school at its opening and has been there ever since.

"I enjoyed every one of those thirty-nine years," said Mr. Kopp. "I have seen thousands of the boys and girls come and go. There was Knute Rockne in 1907, and I can remember him well. As a youngster Knute was good and he brought honors home to the school for three years."

He pulled forth records showing that Rockne, under the coaching of Mr. Kopp won inter-high school and Cook county honors in the three consecutive years of 1907 to 1909. In 1907, Mr. Rockne ran in the Cook county 440 yard run and tossed the twelve pound shot. In 1908 he participated in the 100 and 220 yard dashes and the shot put. In the inter-high school competition of 1909, he took first in the 220 yard dash, first in the twelve pound shot, third in the dash and third in the hurdles.

Tardy Only Once, He Says.

"We worked under handicaps in those days," continued Mr. Kopp. "There were few athletic parks and practice fields, but we managed to keep in trim and I worked my school classes regularly. Thirty-nine years at school and I'm proud to say that I've been tardy just once in all that time and absent two weeks on account of illness. My plans for the future are not definite, but I believe that my time will be divided between my summer home in northern Michigan and my present address."

JUDSON BAPTIST CHURCH FINANCE DRIVE NEARS END

The campaign to raise $66,200 to finish the church auditorium and construct a Sunday school building and recreation hall for the Judson Baptist church, North Austin boulevard and Berkshire street, will end next Sunday. Dr. Benjamin Otto, secretary of the Baptist executive council, will preach at both services.

Judson church was organized seven years ago with 57 members. The membership now is more than 400. The church auditorium is too small and the Sunday school has outgrown its quarters. The plan is to start construction in the spring and have the building completed for use in the fall.

The Rev. Joseph Croft Dent is pastor of the church. Dr. Howard M. Sheaff is chairman of the building committee; the finance committee includes Henry H. Brady, Arthur Kruger, William Nichols, and E. C. Fletcher. Team captains are H. M. Dexter, H. C. Bollman, Harry Nicholas, and Charles Purnell.

YORK DISCIPULI COENABUNT IN TOGIS ROMANIS

The Circulus Classicus, Latin club at York Community High school, Elmhurst, will hold its annual Roman dinner Wednesday in the school dining room.

The students will wear the Roman senatorial costume, the toga; and the food and method of serving will be of the Roman fashion. Boys dressed as Roman slaves will serve the meal.

The program is to include classical songs by Faith and Blanche Johnson and a group of harp solos by Eileen McNellis. Harold Ladwig is chairman of the affair.

West Town Forum to Hear Bishop Francis McConnell

Bishop Francis J. McConnell, Methodist leader and newly elected president of the Federal Council of Churches, will adress the West Town Forum on "Religion's Challenge to Industry" at 8 o'clock next Sunday evening in the Washington Boulevard temple, Washington boulevard and Kariov avenue.

Sorority to Initiate.

Kappa Tau Kappa, a sorority composed of northwest side girls, will hold its semi-annual formal initiation tonight at the Palmer house. Genevieve Faulconer is in charge of arrangements.

UNITE TO FIGHT ASSESSMENTS ON KIMBALL AVE.

Civic Groups Say Levies Are Unjust, Too High.

Notices of special assessments sent out by the board of local improvements last week to property owners for the proposed widening of Kimball avenue between Grace street and Lawrence avenue brought scores of expressions of indignation and resulted in their filing objections to the amount of the assessments with the county clerk last Thursday.

The Montrose District Improvement association, through its secretary, Sheldon H. Haddock, is supporting property owners in their contention that the assessment are exorbitant, according to B. A. Rooney, president. His group has obtained the cooperation of the Northwest Federation of Improvement Clubs in the matter.

Says $400 Should Be Maximum.

While lots along the street have been assessed from $850 to $890, or approximately $17 a foot, the amount in no case should be more than $400, Mr. Rooney said.

Residents are particularly at odds with the board over the amounts of assessment, since they say they were previously informed that an entirely new street would be laid. In the assessment notices received last week it became apparent that from Irving Park boulevard to Lawrence avenue new concrete foundations would be provided only for the widened section, while the present foundation would be used in the center.

Cite Benedit to Other Streets.

Another objection set forth by Mr. Rooney is that the assessment should not be spread only among residents of Kimball avenue, because the street, which is expected eventually to become a bus line, will also be of benefit to residents in streets at least two blocks on each side.

The estimated cost of the Kimball avenue widening from Grace street to Lawrence avenue is $247,000, of which $185,000 is to be borne by the special assessments.

REBUILDS MEN AFTER QUITTING LOOP BUSINESS

Cathedral Shelter Head Feeds 600 a Day.

d in the chancel, which was for-erly Sumner hall, of the old cathe-al, and "built by loving hands and enerous hearts," which he reiterated gain and again as we visited the at-ractive chapel where morning serv-es are held, and then back through he clergy house to the office.

Think of the task this man faces daily! Feeding on an average of 200 men at each meal—six hundred daily. Only twenty at a time can be man-aged—he has three helpers, a cook, waiter, and handy man. No one is turned away, and unemployment has been widespread this last year in the city. Multiply 600 daily by 365 days in the year and what do we get? 219,000 feedings!

More than 72,000 men were fed last year, and more than 49,000 of this number without charge. This amount does not include the daily bread line, another 22,000. If a man can pay, the nominal charge is 5 cents for rolls and coffee; if he can't, he receives it just the same.

The shelter provided lodging for 30,-184; 2,036 received lodging outside the shelter paid for by this mission center. Clothing was provided for approxi-mately 3,839 and more than 2,800 ob-tained employment through the shel-ter. Financial aid was provided for 4,917 and more than 5,220 were given street car fares. Countless other serv-ices were rendered not only in the shelter, but in the house of correction and the Cook county jail.

Help Women and Children.

Though the shelter work is confined to men, women and children receive help and comfort. "Ask and it shall be given you; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you," said Jesus, and these words are being faithfully carried out.

Modest to a degree, it is rather hard to get Father Gibson to talk about himself—but of the shelter and its work, that is another thing! His whole heart and soul are wrapped up in this work.

"When typewriters get thoroughly out of gear, they must be remade," said the shelter director. "So it is with men. The workshop for this re-modeling must be a place of worship. Don't picture the shelter as a mere flop of the philanthropist, where down and outs are fed and clothed for awhile, until, being no better than be-fore, they are cast back again upon society.

"We offer assistance to all sorts and conditions of men, without dis-tinction as to creed, class, or color. The educated and uneducated come to us for assistance. Ministers of many faiths have sought solace, mutual help and advice of the shelter's staff. Some-times it is a fresh start they need; sometimes it is simply that they have never found their proper spheres."

Called to Identify Suicide.

Only the morning of the interview, Father Gibson had been called to an undertaking establishment to try to identify a suicide. The man had been tentatively identified the night before, but Father Gibson disclosed the fact that the man whom they thought lay dead had called on him after the sui-cide had been discovered. But the face was familiar. This man, too, had stood in the bread line at the shelter. The clergyman asked the undertaker, "Wait. Possibly I can find out who he is."

Many a nameless grave has been averted by Father Gibson, and, no doubt, if this "fair haired, fine look-ing young man," as he described him, remained unclaimed, he found a rest-ing place—and not in Potter's field.

This job meant the sacrifice of a successful commercial business, but Father Gibson holds no regrets—the successful carrying out of Jesus' teachings has been sufficient recom-pense.

"Does it not wear on you?" he asked. "This constant hearing of the discouragements and sorrows of oth-ers?" With head slightly bowed and a smile on his face, he answered: "No, I could not let it. When I close my desk at night—that is the end un-til the next day."

BANK REWARDS EMPLOYES WITH THEATER PARTY

Eight employés of the Garfield State bank, 4010 West Madison street, the winners of the Christmas Savings club drive, were fêted at a theater party which started at the Illinois the-ater and ended with a supper at the Stevens hotel, Tuesday evening. Thomas R. Heany, vice president of the bank, was host.

The winning team was made up of the following bank employés: John G. Swenson, captain; Wilbert Wasson, Miss Betty Mulcahy, Rudolph Barrett, Miss Florence Gallagher, Charles Cas-mano, Peter Nardi, Clarence Ferguson, and Alfred Bratlee.

The drive for Christmas club mem-bers started Nov. 15, and Mr. Heany, in charge of the drive, set his mark to eclipse the official record of 4,200 mem-berships. At the end of the drive, Jan. 19, the combined efforts of the teams showed a record breaking total of 7,016 subscriptions.

The judges in the contest were Lee Klein, Thomas J. Lynch, and Judge Francis B. Allegretti.

AIM AT LASTING BENEFIT FOR DOWN AND OUTS

"Don't picture the Cathedral shelter as a mere flop of the philanthropist where down and outs are fed and clothed for a while, until, being no better than before, they are cast back again upon society," said the Rev. GUARD DIVISION CLEANS RIFLES FOR INSPECTION

Enlisted Men Draw Lots for Night Flights.

Illinois National Guardsmen are shining up their bayonets and cleaning their rifles these days in preparation for the annual general armory inspection.

Every unit in the 33d division and attached troops is to be inspected, both as to efficiency in drill and condition of uniforms and ordnance.

Among the outfits which will receive the "double O" next week are division special troops, 108th Medical regiment, 33d Tank company, and 108th Observation squadron.

108th Observation Squadron.

Enlisted men of the 108th Observation squadron are given a taste of night flying before the drill periods Thursday evening in the recently inaugurated night flying activities of the 33d division air service. The names of two passengers are drawn from a hat the week before. The commissioned personnel takes turns in giving the men short training flights over the blinking city.

With two of the latest type of planes, Douglas 02Hs, already in the two modern hangars at the Municipal airport, the squadron is awaiting the arrival of three additional Douglases form Santa Monica, Cal. Lieut. Wilson V. Newhall, engineer officer of the squadron, expects to leave for California soon to bring the first of the three new planes here. Capt. C. A. McElvain, operations officer, and Maj. Merrill D. Mann Jr., commanding officer, brought the first two through from California several months ago. The other air equipment in the squadron consists of one PT training plane and a Douglas 02C.

Despite the icy condition of the runways at the field, the organization has put in many hours in the air in training and cross country missions during the last month.

Lieut. N. B. Clinch flew to Springfield a day or so before the inauguration of Gov. Emmerson, to visit with Adjt. Gen. Carlos E. Black. After returning to Chicago Lieut. Clinch flew to Kansas City and visited Fort Leavenworth before the return hop.

Maj. Mann and Capt. V. L. McElvain, accompanied by Lieut. Jean Fogle, commanding officer of the photo section of the squadron, flew to Culver City, Ind., where the latter's son is in school. They landed on the fast frozen ice of Lake Maxinkuckee, an excellent airport in winter, they said.

202d Coast Artillery.

A veritable foreign legion exists in the 202d's ranks of anti-aircraft gunners.

One might saunter into C Battery's quarters at the Broadway Armory and there encounter Corp. Reginald Major, a smiling little "limie" from dear old Blighty. He will show you his honorable discharge from the 5th battalion, Somerset light infantry, British territorial forces.

Just next door, in the dugout of Battery B, Capt. George F. Gorey will introduce you to Private Fred C. Kober, former German soldier, who served with the Death Head Hussars of the Crown Prince Frederick Wilhelm during the world war.

Than there is Corp. Patrick J. Hannan, who saw service in the 2d Munster fusiliers at Tralee, County Kerry, Munster, Ireland.

Private N. V. Noble served a hitch with the 55th division, Royal Field artillery, British territorials.

Private Roy Middleton was initiated to rookiedom in the 2d infantry, Australian Military Citizens forces.

132d Infantry.

Private Harry Bolan, Company B, 132d infantry, has received his honorable discharge to enlist in the regular army.

Sergt. Earl F. Loftus, company B, 108th engineers, has been transferred in grade to company G, 132d infantry. Sergt. Loftus served with Capt. Peter Staniszeski and First Lieut. Herbert Rommel of company G, during the World War.

First Sergt. Lloyd Hackley, company K, 132d infantry, has been assigned as regimental recruit instructor in addition to his other duties. This work was formerly done by Sergt. Timothy Shea, U. S. army, retired, who, on account of other business, was forced to give it up. First Sergt. Hackley recently passed the entrance examination for admittance to West Point. He will leave for that school about March 1.

First Lieut. Nicholas Doyle has been appointed captain, medical corps, and assigned to medical detachment, 132d infantry. Capt. Doyle is a practicing physician.

124TH FIELD ARTILLERY.

William J. Rannels is the latest officer to be commissioned in the 124th Field artillery. He was commissioned second lieutenant and assigned to battery E, Lieut. Rannels is a graduate of Purdue university, where he was cadet captain. He preferred to accept a second lieutenancy in an active organization to holding the reserve commission in a higher grade.

The Non-Commissioned Officers' club of Battery F, gave its annual dance in its club rooms at the armory.

131ST INFANTRY.

Dr. Rufus Allen White addressed the officers and non-commissioned officers of the regiment at one of their periodic get-together dinners at the armory, 16th street and Michigan avenue, Friday. Maj. Gen. Joseph B. Sanborn [retired], world war leader of the regiment, and Brig. Gen. Abel Davis were guests of honor. Eddie and Fannie Cavanaugh provided their usual clever entertainment.

"I KNOW What the Sunday Tribune's 1,251,304 Circulation Means in Sales Power!"

—says

a Neighborhood Merchant who spent $6.60 for his first Ad— and doubled his business in one year!

S. E. HILLMAN, owner of the Marbro Fur Shop, 4126 West Madison Street, decided in July, 1927, to find out what Sunday Tribune advertising could do for his business. As a try-out he spent $6.60 for a 20-line advertisement in the Metropolitan Section.

The ad paid. He tried another—and it paid, too. He ventured a larger one, and again it paid. Then he tried a still larger one, until he was running 100 and 200 line advertisements regularly.

His business grew to a point where he could handle no more until he enlarged his shop!

"My business last year showed an increase of 100% over 1927," said Mr. Hillman. "But this increase didn't cost me a cent. My advertising in the Sunday Tribune paid for itself as it went along."

Every merchant and retailer in Chicago, no matter what the size of his business or his pocketbook, has the same opportunity to duplicate Mr. Hillman's success. The last barrier—the cost—has been swept aside. By taking advantage of the specially low rate in the Metropolitan Section you can place a strong, business-pulling offer before practically every family on your side of the city with money enough to make good customers. You can make your ads pay for themselves in new business from the start, just as Mr. Hillman did.

There's no fuss, no bother, no details to take your time. If you wish, the Tribune will help you in the preparation of your ad and make any necessary drawings without cost. All you have to do is decide to make a start.

Call Superior 0100 early tomorrow morning. Ask for "Local Display" and say that you would like to find out more about Sunday Tribune advertising in the Metropolitan Section. No obligation to you whatever. Tear out the memo coupon now so that you won't forget to take the step that will make 1929 your banner year!

TRIBUNE STARTS MODEL AIRPLANE ARTICLES FEB. 17

Youngsters Are Invited to Join League.

Starting next Sunday, THE TRIBUNE is going to help boys and girls engage in that most fascinating of sports, airplane model building and flying—to find out, first hand, just the things that make airplanes soar and sail and swoop—to join a national league of airplane model enthusiasts — to compete in contests that will lead to local and national championships, handsome trophies, medals, certificates, and other awards—and, for three national champions, free trips to Europe!

MERRILL HAMBURG.

THE TRIBUNE is sponsoring the activities of the Airplane Model League of America, in coöperation with representative newspapers throughout the nation and the American Boy Magazine. It has arranged with Merrill Hamburg, secretary of the league, for a series of weekly articles telling exactly how to build and fly brand new airplane models—gliders, pushers, championship outdoor models, record-smashing indoor models, exact-to-scale replying models. Through these articles Chicago aviation enthusiasts will be enabled to construct the best models known to the science.

"Fine Lessons in Aviation."

"Building and flying models is the finest way I know to learn the fundamentals of aeronautics," says William B. Stout, president of the league. Mr. Stout is designer of the famous Ford-Stout all metal trimotor monoplane, and he started model building thirty years ago. He ought to know!

"But model articles aren't all that THE TRIBUNE is offering. Everybody who is interested in the sport may join the A. M. L. A.—the accompanying coupon tells how—and get the official membership card and button.

"All members of the league may make use of its free question and answer service—they'll find out about this invaluable feature when the first article is published.

"They may compete in official contests to be held here in Chicago, and the winners here will be sent to Detroit to compete in the Second National A. M. L. A. contests to be held in June by The American Boy.

"They may earn honor certificates for meritorious work in building models.

"And in their work they will have the backing of William B. Stout, the league's president; Commander Richard E. Byrd, now exploring the white Antarctic by air, who is honorary president; and the following vice presidents, all aviation notables: Clarence Chamberlin, New York-to-Germany flyer; Maj. Thomas G. Lanphier, former commander of the famous First Pursuit squadron; Eddie Rickenbacker, America's premier ace; Eddie Stinson, twice holder of the world's endurance record in the air.

First Step in Joining League.

"The first step for boys and girls who want to help themselves to become more air-minded is to join the league. Clip the coupon, fill it in and mail it, following the instructions it gives. It will bring back the membership card bearing the signatures of Commander Byrd, Mr. Stout and Mr. Hamburg, and the membership button.

"Then watch for the first article. It will describe a dandy beginning model—an all-wood glider that is easy to construct and a cinch to fly. The article will tell, too, how to obtain materials for building the glider and other ships to follow in the series.

"When the series of articles has been completed, there will be local contests to determine the local champion in outdoor and indoor model flying, and in scale model building. There will be valuable prizes in these contests—watch THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE for details of them. There will be junior and senior contests—in all probability the junior contest will be open to those 16 years old or younger, and the senior to those between 17 and 21.

"Then, following the local contests, trips to Detroit for the winners!

"And what fun the hundreds of entrants in the national contests will have!

"There will be banquets and night flying and exhibitions and other entertainments by the dozen," says Griffith Ogden Ellis, editor of The American Boy and general chairman of the second National A. M. L. A. contests. "Detroit has a thousand interesting sights for its visitors, and we plan to make it possible for champions from all over the country to take full advantage of them.

Trips to Europe Offered.

"And there will be, of course, the official national airplane model contests. Boys will compete for the Stout indoor trophy and the national outdoor trophy, as well as for the scale model championship. Winners of all three contests will win trips to London and Paris, with all expenses paid and with an adult in charge of the party.

"In each class of each contest, moreover, there will be trophies, medals, certificates—more than 400 awards in all."

Outdoor and indoor championships will go to the builders whose models make the best endurance records.

The scale model championship will go to the builder of the model most closely corresponding in scale dimensions and appearance to the large ship after which it is copied. It is not necessary for scale model builders to go to Detroit—they may enter their models by mail if it is impossible for them to attend in person.

Great news, isn't it? Model airplane builders of Chicago may win one [or two or all three!] of those championships. Watch for the first article.

Walton League to Meet.

The Northwest chapter of the Izaak Walton League of America will meet next Thursday at Mayfair community house. Charles Boos, newly elected president, will have charge of the meeting.

Carl A. He plans to erect a six story department store building at Laramie and Chicago avenues and is now negotiating for a long time lease with a well known department store.

Readers are requested to keep their eyes open for the billy goat of Walter Held, the hardware man, of Desplaines. It disappeared one day last week and has not since been seen. Walter acquired it two years ago as a pet for his three children, Wilbur, David and Miriam. They had become very fond of it—P. S.: The telephone rang at this juncture and Mrs. Held informed us the billy goat had been recovered. It had wandered over to a nearby farm. Readers therefore will kindly disregard the item.

LITTLE do folks of Logan Square realize," says our good friend and neighbor, Will J. Reading, "that in Mack J. Becker, the genial butcher, for three years located at 3416 Fullerton avenue, they have a neighbor who in his halcyon athletic days was one of the star baseball catchers of the northwest and west side diamonds. For five years Mack served as first string catcher for the Evergreens and other fast local baseball clubs, and this summer he plans on getting in touch with Tom McKean, Hank Haff, the tire man, and other live wires of the street to form a business men's golf club."

Mr. and Mrs. Isadore Shatzman of 549 North Central avenue announce the engagement of their sister, Jeannette Bass, to Mr. Joe Benamy, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Benamy of Paris.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Rys of 4221 Potomac avenue are proud of their daughter, Eleanor, who was graduated last week from the Austin high school, in the February class. Eleanor has demonstrated outstanding ability in drawing, and captured first prize in a contest in which the entire school participated. She also had a cartoon in the January issue of the school paper.

It is pleasant to think that Mr. and Mrs. George Hansen, who have just celebrated their 33d wedding anniversary, have occupied the home at 2526 Colvin street all their married life and in it reared eleven children. These include eight sons—Lawrence, Arthur, Chester, Victor, William, Sievert, Arnold, and Warren; and three daughters—Isabell, Annie, and Loretta.

Considerable business activity is reported. Louis Schlesinger has opened his fifth meat market at 1037 North California avenue; it being 18 years since he started his first venture at Milwaukee and Armitage avenues. Benjamin Weiner has opened a first class drapery and curtain house at 4820 Milwaukeb avenue, Jefferson park.

The annual Saint Valentine's dance given by the sophomores of Maine Township High school took place last night in the gymnasium of the school. Those on the committee for general arrangements were Mary Stewart, chairman; John Rietz, Robert Gairing, Donald Kallman, and Helen Schock. Annette Wolfram was chairman of the decorations committee and students helping her were Charles Brown, Caroline Freese, June Gordon, Eugene Fischer, Ruth Sloan, and Ruth Mikkelsen. Gay posters have decorated Maine High for weeks. Georgia Greene, Barbara Coffy, and Dorris Day were the youthful artists.

The trustees of Chicago Public library will be asked to build a branch in the 35th ward by thousands of residents who are now signing a petition for that purpose being circulated by Ald. George Seif. The petition will be sent to library officials within a few days, according to the alderman.

More than 4,000 children attending public schools in the ward have no access to a library and the ward has an estimated population of 59,614, Ald. Seif said.

LUCREZIA BORI SINGS IN FAMILY PARTY TOMORROW

English Composer Also on the Program.

Modernism in music—the kind of modernism that puts the drama and poetry and romance of song uppermost—will be the keynote of the family party program tomorrow over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station, on the Drake hotel, when Lucrezia Bori, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, and Eugene Goossens, the famous English composer and orchestra director, will be introduced as guest stars.

Lucrezia Bori is becoming known throughout the world as one of the greatest of singing actresses and likewise one of the finest of vocal artists. Born in Valencia, Spain, and inheriting an understanding of poetry and rhythm for music that is latent in the Spanish people, she developed a voice and fame as an interpreter of character in song at the age of six.

For many years the secret of Bori's wide operatic repertoire puzzled her parents and critics, and was only explained after she had achieved world fame. It seems that the Bori residence in Valencia was directly across the street from the opera house. Each night at about the time the operas were scheduled to begin, the child's parents would send her upstairs to bed.

They always were surprised that she went without any complaint, but they did not know at the time that as soon as she was left to herself she would crawl out of bed to a balcony which overhung the narrow street and was only a few feet from the opera house. There she would lie absorbing the music until she heard her parents start upstairs at their bed time. Then she would scamper into bed and pretend to be asleep. In this way, she learned most of the operas as a child.

Bori's ability to express the meaning of musical emotions of all types was made manifest immediately after she had made her debut on the operatic stage and all Europe hailed her as a new type of singer.

England has long been faintly knocking at the doors of musical recognition but only recently has there been any decided English music. This accomplishment is due directly to the efforts of a few composers foremost among whom is Eugene Goossens. He is credited with having the most acute poetic feeling and delicate expression in his many compositions. When the Eastman Foundation of Rochester was established, Goossens, who had already become noted throughout Europe as an orchestral director as well as a composer, was invited to take charge of the orchestral department. He has been in America but a few years but has impressed himself most favorably on the musical world of this country. He will be heard as director of the orchestra and will probably present some of his own compositions.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

ONE heap big advantage of the radio we have never appreciated until recently is the absence, while enjoying a radio performance, of the many annoyances of the theater, principally the army of coughers.

Radio listening has spoiled us for the theater. Congratulate yourself, if you will, when you are enjoying an evening with the radio again, that you are isolated from the numerous coughers and wheezers who sit all about you in the theater—the squeaky aisles under the feet of the late comers—the idiots who giggle or honk at the wrong time all through the show—and the bum seats away off on the side where you can see and hear nothing.

A year ago every performance in the exquisite répertoire of the New York Theater Guild at the Studebaker theater was spoiled for us by late comers galumphing down the squeaky aisles. "Boots, boots, boots, boots, tramping over Africa." How we wished it were a radio performance, where we could sit in quietude!

Last week, at "Macbeth," we were sold impossible seats up front, but so far to one side that we could catch neither glimpse nor sound of the proceeding on the stage. Protesting to the box office, we were given a box, and then the fun began. Every time Macbeth, Macduff, or Lady Macbeth uttered one of the old familiar lines, a veritable tornado of coughing rumbled over the vast auditorium. "Out, damned spot"—[cough, cough!]—"Tomorrow, and tomorrow, and tomorrow"—[hacking and coughing and clearing of a thousand throats]—"The labor we delight in physics pain"—[Kerchoo — cough — cough — cough!].

We think the radio audience has never stopped to appreciate the clear and perfect reception that is theirs when they receive performances from a radio studio—words and music—with none of the cacophonic irritations that beset them, and the actors, too, in the theater.

THE SLEEPYTOWN EXPRESS.

Just beyond the rainbow's rim a river rippled down
Beneath a bridge, around a bend, and flows through Sleepytown—
Through Sleepytown, where goblins toil to fashion wondrous toys
And make up fascinating games for little girls and boys.
And little autos, just the size for little hands to drive,
Await to whirl you all about as soon as you arrive.
But no one ever is allowed in Sleepytown, unless
He goes to bed in time to take the Sleepytown Express!

I know a foolish little boy who always starts to whine
When he is asked to trot upstairs before it's half-past nine.
And often he will stamp his feet and shake his tousled head,
And make a racket, even then, when he is sent to bed.
Of course, when he has said his prayers it always is too late
To catch the Sleepytown Express—it starts at half-past eight.
And so, in all his long, long life—he's five years old next fall—
That little boy has never been to Sleepytown at all.

But other wiser little boys, and little girls as well,
As soon as 8 o'clock has struck rush right upstairs, pell-mell,
Get off their clothes and say their prayers, just of their own accord,
And, when the train comes rolling in, they're there to climb aboard.
Then through a long, delightful night they wander up and down
And have a most exciting time in queer old Sleepytown;
And not for cake or anything that children could possess
Would any of them ever miss the Sleepytown Express!

WE KNOW that Master Pat Forbes, 6 year old author of Rockford, Ill., will not mind our publishing his story of Dr. Tidd. It is so truly and childishly naïve, so like all stories composed by authors of his age. We had asked the children to use the words, "Dr. Tidd," "hunting," "book," "radio" and "bridge" in original stories. And here is Pat's:

"Doctor Tidd went a-hunting and he took his gun. He packed up. Then he spied a rabbit. Then he had to cross a bridge and he aimed very carefully at him—the rabbit. But the rabbit didn't see him. And he went and shot the rabbit. Then he saw a fox. He aimed at the fox. The fox was so sly that he saw the man aiming at him and he ran as fast as he could. The man shot him and had to run very far across the bridge. He ran into the desert, where the fox was.

"He said, 'My dog, you catch that rabbit.' And the dog caught the rabbit. But he had to run to a bridge and ran across it. When he found the rabbit he saw a tree with a rabbit running around in the tree. And he sneaked up in the tree and you see the rabbit was making so much noise that he couldn't hear the man sneaking up to the hole in the tree. And he shot the rabbit in the hole in the tree. But you see the rabbit was making so much noise with the squirrel as his company that he couldn't hear the gun go bang!

"He went to the tree and caught the rabbit. Then he went home with his gun, his dog, his things that he shot and his wife said, 'You shall have a good dinner with me and we shall eat the things that you shot.' Then he went to work and he worked and he worked and he worked. And when he went home he had his supper. Then he went to bed and slept very well. Then that is the end."

Static.

DID YOU ever see a statue whose clothes fitted him?

One half the world never knows how many holes most men have in their socks.

It takes the average man one-half of his lifetime to afford the better things of life, and the other half to learn to pronounce them.

The government continues to remind us that the piped must pay the piper.

And some departments of the local government remind us that there is no accounting for wastes.

These are hard times for most of us; even February is short this year.

The worst part of being bald is that you can't tell your wife that it's hair tonic she smells on you.

ALL THROUGH her girlhood the little singer's held high hopes for her career on the concert stage. They even gave her a pretty name, Esmeralda Du Pont, so it would look well in electric lights and headlines. Then, when she finished her education, she crashed into international fame—as the "Sycamore Suspender Hour Soprano."

"KOLSTER Radio advertising must never make extravagant claims," was the principle laid down at Kolster's first advertising meeting years ago. ¶ And Kolster has stuck to this principle ever since—but Kolster owners have not. ¶ Their word-of-mouth advertising has been as generous as the quality in the radio. ¶ Ask any Kolster owner and you will get this convincing reply, "Yes, Kolster is a fine set." Then ask your dealer for a demonstration and let your decision rest on merit alone.

U.S. SOON TO HEAR CHAIN PROGRAMS FROM EUROPE

Recent Test Proves It Is Feasible.

The recent broadcast of a London concert over a country-wide network, including W-G-N, the Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, and 33 other KDC stations is regarded by engineers as successful enough to warrant hope that European programs on coast-to-coast American chains will be a fact before the end of the year.

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, consulting engineer and vice president of the Radio Corporation of America, which assisted in the rebroadcast, said that the experiment "foreshadows regularly scheduled radio broadcasting service across the ocean."

First Chain Rebroadcast.

The test program came unexpectedly on the heels of a prediction that the National Broadcasting company, working with the RCA, would broadcast a special program from England over a chain of stations this spring. While single American stations have rebroadcast the chimes of "Big Ben," in London, this rebroadcast was the first from abroad over a number of stations.

The rebroadcast followed three years of intermittent work by radio engineers and several months of intensive experimenting which had led to a conviction that short waves in the 24 meter band were most likely to be available because of their relative freedom from severe static.

A number of Chicago shortwave experimenters have been tuning in 5SW, a powerful station at Chalmsford, England, operating in that band and transmitting programs that 2LO, London, put on the air for British listeners.

Station 5SW is located 30 miles from London. It is operated, as is 2LO, by the British Broadcasting corporation, which has a radio monopoly in Great Britain and is a quasi-governmental institution.

The concert broadcast was by a symphony orchestra in London.

A wave length of 25.53 meters was used by 5SW. After crossing the Atlantic the radio impulses were picked up by the RCA experimental station at Riverhead, L. I., where a multiple antenna and multiple receiving set were used so as to mitigate the effects of "fading."

"This marks the birth of a real international understanding," declared M. H. Aylesworth, president of the NBC, as the switch opening the network to the British program was thrown. "It presages the end of misunderstandings between nations. It will go far toward promoting good will between America and Europe."

Dr. Goldsmith and O. B. Hanson, manager of the plant operations and engineering for the NBC, agreed that the test rebroadcast was a success.

Symphony Orchestra on Air.

W-G-N listeners heard most of the concert in London distinctly. There was considerable fading, and the tone was somewhat thin, due to the filtering conditions created in the hastily set up network. But the music came through clearly and distinctly, as did the voice of the London announcer when he said, "This is London calling. That ends this evening's concert." Clearly heard also was the burst of applause in the hall as the concert concluded.

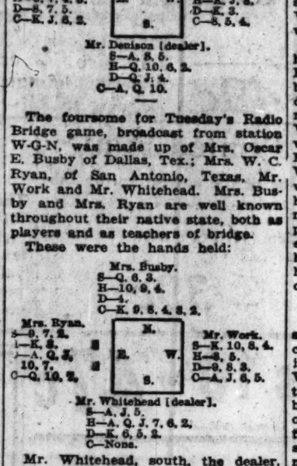
Serious problems remain to be solved before regular trans-Atlantic broadcasts both ways become a fact. The chief difficulty is the great difference in time.

Expert Demonstrates Brilliant Play in Radio Auction Bridge Game from W-G-N

The fourteenth of a series of twenty radio auction bridge games will be broadcast from W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, Tuesday at 8:30 o'clock.

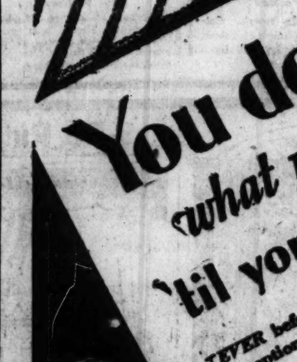
The contestants will be E. B. Dennison of Portland, Me., the outstanding bridge figure of northeastern New England, who is teamed with Mr. Whitehead against John C. Gardner of Brooklyn, one of the youngest of all bridge devotees to attain prominence as a writer on various phases of the game, playing with Mr. Work.

Following are the advance hands for game fourteen:



The foursome for Tuesday's Radio Bridge game, broadcast from station W-G-N, was made up of Mrs. Oscar E. Busby of Dallas, Tex.; Mrs. W. C. Ryan, of San Antonio, Texas, Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead. Mrs. Busby and Mrs. Ryan are well known throughout their native state, both as players and as teachers of bridge.

These were the hands held:



Mr. Whitehead, south, the dealer, opened the auction with one heart; Mrs. Ryan, west, bid two diamonds; and Mrs. Busby, north, passed. Although Mrs. Busby held the normal length of three cards of her partner's suit, which probably would be of use in ruffing diamonds, of which she had only a singleton, her side strength was only a king and a queen—insufficient to warrant an assist from one to two. Mr. Work, east, also passed. His spade suit was not strong enough to warrant a betterment takeout of his partner's diamond bid, for which he held normal support.

Mr. Whitehead, south, went to two hearts. Mrs. Ryan, west, said three diamonds—a bid justified by her four honors and the practical certainty of making her king of hearts. Mrs. Busby, north, bid three hearts, as her partner's rebid without any encouragement from her showed strength additional to that indicated by his initial bid. Mr. Work, east, went to four diamonds, an assist also warranted by his partner's rebid.

Four Hearts Doubled.

Mr. Whitehead, south, reasoned that with four diamonds in his own hand, and both of the adversaries bidding that suit, his own partner must be very short—probably void—of it, and consequently in position to ruff. Therefore, Mr. Whitehead bid four hearts.

Mrs. Ryan, west, doubled. Holding an apparently sure trick in hearts, considerable additional strength, and having a partner with some trick taking values, as shown by his assist, Mrs. Ryan's double was unquestionably correct. All passed, and Mr. Whitehead, south, became declarer with his contract four hearts doubled.

Mrs. Ryan, west, the initial leader, had the choice of three opening plays. Her own suit of diamonds was headed by ace-queen. Her partner assisted diamonds on the second round and might hold the king. If not, then Mr. Whitehead, south, probably held it, with protection. In that case Mrs. Ryan saw that if she led her ace Mr. Whitehead's king would become a winner. To prevent such possible happening, Mrs. Ryan avoided a diamond opening, and selected spades in preference to clubs. She led the 9 of spades. Mrs. Busby, north, spread her hand for dummy, and Mr. Whitehead, declarer, played from it the 3 of spades.

Must Ruff Diamonds.

Mr. Work, east, read Mrs. Ryan's 9 as the top of a short spade suit. It could not be her fourth best, as a 9 is not led as a fourth best card. When a 9 is fourth best of a hand then the three higher cards held must be honors, and a suit with three honors is opened by the lead of one of them. With the queen of spades showing in dummy, Mr. Work, east, marked declarer as holding the ace-jack. As the play of Mr. Work's king would make declarer's ace and jack and dummy's queen all winners, barring their being trumped, Mr. Work held off, playing the 4 of spades. Mr. Whitehead, declarer, won the trick with the jack of spades.

Studying his situation, Mr. Whitehead, declarer, saw he would have to ruff three diamonds in order to make his game contract. If he could do that, he might be able to limit his losses to three tricks—a heart trick [since the king was marked in the west player's hand], a diamond trick, and a spade trick. The lead of a trump would prevent the ruffing of three diamonds in dummy and thus stop game. Should Mr. Work, east, obtain the lead, his obvious lead would be a trump, because of dummy's singleton diamond. If Mrs. Ryan, west, were put in, she might not lead a trump, as it would cost her a trick to do so, if, as was possible, she had only two trumps to the king.

Brilliant Maneuver.

Mr. Whitehead, therefore, made a brilliant maneuver by leading the king of diamonds, quite naturally assuming that Mrs. Ryan, west, held the ace. Thus he planned to keep the lead from Mr. Work, east, while at the same time placing dummy in position to ruff diamonds. Mrs. Ryan, west, played the ace; dummy the 4; Mr. Work the 3.

Mrs. Ryan would have like to lead a trump to reduce dummy's ruffing possibilities, but was prevented by fear of sacrificing her king. She wanted to put her partner in, as she knew he would appreciate the necessities of the situation and would most certainly lead a trump through the declarer. Having figured out the probable spade situation, from her partner's low play to the first trick, Mrs. Ryan decided that her best chance to reach her partner was with a club. Therefore she led her queen of clubs. Dummy played the 2; Mr. Work the 5; and declarer won with the 2 of hearts.

Mr. Whitehead, declarer, then led the 2 of diamonds for a ruff in dummy. Mrs. Ryan played the 7; dummy trumped with the 4 of hearts; Mr. Work played the 8 of diamonds. Dummy returned the 3 of clubs; Mr. Work played the 6; declarer ruffed with the 8 of hearts; Mrs. Ryan played the 7 of clubs. Again declarer led a diamond, the 5 spot; Mrs. Ryan played the 10; dummy trumped with the 9 of hearts; Mr. Work played the 9 of diamonds. Dummy led the 4 of clubs; Mr. Work played the jack; declarer trumped with the 7 of hearts; Mrs. Ryan played the 10 of clubs.

Declarer led his last diamond, the 6 spot; Mrs. Ryan played the jack; dummy ruffed with the 10 of hearts; Mr. Work discarded the 8 spot of spades. Dummy led the 8 of clubs; Mr. Work played the ace; declarer trumped with the jack of hearts; Mrs. Ryan overtrumped with the king.

Mr. Work Praises Play.

Mrs. Ryan then led the queen of diamonds; dummy discarded the 9 of clubs; Mr. Work discarded the 10 of spades; declarer trumped with the queen of hearts. Mr. Whitehead, declarer, then led his ace of hearts, on which Mrs. Ryan played the 3 of hearts, dummy the king of clubs, and Mr. Work the 5 of hearts. Declarer then led the ace of spades, to which all followed, giving declarer his contract and game. Mr. Work, east, still held one trump, the 8 spot, which took the final trick.

Mr. Whitehead, declarer, scored 64 trick points for four hearts doubled; 50 points in the honor score for making his contract, and 40 for honors.

In his comments on the hand, Mr. Work praised highly the lead of the king of diamonds by declarer at trick two—the sort of play that seems obvious when it is made, but which, as a matter of fact, is the sort of play that marks the superexpert.

This same hand would be bid a little differently at contract. South would start by bidding two hearts; the hand is much too strong for a bid of one to furnish sound information to partner. West would doubtless bid three diamonds. North could furnish one raise for an initial two hearts. East would risk four diamonds. South would say four hearts. West would double. The play would be the same as in auction.

MISCHA ELMAN PLAYS TONIGHT IN KENT SERIES

Mischa Elman, considered by many critics to be the greatest violin genius, will broadcast a recital in the Atwater Kent Radio Hour tonight over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station on the Drake hotel.

This is the first broadcasting to which the Russian violinist has consented since returning from sixteen months in Europe, where he played 160 concerts in fourteen European countries. It is the second radio recital in his long career.

Elman was born at Tolna, Russia, son of Saul Elman, teacher of Hebrew, grandson of a locally famous violinist, and great grandson of a noted Talmudic scholar.

He began with the violin when he was five years old, immediately attracting the attention and assistance of Russian nobility. He was placed in the Odessa Imperial Academy of Music, and when ten years old was heard by the great teacher, Leopole Auer.

BETTER PLAN OF FINDING WRECKED SHIPS IS SOUGHT

Florida Was 150 Miles in Error.

Coöperation of two or more radio equipped ships to determine the position of a vessel in distress which cannot correctly give its own position is suggested by United States Commissioner of Lighthouses G. R. Putnam. According to Commissioner Putnam, when there is any doubt of the position of a ship sending out an S. O. S. the ship receiving the call should not depend upon its own radio bearings alone but ask other ships within range to also take bearings and report results with latitude and longitude from which the bearing is taken.

With this information, it is pointed out, a navigator can, by the method of cross bearings, plot on his chart the position of the distressed vessel. The accuracy of this position will, of course, be dependent on the relative positions of the ships, and the number of bearings reported, but in general it should give very promptly a position sufficiently close to enable the neighboring vessels to feel certain of the course to steer to render aid, and their respective distances.

This method is, of course, not necessary if the vessel in trouble knows its correct position, as then the rescuing vessel need only to lay its course by the radio bearing taken. But there will be cases, as in the recent notable rescue of the crew of the sinking Florida by the America, when there is so large an error in the supposed position, in this case 150 miles, as to cause confusion.

There are other cases on record of large errors in reported positions of vessels, especially of smaller craft which may have been navigated for some days under difficulties. The suggestion above is for a somewhat further development of the most valuable radio bearing method of reaching a sinking vessel, which has been used in recent years in a number of remarkable rescues, including that of the Antinoe, by Capt. Fried. The suggestion is simply an application to such a rescue problem of known methods of hydrographic surveying and navigation.

The constant increase in the radio installations on ships, and the improvement in radio efficiency, are having the effect of saving from the sea the crews of many vessels which before the days of radio would oftentimes simply have been reported missing.

McKINLEY HIGH STUDENTS LEARN THEIR NEW SONG

"McKinley," new school song, composed by William Schuessler, civics teacher and director of the Harmony Girls' Glee club, was introduced to the student body at two assemblies last week in the school auditorium, 2040 West Adams street. After Morris Hoffman played the song on the violin and the girls' glee club sang it, the words were flashed upon the screen and the entire student body joined the glee club in singing it.

The words and music are being printed with a cover bearing the colors and emblem of the school.

GARFIELD CLUB DELAYS ACTION ON "L" HIGHWAY

Board of Directors Presents 1929 Program.

Six major and several minor improvement plans, comprising the initial program for 1929, were presented by the board of directors of the Garfield Park club, through its president, George P. Madigan, at a meeting last week at 4151 West Madison street.

First among the larger projects was the proposed west side elevated highway, to extend from the city limits on the west to some point downtown as yet not designated. The Chicago plan commission originated the plan and the west park board is sponsoring this highway with the view of operating it as part of its system.

The officers and directors of the Garfield Park club expressed the view that it is too early to approve or disapprove such an action, but that the club would support all projects that will benefit the west side when it has been definitely established they will be done in such a manner as not to impose too heavy a burden on residents and business houses.

Discuss Vacant School Property.

The second item of importance presented to the club was the matter of the vacant school property which extends north from Madison street at Laramie avenue and as far south as Roosevelt road, extending in some places solidly from Cicero avenue to Central avenue. It was suggested that the organization appeal to the city council to take action looking to the sale of the land to organizations that will develop it.

Mr. Madigan said it was the hope of the club that at some time in the near future a residential section would be developed in a part of the Chicago and North Western yards.

"A through street for north and south traffic is of prime importance to the west side," he said. "In the case of the removal of the North Western yards, this thoroughfare would be located somewhere between Hamlin avenue and the Belt line, and extend on the south to Ogden avenue and on the north to Milwaukee avenue. Springfield or Kostner avenue would probably be the through street.

Plan Conference on Parking.

"There is a difference of opinion in regard to the parking problem on Madison street. The time allotted is short and although the present system has been successful the directors will confer with Capt. Charles McGurn of the Fillmore police station, to see if some measure cannot be undertaken for temporary relief.

"With traffic in the west side on the increase and the numerous robberies, it is readily understood that more police are needed. A conference with the deputy commissioner will be held in the hope of obtaining an increase for our section of the city.

"In the event of a traction settlement Madison street will probably be continued to Maywood, and meantime the club will make another appeal to the representatives of the Chicago Surface Lines for their approval of the continuation of Springfield avenue to Lake street."

ALBERT GALVANI HEADS SENIORS AT CRANE TECH

It was off with the old and on with the new at Crane Technical High school as the February class was graduated and the June class started its final semester under the guidance of its new officers.

Albert Galvani, president, is also vice president of the Hi-Y and has been a class officer for two years. He is a member of two honor societies as well, the Owl club and the Triangle club.

The new vice president, Phillip Collas, also a class leader for several semesters, is an athlete as well. Isadore Lubin has been class treasurer for so long it has become a habit. He is also manager of the basketball team.

Edward Porella, secretary, and Herbert Kent, sergeant-at-arms, have both distinguished themselves in athletics.

Under the faculty adviser, Miss Mary Reynolds, the class of '29 hopes to continue along its way, which will lead eventually to graduation in June and the honor of being for the moment the "best class ever graduated from Crane."

RIDES BICYCLE 8,000 MILES IN 18 STATES; SPENDS ONLY $98

Eight thousand and forty-nine miles on bicycle, a road trip of eight months and seven days through eighteen states and two provinces of Canada on an expense of $98, is the accomplishment of Fred McKinney, 20 years old, of 1123 North Keystone avenue.

FRED McKINNEY

Tanned and hardened by his 250 days of constant roadwork in changing weather conditions, the young cycler believes that he got as much benefit from the trip as he would have received from two years of school.

McKinney left Chicago, May 24, 1928, and after a tour of the west coast up 400 miles into the wilds of Canada, as far south as the border of Mexico he came back by way of the middle western states to arrive here on Jan. 21. He took with him $140 and returned with $42.

He slept out of doors most of the time and made his own meals from groceries carried in his knapsack. A cattle stampede, a ski meet, and the desert country of the Redlands were some of the high points of his trip. He collected seals and signatures, and displays proudly the names of many prominent men in his little book.

West Central Body Opposes Fulton Route.

with their bond issue," he said. "And the buildings which would spring up along the ramps would add sufficient taxes to retire the bonds within a few years."

A resolution adopted by the West Central association set forth its reasons for favoring the Congress street route. This street was regarded by the late D. H. Burnham, originator of the Chicago plan, and still is regarded as the logical street for a great artery to the west side, the resolution says. Selection of any other route would be in direct opposition to the plan now being carried out by the commission.

It would also be in opposition to the unanimous recommendation made by the Chicago Institute of Architects last spring, the resolution states.

Edward H. Bennett, consulting engineer for the plan commission, was unable to attend the meeting, but wrote the following to Guy Cramer, manager of the association: "It is refreshing and reassuring to know that your board of directors earnestly urges adherence to the original Chicago beautiful plan. In my judgment the main elements of that plan are demonstrably as sound from a city planning point of view, economically, as when first proposed."

Other speakers included Congressman James T. Igoe, Christian P. Paschen, building commissioner, and Clinton F. Hicks of the American Type Founding company.

Birk Installed as President.

Homer J. Buckley, retiring president of the association, acted as toastmaster. He ushered Frank J. Birk, the new president, into office.

Other officers for the ensuing year are: First vice president, E. L. Lordell; second vice president, Bernard A. Eckhart; third vice president, J. Beidler Camp; treasurer, Harry N. Grut; consulting engineer, Edwin Hancock; general counsel, John G. McDonald; and secretary-manager, Guy Cramer.

Directors are Frank J. Birk, Homer J. Buckley, A. B. Dick Jr., Milton S. Florsheim, John L. Fortune, J. X. Galvin, Harry N. Grut, J. W. Hastie, James T. Igoe, B. F. Kent, Gordon E. Keogh, Arnold K. Marks, Allen B. Ripley, H. T. Smith, and J. P. Strickland.

W. H. N. SHIPMAN NAMED TO HEAD ELMHURST C. OF C.

W. H. N. Shipman was elected president of the Elmhurst Chamber of Commerce in a recently completed mail ballot.

William J. Reinhold was chosen first vice president; Joseph Reilly, second vice president; and A. N. Hammerschmidt, treasurer.

New directors were elected as follows: E. J. Bunge, H. C. Hesse, C. L. Huebner, J. C. Licht, M. C. Lockwood, H. H. Robillard, Ray J. Soukup and W. S. Weller.

Dr. Grace E. Munson to Address P.-T. Association

Dr. Grace E. Munson of the bureau of child study of the board of education, will speak on child psychology at a meeting of the Amelia Dugne Hookway school and branch Parent-Teacher association to be held in the assembly hall, 81st and La Salle streets, on Wednesday. Mrs. E. C. W. Hillman, a member of the Daughters of the American Revolution, will present a George Washington prayer table to the school. The pupils will give a short program, followed by a social hour.

TRIBUNE STARTS MODEL AIRPLANE ARTICLES FEB. 17

Youngsters Are Invited to Join League.

Starting next Sunday, THE TRIBUNE is going to help boys and girls engage in that most fascinating of sports, airplane model building and flying—to find out, first hand, just the things that make airplanes soar and sail and swoop—to join a national league of airplane model enthusiasts — to compete in contests that will lead to local and national championships, handsome trophies, medals, certificates, and other awards — and, for three national champions, free trips to Europe!

MERRILL HAMBURG.

THE TRIBUNE is sponsoring the activities of the Airplane Model League of America, in coöperation with representative newspapers throughout the nation and the American Boy Magazine. It has arranged with Merrill Hamburg, secretary of the league, for a series of weekly articles telling exactly how to build and fly brand new airplane models—gliders, pushers, championship outdoor models, record smashing indoor models, exact-to-scale nonflying models. Through these articles Chicago aviation enthusiasts will be enabled to construct the best models known to the science.

"Fine Lessons in Aviation."

"Building and flying models is the finest way I know to learn the fundamentals of aeronautics," says William B. Stout, president of the league. Mr. Stout is designer of the famous Ford-Stout all metal trimotor monoplane, and he started model building thirty years ago. He ought to know!

But model articles aren't all that THE TRIBUNE is offering. Everybody who is interested in the sport may join the A. M. L. A.—the accompanying coupon tells how—and get the official membership card and button.

All members of the league may

One of our leading institutions will be honored Friday night with suitable ceremonies by the South Shore Woman's club at the Windsor Shore clubhouse, 7526 Yates avenue. Friend husband, we mean. He will be celebrated in song and speech for those qualities that have endeared him to all and made him an indispensable fitment of the American home with modern conveniences. The occasion will be known as Gentlemen's night, we learn from Mrs. Emma Padley, and is the social event of the year. Refreshments will be served, there will be dancing, and a good time is in store for everybody.

Lowell Zippel forwarded us an item last week regarding the Park college glee club which arrived too late for publication in the issue of Feb. 3. It was an advance notice of a concert promoted by the men's club of the Roseland Presbyterian church to be held Friday, Feb. 8, at the South End Pythian temple. Wherefore, past tense mention is the only accommodation we can now extend to it. We regret this, Mr. Zippel, as much as you do and will you kindly present our regards to Mr. William A. Borden and the Rev. Alva V. King?

ENGLEWOOD HIGH GREETS O'HEARN, NEW PRINCIPAL

Promises Continuance of Armstrong Policies.

Flowers, letters and telegrams from friends all over the city and good wishes and smiles from members of the faculty and student body greeted Daniel F. O'Hearn last week when he arrived at Englewood High school, 63d street and Stewart avenue, to take up the position of principal.

James E. Armstrong, who retired Feb. 1 after serving as principal for more than 37 years, was not at Englewood to welcome Mr. O'Hearn, but a letter from "Jimmy" told the new principal that he was happy to have a man of Mr. O'Hearn's ability become the head of the school for which he had given his life's work to make one of the outstanding institutions in Chicago.

Adopt Armstrong Program.

In a short address to members of the faculty who had gathered to welcome him, Mr. O'Hearn said that he would carry out the plans for running the school that were suggested to him by Mr. Armstrong.

"Your wonderful welcome," said Mr. O'Hearn, "has taken me completely by surprise. I half expected that you would be angry with me for sitting at the desk that Mr. Armstrong used for 37 years. However, I am glad to be here and I will try to fulfill the expectations of the officials of the board of education, who appointed me, and those of Mr. Armstrong, who expressed his pleasure that I had been appointed.

"Mr. Armstrong has done everything to start me off right. There is nothing he has left undone. Today I feel like the fifth wheel of an automobile."

First Taught at Mark Sheridan.

Mr. O'Hearn began his teaching career at Mark Sheridan school, 28th street and Wallace avenue, in 1896. He taught at that school for three years. He was transferred to Corkery school, 25th street and Keeler avenue, and after teaching there for four years he was appointed principal.

He has been principal of Mason school, 13th street and Keeler avenue; Lawson school, 13th street and Homan avenue, and he left Wescott Junior High school, 81st street and Normal avenue, to become principal of Englewood.

SPORT CARNIVAL BOOSTS $50,000 LINDBLOM DRIVE

Alumni and Students Compete in Athletics.

An array of former Lindblom football heroes, champion swimmers, wrestlers, fencers and dramatic stars "passed in review" before more than 2,000 students and alumni last night in a combination athletic carnival and musical program, sponsored by the Harry Keeler foundation, in the Lindblom auditorium, 62d and Lincoln streets.

An "all American" football team, composed of former Lindblom students who have become famous fighting on the gridiron for many of the Big Ten universities, was one of the outstanding features of the program. Among those who were named on the team and who made speeches, urging that the students and alumni support the foundation fund, were: Walter Marks, and Kenneth Rouse, former captains of University of Chicago football teams; Russell Crane, captain elect of the University of Illinois team; Herman Anderson, captain elect of the Northwestern university team; Adolph Lewandowski, who played on the University of Nebraska team, and Sigmund Griecus, who starred for Purdue university last year.

Predicts $50,000 Fund in 1930.

Other speeches were made by Harry Keeler, principal, and Henry Weihofen vice chairman of the foundation. They outlined the work of the foundation and how the money will be used to provide scholarships. Mr. Keeler predicts that the $50,000 fund which the organization is working toward will be completed by 1930.

The musical program was presented by the girls' and boys' glee clubs. One of the surprise numbers, the new alma mater song, "Lindblom's Tribute of Love," written by Mr. Keeler and Miss Mary E. Courtenay, dean of girls, was applauded by the audience.

Another feature of the musical program was a novelty sketch, "Avalon Town," presented by the girls' seven piece orchestra, under the direction of Miss Mabel A. Wach. Veryna O'Leary, Margaret Willman and Frank Grabower sang.

Alumni and Students Compete.

The sports program included fencing bouts between Walter Eisen and Edward Holmberg, representing the alumni, and Julius Szidak and John Lecture, representing the undergraduates, and a feature boxing match between Crane of Illinois and Griecus of Purdue. A gymnastic exhibition presented by Coach H. Smidl's classes concluded the athletic program.

John Stoffey and James Houlihan headed the committee in charge of arrangements for the affair.

ANSWERS

Following are the answers to quotations previously published:

Answer—This phrase was used by Abraham Lincoln in the first campaign speech he ever made. It was in 1832, when he was 23 years old and a candidate for the legislature of Illinois. The incident is mentioned in Wayne Whipple's "The Story Life of Lincoln." Whipple quotes from T. P. O'Connor's "Some Old Love Stories." According to O'Connor, it was Lincoln's "maiden effort on the stump, made at Pappsville, a village eleven miles from Springfield. The full speech, given by O'Connor, is as follows:

"Fellow citizens, I presume you all know who I am. I am humble Abraham Lincoln. I have been solicited by many friends to become a member of the legislature. My politics are short and sweet, like the old woman's dance. I am in favor of a national bank. I am in favor of the internal improvement system and a high protective tariff. These are my sentiments and political principles. If elected, I shall be thankful; if not, it will be all the same."—A. A. Freedlander, Allerton house, 701 North Michigan avenue, Chicago.

NOTE.—This first campaign of Lincoln for a public office occurred shortly after he had returned to New Salem from the Black Hawk war, in which he was chosen a captain of volunteers, but saw no fighting. He was defeated at the polls and entered an unsuccessful storekeeping venture. Two years later, however, he was elected to the legislature. His delivery of the above speech is verified by Herndon and by Nicolay and Hay.

Quotation—You can fool all the people some of the time, and some of the people all of the time, but you can't fool all of the people all of the time.

Answer—During the Lincoln-Douglas debates of 1858, which marked the senatorial campaign between Lincoln and United States Senator Stephen A. Douglas, Douglas made the attempt to fix on Lincoln, by documentary proof, the charge of abolitionism which he had been making for some time. He read a set of resolutions which he said had been adopted at a convention in Springfield in 1854, in which a radical anti-slavery group voted Lincoln to be "of their stripe."

Lincoln replied, denying subscribing to or being present at the adoption of the resolutions, but it was a halting disavowal with no proofs. However, a lively young Chicago reporter, Robert Hitt, discovered the "set of resolutions," whether known or not to Douglas, to be a set adopted at an entirely different meeting.

Lincoln's supporters cried "Forgery," and the incident led to a growing doubt of Douglas. Hence it was while further refuting the charges of Douglas that Lincoln, in his speech at Clinton, Ill., on Sept. 8, 1858, used and made famous the above quotation. For a long time Lincoln was accepted as the author of the statement, but it has since been established as an expression borrowed by him from the witty philosopher, P. T. Barnum (1810-1891), a contemporary and keen sympathizer with Lincoln. Barnum at this time was lecturing in England.—Mrs. Gladys M. Still, 4643 Massachusetts street, Gary, Ind.

NOTE.—To prove her point, Mrs. Still exhibits a letter received from an informant in Washington, D. C., three years ago, when she was having an argument with a friend in Denver as to the authorship of the expression. The information comes from the library of congress, as follows: "P. T. Barnum is accepted as the author of the expression. Lincoln has been called the author, but this has since been denied. It is said to have been quoted by Lincoln in his speech at Clinton." There is some doubt, however, as to whether Lincoln ever used this exact expression, although several who heard the speech have said that he expressed a similar thought.

Quotation—Now he belongs to the ages.

Answer—Five days after Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox Court House President Lincoln met with his cabinet to discuss plans for reconstruction. That was Good Friday, April 14, 1865. In the afternoon he and Mrs. Lincoln took a drive through the parks of Washington. That night they went to Ford's theater, where "Our American Cousin," a comedy, was being performed.

As the President, Mrs. Lincoln, and their guests, Miss Harris and Maj. Henry Rathbone, daughter and stepson of Senator Harris of New York, entered the box, the orchestra struck up "Hail to the Chief," the actors stopped, and the audience rose, applauding and cheering.

About 10 o'clock an actor, John Wilkes Booth, called by historians a fanatical secessionist, entered the President's box by the back door, which he barred. Standing behind the President, he shot him in the head with a pistol. The President fell forward. Maj. Rathbone attempted to grapple with the assassin, who slashed him with a knife. Booth then leaped upon the stage. His spur, however, caught in the American flag draped around the box, and in his fall his leg was injured. Shouting "Sic semper tyrannis!" he strode across the stage and disappeared. Eventually he was trapped in a burning barn in Virginia and killed.

In the theater there was grief and consternation. The President was carried to the house of a Mr. Petersen, across the street from the theater. All night he lay unconscious. As the day dawned his pulse grew weaker, and at 7:22 a. m. he died. When the strong heart ceased to beat it was Edwin M. Stanton, secretary of war, who broke the silence with the words, "Now he belongs to the ages."—Miriam M. Whitehead, the Greenwood inn, Evanston, Ill.

(In addition to a description of Lincoln's death another contributor has told something about the life of Secretary Stanton. That part of his answer is deemed worthy of a prize. It is given below.)

Answer—Edwin McMasters Stanton (1814-1869), a native of Ohio, was a noted lawyer before he became a cabinet officer. Before the civil war Stanton was a Democrat, opposed to slavery but a firm defender of the constitutional rights of the slave holders. He was a bitter opponent of Lincoln, whose party he hated and distrusted.

In the reorganization of President Buchanan's cabinet in 1860 Stanton became attorney general. Although he had often violently denounced President Lincoln, the latter saw in him a good war minister and in January, 1863, invited him into the cabinet. In his administration of the war office Stanton was vigorous, rigid, and often harsh, but he kept the armies in the field well equipped and infused energy into procrastinating generals.

Remaining in the cabinet of President Andrew Johnson after Lincoln's assassination, Stanton clashed with Johnson over reconstruction policies and was suspended. The senate refused to concur in the suspension and Stanton was returned to his duties. When the senate's impeachment proceedings against Johnson failed, Stanton resigned. In 1869 he was appointed justice of the United States Supreme court, but he died four days after his appointment.—Leon Leibik, 3315 Douglas boulevard, Chicago.

LAUNCHES MOVE FOR PLAYGROUND AT 41ST-WABASH

A playground for children of the Third ward is now being considered by the city council committee on finance as a result of action by Ald. Robert R. Jackson last week. He recommended purchase by the city of a site at the southeast corner of 41st street and Wabash avenue.

"There is no playground in this vicinity," the alderman said, "and children of the neighborhood must either go a half mile away from home for a good place to play or run about in the street. Streets in this district are dangerous because of the heavy traffic."

"A site 300 by 175 feet in size might be acquired by purchasing this property, which contains only two or three houses more than 50 years old," he concluded.

VOICE of the SOUTH SIDE

LIKES ALDERMANIC NEWS.

Chicago, Feb. 5.—I noticed in the SUNDAY TRIBUNE that some one has objected to the policy of the paper in printing news of aldermanic candidates and I want you to know that this reader is very much interested in all of the aldermanic news which you have printed and that a lot of my friends are also.

As a true nonpartisan who votes for the best man instead of a political machine, I can say that the news thus far has been very fair and impartial. My only objection is that you have not printed enough news about the aldermen because I think this election is one of the most important that the city has ever had. I believe that now is the time to kill off the political machine that have been responsible for the present district graft and other conditions.

WOMEN DEMAND ALDERMAN WHO WILL AID SCHOOLS

Mrs. Bailey Reviews 7th Ward Needs.

Selection of an aldermanic candidate who will be sympathetic toward the school needs of the Seventh ward is the aim of the women's division of the South Shore Nonpartisan association, Mrs. Edward S. Bailey, general chairman, declared in an address at the first regular meeting of the women at Raphael's restaurant, 79th street and Stony Island avenue, last week.

Asserts Ward Is Slighted.

"There is no phase of public administration which is in a more pitiable shape than the school conditions of the Seventh ward at this time," said Mrs. Bailey. "While schools have been under construction with tremendous seating capacities in all other sections of the city, additions to the rapidly developing territory of South Shore have been practically at a standstill.

"The conditions in the local high schools are particularly unfortunate. The Hyde Park High school has an enrollment of more than 5,000 children, with a proper seating capacity for only 2,200. The Bowen High school has an enrollment this semester of more than 3,000 children and has accommodations for only 1,400. Improper ventilation, portable school houses, and congested conditions are endangering the health of our young manhood and womanhood. If the women will not take an interest in this condition, no one can be expected to."

Some of Women Attending.

Among those who attended the meeting were: Mrs. Le Roy W. Cook, Mrs. David Millar, Mrs. A. W. Garrett, Mrs. Ruth Allen, Mrs. M. Anderson, Miss Kate Mulloy, Mrs. John Mangan, Mrs. Vera Westfall, Mrs. Matilda Barlow, Mrs. Minnie Krause, Mrs. Etta Kwaak, Mrs. Florence Cashin, Mrs. Allie McWhorter, Mrs. Cora Gotchall, Mrs. Julia Tobin, Mrs. Josephine Crawley, Mrs. Anna B. THROUGH LANE MOVE DEFENDED BY MEYERING

Charges Attempt to Mislead Constituents.

Attacks by opponents of Ald. William D. Meyering [8th] on the ground that the ordinances which he introduced in the city council recently designating 71st and 76th streets as "through streets" would force large special assessments on property owners and would benefit only real estate men were declared false by the alderman yesterday.

"Whoever is passing out such information," he said, "is trying to mislead the people. Any one who knows a thing about city business can tell you that 'through streets' are maintained out of the vehicle tax fund. If you own an automobile, your city license fee helps to maintain 'through streets' all over the city.

"My enemies are charging that I introduced this ordinance to benefit real estate people, and that I am a friend of real estate brokers. An active alderman is always a friend of the real estate broker.

"Real estate can be sold to best advantage when streets and sidewalks are paved and when street lights are installed. My ward has three times as many people in it today as it had six years ago, when I was first elected. Real estate men tell me that this is due to the fact that improvements have been made rapidly."

SCHOOL OPENING STRESSES NEED OF BIRTH REPORT

Many Mothers Find Children Unrecorded.

Scores of mothers who stormed the health department offices in the city hall at the beginning of the school term last week in quest of birth certificates which would allow their children to enter school discovered that the youngsters' arrivals had not been officially recorded.

Three out of every hundred children born in Chicago are unable to prove their birth and are headed for considerable embarrassment and trouble, Health Commissioner Arnold H. Kegal said. Failure to report a birth is the fault of the attending physician or midwife, who is required by law to make a report within ten days. But they forget, or neglect to do so in hundreds of cases, the commissioner said, and should be reminded by the parents.

Experience of the health department during the last few years has indicated that while residents from all parts of the city find themselves in the same plight during the annual invasion of the health department for certificates, the greatest number are from the near south side, the near west side, and the section immediately north of the loop.

Many of the anxious mothers will be back at the department in a few years when they say that Johnny or Jimmy is 14 and should get a working certificate. The child labor law requires that a birth certificate must be presented in requesting permission to work.

A plan for making a double check on birth registration is now being put into effect by the department, according to the commissioner. As soon as notice of a birth is received the person recording it will receive a card acknowledging receipt of the notice, and giving the spelling of the name as interpreted by the clerks.

Registration is also important to the mother, it is pointed out, because she receives thereafter monthly letters from the health department on the care of the baby.

GROUP OF 1,100 SUPPORTS CALL FOR MORE POLICE

Asserts Plenty Patrolmen Prevent Crime.

"Plenty of uniformed men on the streets at all hours will prevent crime of every type," George F. Beck, president of the East Hamilton Park Home Owners' association, told Commissioner of Police William F. Russell last Wednesday.

"The consensus in this district is heartily in accord with your idea of increasing the man power of our city police force," he continued.

Seldom See Patrolman.

"We all know that we are not properly protected and cannot be with the number of men at your command. Our neighbors complain of not seeing a policeman on the streets, and on investigation at the station they were told that men are not available due to the shortage," Mr. Beck declared.

"You can count on every home owner of the association, which includes 1,100, as a booster for a bigger, I need not say better, police department, and our alderman will be notified of our desire."

"It would be the best investment the taxpayers could make," Adolph G. Kirbach, president of the Eighth Ward Business Men's association, asserted. "The safeguard of property and life with an adequate police force is something that the people of Chicago are entitld to."

Voice Demand to Aldermen.

That every alderman on the south side has been informed of the stand of his constituents for more adequate police protection has been attested to by officers of business and civic groups throughout the district.

The South Central association, according to William J. Maresh, executive secretary, has written to every alderman, not only on the south side but in other parts of the city, on the subject of police protection, and has solicited their support of measures for a further increase.

Illinois National Guardsmen are shining up their bayonets and cleaning their rifles these days in preparation for the annual general armory inspection.

Every unit in the 33d division and attached troops is to be inspected, both as to efficiency in drill and condition of uniforms and ordnance.

Among the outfits which will receive the "double O" next week are division special troops, 108th Medical regiment, 33d Tank company, and 108th Observation squadron.

In the absence of Maj. Gen. Roy D. Keehn, who is on a visit to the west coast, Brig. Gen. Abel Davis is in command of the division.

Enlisted men of the 108th Observation squadron are given a taste of night flying before the drill periods Thursday evening in the recently inaugurated night flying activities of the 33d division air service. The names of two passengers are drawn from a hat the week before. The commissioned personnel takes turns in giving the men short training flights over the blinking city.

With two of the latest type of planes, Douglas 02Hs, already in the two modern hangars at the Municipal airport, the squadron is awaiting the arrival of three additional Douglases form Santa Monica, Cal. Lieut. Wilson V. Newhall, engineer officer of the squadron, expects to leave for California soon to bring the first of the three new planes here. Capt. C. A. McElvain, operations officer, and Maj. Merrill D. Mann Jr., commanding officer, brought the first two through from California several months ago. The other air equipment in the squadron consists of one PT training plane and a Douglas 02C.

Despite the icy condition of the runways at the field, the organization has put in many hours in the air in training and cross country missions during the last month.

Lieut. N. B. Clinch flew to Springfield a day or so before the inauguration of Gov. Emmerson, to visit with Adjt. Gen. Carlos E. Black. After returning to Chicago Lieut. Clinch flew to Kansas City and visited Fort Leavenworth before the return hop.

Maj. Mann and Capt. V. L. McElvain, accompanied by Lieut. Jean Fogle, commanding officer of the photo section of the squadron, flew to Culver City, Ind., where the major's son is in school. They landed on the fast frozen ice of Lake Maxinkuckee, an excellent airport in winter, they said.

Just next door, in the dugout of Battery B, Capt. George F. Gorey will introduce you to Private Fred C. Kober, former German soldier, who served with the Death Head Hussars of the Crown Prince Frederick Wilhel mduring the world war.

Then there is Corp. Patrick J. Hannan, who saw service in the 2d Munster fusiliers at Tralee, County Kerry, Munster, Ireland.

S. army, retired, who, on account of other business, was forced to give it up. First Sergt. Hackley recently passed the entrance examination for admittance to West Point. He will leave for that school about March 1.

TEACHES POLICE ABOUT HABITUAL CRIMINAL LAW

Lieut. Moss Shows Severe Penalty for Violence.

BY GEORGE WRIGHT.

Lieut. Stewart P. Moss, president of the Lieutenants' association and author of the Chicago police manual, has written a treatise on the old but seldom used habitual criminal act, which was recently ordered strictly enforced by Commissioner of Police William F. Russell and State's Attorney John A. Swanson. It is the lieutenant's purpose to inform his fellow officers concerning the effectiveness of the law passed in June, 1883, but only successfully enforced in one case in which Moss was the arresting officer.

"Although not known to the general public, and this includes some police officers, Illinois has a habitual criminal act far more drastic than either the much discussed Michigan or New York laws," said Lieut. Moss.

Life Term Among Penalties.

"The habitual criminal law is enacted to protect society against the habitual offender. Such persons, by repeated violations of the law, prove themselves a menace to society, and their persistent indifference and contempt of the law and of property rights of others necessitate an increased punishment, in many cases extending to life imprisonment.

"This is absolutely necessary for the protection of society, and acts of this kind do more to rid the state of such offenders than any efforts at reformation."

Lieut. Moss calls attention to the fact that the Illinois law is not one fashioned by fanatics, carrying life imprisonment for misdemeanors such as liquor law violations, but is a statute which deals severely with crimes of violence such as robbery and burglary.

Life for Second Conviction.

It is pointed out that robbery, for instance, carries on first conviction an indeterminate punishment of from one year to life in the penitentiary. Burglary is punishable by a similar sentence. The second conviction for either crime calls for incarceration for life.

Automobile theft, the foundation for most crimes of robbery, is punishable by a penalty of one to twenty years. The second conviction calls for the imposition of a definite twenty year sentence. The punishment for other crimes frequently committed, such as counterfeiting and forgery, carries fifteen year sentences for third convictions.

Asserts Jurors Must Know.

"Not only policemen, but jurors or prospective jurors as well should have these facts brought to their attention," said Lieut. Moss. "A recent order of Commissioner Russell calls the habitual criminal act forcibly to the attention of the police department.

"The greatest quality in a nation is justice, and properly to administer the fullest coöperation of the citizens. partment and judiciary should have the fulest coöperation of the citizens. All are equally essential. Coöperation of all parties makes them a tower of strength, lack of coöperation renders them ineffective."

Bryn Mawr Woman's Club Gives Benefit Bridge Party

Members of the Bryn Mawr Women's club gave a benefit bridge party Tuesday afternoon at the Shoreland hotel, 55th street and Hyde Park boulevard. Mrs. John Howatt, 6720 Merrill avenue, was chairman of the committee in charge of arrangements.

LINDBLOM STAR PREPARES FOR STAGE CAREER

Shakespearean Role Is Assigned to Her.

Miss Lillian Dubsky, 6058 South Troy street, who was graduated from Lindblom High school last February, will play the part of Titania, the queen of the fairies, in "A Midsummer Night's Dream." This play by Shakespeare will be presented by students of the dramatic art department of the Bush Conservatory of Music, under the direction of Elias Day next Thursday evening at the Eighth Street theater, Eighth street and Wabash avenue.

Led Class in High School.

Miss Dubsky, with an average of 95 for her four years of high school work, led her class in scholastic record when she was graduated from Lindblom. It was while she attended the school that she first became interested and took the leading rôles in the two senior plays, "If I Were King" and "Adam and Eve."

She also displayed oratorical ability. She was a member of the debating team and vice president of the debating society of the school and won the Union League club annual Washington's birthday oratorical contest in her sophomore year.

Devoted Herself to Study.

Extensive study in dramatic art has taken up most of her time since she was graduated from Lindblom. She has earned the money necessary to pay for her tuition at the school by giving professional readings before community organizations. She also had a small part in "Redemption," which was presented at the Woods theater a few months ago.

Arrangements have been completed for a dinner at the Southmoor hotel, 67th street and Stony Island avenue, in honor of the six remaining members of H. L. Drury post, No. 576, G. A. R. The dinner will begin at 6:30 o'clock. It will be followed by dancing. The event will be informal. Music and entertainment are promised. Edward Schneider is in charge of reservations.

Woodlawn post, No. 175, will have an Americanism program on Lincoln's birthday. The meeting will start at 1:30 p. m. in the post's new headquarters, 1208 East 63d street. Mrs. George Macauley, Americanism chairman, has arranged to have Fred E. Busbey, state Americanism officer of Illinois, as speaker for the occasion.

Chairman William Russakov of the entertainment committee of North Town post, 431, is giving an informal dinner-dance at the Chicago Town and Tennis club, Tuesday evening. A gala event is promised those who attend. The post has been promised two sketches from loop productions by Past Commander Martin Callahan of Galbraith post. Those in charge of picking up old newspapers and magazines in the district have reported favorably during the last two weeks, but their plea is still out for more papers. These papers are collected by the post every Saturday at different stations. North Town post is leading in the bowling tournament held by the seventh district. Athletic Officer Leonard Sachs, also coach of Loyola university, has the post basketball team in A1 shape and issues a challenge to any post which has a team entered according to the rules of the American Legion tournament.

A new membership record has been established by Chicago Elevated post, No. 184, with the signing up of more than 525 veterans among employés on the Rapid Transit lines. Commander George R. Apfel declares that the membership drive will continue until every veteran on the "L" has joined in helping put the department of Illinois over the top for 1929. An extensive program of social events is being undertaken by Elevated post this year as a means of stimulating interest in the legion and its activities. The latest affair was a gala dance and cotillion party, held in the Louis XVI. and Crystal ballrooms of Hotel Sherman last night. Among the features of an elaborate entertainment program was the appearance of radio stars.

Le Roy A. McCullough post, No. 233 will hold its regular meeting Feb. 12. There will be a Lincoln birthday party after the regular session, with entertainment and refreshments.

Thornton Anthony Mills will again be the speaker at the meeting of Advertising Men's post No. 38 on Monday at Hotel Sherman. Preliminary to the talk, parts of the patriotic movie, "The Eve of the Revolution," will be shown.

A uniformed color guard from Square post will present the colors, and Comrade Tom Doonan will give "Ode to the Flag." There will be entertainment and refreshments. On Friday evening, Feb. 15, the executive meeting of Square post will be held at Hamilton park fieldhouse.

"The Mark of a Veteran—Plus" in the lapels of 551 ex-service men of the Roseland district by midnight, Feb. 28, is the goal of Roseland post, No. 49. The drive starts Wednesday night with the opening of headquarters at 11311 South Michigan avenue. A parade by the drum and bugle corps will let the town know that something is going on. A big sign in the window will list paid-up members, and the names of new members will be added as they come in. Commander Ralph De Cook and Mrs. Fay Leith, president of the auxiliary, will have members on duty at headquarters day and night during the two weeks of the drive.

South Shore post, No. 388, is busily engaged in reënrolling its 1928 membership and adding new members with the expectation of increasing its membership 50 per cent for the next year. Commander Kemp and his aids have already made remarkable progress and are confident that all previous membership records will be surpassed this year. Among the attractive features sponsored by the post is its band composed of thirty members working diligently under the supervision of Commander Fred Hughton. The officers are: Edward Kemp, commander; John Michelis, senior vice commander; John Burns, junior vice commander; J. Lawler, finance officer; Alonzo Roach, adjutant, and Russell W. Root, advocate. On Saturday Fort Dearborn post, No. 268, is holding its first installation banquet and dance at the Wedgewood hotel, 64th and Woodlawn avenue. The officers of both the post and auxiliary unit will be jointly installed. David L. Shillingiaw, commander of the department of Illinois, and Mrs. Pearl Duncan, department president of the auxiliary, will be the installing officers. Past National Commander Howard Savage will deliver the address of welcome and Msgr. Dunne the invocation. The post is being presented with its national colors by the Woodlawn Business Men's association and is receiving its post colors from the Midway State bank. Theodor Becker, president of the Woodlawn Business Men's association, and Percy Wagner of the Midway State bank will make the presentation speeches. Other dignitaries will be present. The banquet will start promptly at 7:30 p. m. and the dancing at 10 p. m. Tickets can be procured from Willard C. Wakefield, Hyde Park 0228, or H. Jerome Kelly at Randolph 4752. The affair will, although informal, be an impressive and colorful occasion.

The anniversary of Abraham Lincoln's birthday will be commemorated by Peoples Gas Light and Coke post, No. 336, at its meeting on Tuesday in Peoples Gas building.

MOONLIGHT PICTURE WINS FIRST PRIZE

The first prize of $5 in The Tribune's contest for amateur photographers of the south side was awarded this week to G. H. Stewart, Flossmoor, for a remarkable moonlight picture. The picture resulted from an exposure of one and one-half hours, Mr. Stewart said. Barbara Warren, 7827 South Shore drive, won the second prize of $3 with "The Fireplace Nook." The third prize of $2 was awarded to Lillian Ingrisch, 8316 South Paulina street, for "Time to Retire," showing Joseph Stanley Hilton.

Cash Prizes for Amateur Photographs

Amateur camera artists may now see their favorite efforts printed in the Metropolitan section of The Tribune. Every week The Tribune will pay $5 for the best photograph taken by an amateur. It will pay $3 for the second best and $2 for the third.

Pictures should be taken in the Chicago area and home scenes will be given the preference. Send in that snapshot of Mary playing with her toys or grandpa sitting by the fire smoking his pipe, of Tom and Jack and their snow man.

Address all entries to Photo Contest, Metropolitan Section of the Tribune.

The name and address of the photographer should be written plainly on the back of the print as well as the names of all persons in the picture.

The contest is open only to amateurs and the editor will be final judge. Theme, treatment, and clearness of the print all will be taken into consideration. No pictures will be returned.

Charles J. Boyd to Address St. Leo Holy Name Society

Boyd, superintendent of the Illinois employment bureau and connected with the United States employment bureau, will be the speaker at the meeting of the St. Leo Holy Name society, tomorrow evening in the St. Leo auditorium, 79th and Peoria streets. Mr. Boyd is also the head of the St. Leo conference of the St. Vincent de Paul society. Last Wednesday evening the society sponsored a card party in the auditorium, the proceeds to be used for charity work in the parish.

WAR PILOT GIVES AVIATION COURSE AT FENGER HIGH

More than 150 Students Enroll First Week.

More than 150 pupils of Fenger High school, 112th and Wallace streets, have enrolled in the new elementary aeronautics course which opened Monday.

The aeronautics students of Fenger will be taught by Julian J. Sykes, former war pilot and for many years an air mail pilot. They will receive the benefit of his practical knowledge of airplanes, and his talks will be supplemented by work on two Curtiss planes which have been presented to the school by the National Air Transport company and six airplane motors that will be given to the school by the Great Lakes Naval Training station.

Almost Prepares for Flying.

Mr. Sykes said that after two or three semesters of class work, although there will be no flying experience, students will be so thoroughly acquainted with "ground flying" that only a few hours of actual experience with the controls in the air will be required before they may become licensed pilots.

The Curtiss planes which arrived last week are being taken apart and placed in the workshop by the students of the class. Mr. Sykes is explaining how the work of dismantling should be done and is allowing his pupils to take their time in doing it so that they may become familiar with the various parts.

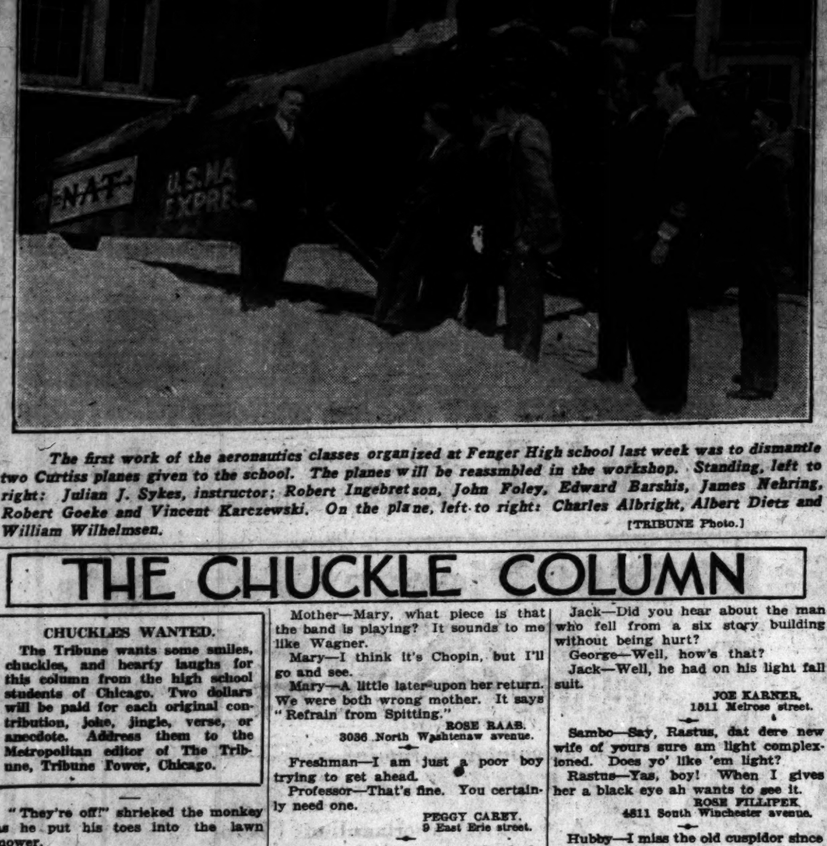
After the planes are in the workshop and the motors have arrived, class work will start in earnest, according to Mr. Sykes. Each pupil will be given something to work on and he will continue to work on that particular thing until he is thoroughly familiar with it. Written examinations will be had often and the students will be required to read extensively at home in order to pass these examinations.

200 Join Model Club.

Enthusiasm in aviation ran so high among the students of Fenger that even before any announcement was made in regard to organizing a class in aeronautics, a model airplane club, composed of more than 200 boys and girls, was formed last semester. Edward Smith, 12018 South La Salle street, is president of the organization.

The members of the club have made plans to erect an illuminated sign on the school roof as a route mark for mail pilots. They also expect to enter several model planes made by members in THE TRIBUNE model airplane contest.

Fenger Aviation Students Dismantle Planes



The first work of the aeronautics classes organized at Fenger High school last week was to dismantle two Curtiss planes given to the school. The planes will be reassmbled in the workshop. Standing, left to right: Julian J. Sykes, instructor; Robert Ingebretson, John Foley, Edward Barshis, James Nehring, Robert Goeke and Vincent Karczewski. On the plane, left to right: Charles Albright, Albert Dietz and William Wilhelmsen. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

TRIBUNE STARTS MODEL AIRPLANE ARTICLES FEB. 17

Youngsters Are Invited to Join League.

make use of its free question and answer service—they'll find out about this invaluable feature when the first article is published.

They may compete in official contests to be held here in Chicago, and the winners here will be sent to Detroit to compete in the Second National A. M. L. A. contests to be held in June by The American Boy.

They may earn honor certificates for meritorious work in building models.

And in their work they will have the backing of William B. Stout, the league's president; Commander Richard E. Byrd, now exploring the white Antarctic by air, who is honorary president; and the following vice presidents, all aviation notables: Clarence Chamberlin, New York-to-Germany flyer; Maj. Thomas G. Lanphier, former commander of the famous First Pursuit squadron; Eddie Rickenbacker, America's premier ace; Eddie Stinson, twice holder of the world's endurance record in the air.

First Step in Joining League.

The first step for boys and girls who want to help themselves to become more air-minded is to join the league. Clip the coupon, fill it in and mail it, following the instructions it gives. It will bring back the membership card bearing the signatures of Commander Byrd, Mr. Stout and Mr. Hamburg, and the membership button.

Then watch for the first article. It will describe a dandy beginning model—an all-wood glider that is easy to construct and a cinch to fly. The article will tell, too, how to obtain materials for building the glider and other ships to follow in the series.

When the series of articles has been completed, there will be local contests to determine the local champion in outdoor and indoor model flying, and in scale model building. There will be valuable prizes in these contests—watch THE SUNDAY TRIBUNE for details of them. There will be junior and senior contests—in all probability the junior contest will be open to those 16 years old or younger, and the senior to those between 17 and 21.

Then, following the local contests, trips to Detroit for the winners!

And what fun the hundreds of entrants in the national contests will have!

"There will be banquets and sight seeing and exhibitions and other entertainments by the dozen," says Griffith Ogden Ellis, editor of The American Boy and general chairman of the second National A. M. L. A. contests. "Detroit has a thousand interesting sights for its visitors, and we plan to make it possible for champions from all over the country to take full advantage of them.

Trips to Europe Offered.

"And there will be, of course, the official national airplane model contests. Boys will compete for the Stout indoor trophy and the national outdoor trophy, as well as for the scale model championship. Winners of all three contests will win trips to London and Paris, with all expenses paid and with an adult in charge of the party.

"In each class of each contest, moreover, there will be trophies, medals, certificates—more than 400 awards in all."

Outdoor and indoor championships will go to the builders whose models make the best endurance records.

The scale model championship will go to the builder of the model most closely corresponding in scale dimensions and appearance to the large ship after which it is copied. It is not necessary for scale model builders to go to Detroit—they may enter their models by mail if it is impossible for them to attend in person.

Great news, isn't it? Model airplane builders of Chicago may win one [or two or all three!] of those championships. Watch for the first article.

NEW FIRE HOUSE CITED AS PROOF CITY NEEDS MORE

Goodrich Favors Station at 99th and Ewing.

The new $90,000 fire station opened last week at 8118 South Ashland avenue remedied a condition in that district which is still present in many parts of the south side, according to Fire Commissioner A. W. Goodrich.

Since there was no station in that district prior to the opening of the new station, residents had to rely solely on the truck company at 69th street and Normal boulevard for protection in case of fire, he pointed out, while if that company were out, the next nearest station was at 60th and State streets.

First Day's Calls Show Need.

The fact that four calls were received at the new station on its first day of service shows the need for adequate fire protection in the thickly populated business and residential districts of the south side, he said. If the company had not been in service, at least ten minutes might have been lost in getting to the fire, this period of time often proving the difference between a small fire and a dangerous blaze.

The commissioner has recommended a site at 99th street and Ewing avenue for a prospective fire station, since this district presents the same condition as did the vicinity of the Ashland avenue station two weeks ago. He proposed housing a hook and ladder company on this site, which is already owned by the department.

Calumet River Causes Delays.

The nearest fire station to this point is at 93d street and South Chicago avenue, and is separated from the district to the south by the Calumet river. Delays are common in crossing the river, Mr. Goodrich said, since the bridge is opened often, delaying traffic at least five minutes. In case of a fire that time would be fatal.

Construction of a new station is imperative, he asserted, since of these two communities at least one is without fire protection every time the bridge goes up.

"Residents of these communities deserve the fire protection for which they pay taxes," Mr. Goodrich said, "and as soon as funds are available, we propose to erect a $60,000 station on the site in question."

CLUB FEDERATION SPONSORS PLAY BY JUDGE JARECKI

The American citizenship department of the Second congressional district, I. F. W. C., under the direction of the chairman, Mrs. Joseph Gleason, is sponsoring the play, "A Day at the Polls," to be given at Palmer park, 111th street and South Park avenue, Friday evening. Judge Edmund Jarecki, author of the play, takes one of the principal roles, assisted by twenty-three others from the election commissioner's office.

Mrs. James O'Connor, president of the Ken-Rose Woman's club; Mrs. Charles H. Brandt, president of the Roseland Woman's club, and Mrs. John G. Landsell, president of the West Pullman Woman's club, will be hostesses.

The Ken-Rose club juniors will give "Allegiance to the Flag," the West Pullman Woman's club chorus will sing, followed by selections by the Fenger High school band.

Parker Junior High P.-T. to Conduct Round Table

At the meeting of the Parker Junior High Parent-Teacher association next Wednesday Mrs. James Weir, 6616 Harvard avenue, president of the organization, will conduct a round table discussion of school questions. The glee club, conducted by Miss May L. Edwards, will sing and Mrs. Charles Elkington will give a few readings.

February brings two patriotic social affairs for members of DeWalt-Mechlin chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, the first a luncheon at the Morgan Park Baptist church, 110th street and Irving avenue, tomorrow in observance of Lincoln's birthday, and the second, a George Washington banquet for the charter members, their husbands and sons on Friday evening.

Mrs. H. Franklyn Prince of Evanston, founder of the chapter, will be a guest tomorrow. Luncheon hostesses for the day will be Mrs. Raymond S. Many of the members will be attired in colonial costumes and the tables will be decorated in red, white and blue.

The speaker, Mrs. Lelia M. Blomfield of New Zealand, will talk on "New Zealand's Message to America," followed by a program of organ music by Mark Hallett, 11323 Lothair avenue, and songs by Miss Patricia Hellwig, 10015 Longwood drive.

The banquet on Friday evening will be held at the Bethany Union church, 103d and Wood streets, and Miss Carolyn McIlvaine will speak on "Historical Chicago," and Otto F. Reich, 9403 Pleasant avenue, on "Indian and Pioneer Trails in the Fort Dearborn Area." Mrs. Frank Dudely, 10044 Hoyne avenue, will present a group of old time songs.

CALIFORNIA AVE. ASSESSMENTS ARE MAILED OUT

Assessment bills to property owners benefited by the proposed opening of California avenue at 49th street were mailed last week by the board of local improvements and are payable June 30, officials of the board announced yesterday. Work on the project will be started as soon as collections have been made.

It is planned to open the street under the Grand Trunk railroad between Kedzie and Western avenues, he points out. After the opening the alderman plans to lead a movement to make California avenue a boulevard south to Columbus highway at 75th street, forming a much needed north and south artery in this section.

119th St. Commercial Club to Give Lincoln Banquet

Five hundred members and their guests are expected to attend the men's monthly banquet of the 119th Street Commercial club Friday evening at Odd Fellows' hall, 600 West 119th street. The affair is to be a Lincoln banquet and the speaker will be Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom who will talk on the "Life of Lincoln."

Several musical numbers will be given at various intervals during the evening. Clarence P. Bayne is president of the organization and Charles W. Secord is serving as chairman of the reception and banquet committee.

LUCREZIA BORI SINGS IN FAMILY PARTY TOMORROW

English Composer Also on the Program.

Modernism in music—the kind of modernism that puts the drama and poetry and romance of song uppermost—will be the keynote of the family party program tomorrow over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE station, on the Drake hotel, when Lucrezia Bori, soprano of the Metropolitan Opera company, and Eugene Goossens, the famous English composer and orchestra director, will be introduced as guest stars.

Lucrezia Bori is becoming known throughout the world as one of the greatest of singing actresses and likewise one of the finest of vocal artists. Born in Valencia, Spain, and inheriting an understanding of poetry and rhythm for music that is latent in the Spanish people, she developed a voice and fame as an interpreter of character in song at the age of six.

For many years the secret of Bori's wide operatic repertoire puzzled her parents and critics, and was only explained after she had achieved world fame. It seems that the Bori residence in Valencia was directly across the street from the opera house. Each night at about the time the operas were scheduled to begin, the child's parents would send her upstairs to bed.

They always were surprised that she went without any complaint, but they did not know at the time that as soon as she was left to herself she would crawl out of bed to a balcony which overhung the narrow street and was only a few feet from the opera house. There she would lie absorbing the music until she heard her parents start upstairs at their bed time. Then she would scamper into bed and pretend to be asleep. In this way, she learned most of the operas as a child.

Bori's ability to express the meaning of musical emotions of all types was made manifest immediately after she had made her debut on the operatic stage and all Europe hailed her as a new type of singer.

England has long been faintly knocking at the doors of musical recognition but only recently has there been any decided English music. This accomplishment is due directly to the efforts of a few composers foremost among whom is Eugene Goossens.

Inside the Loud Speaker

BY QUIN RYAN.

ONE heap big advantage of the radio we have never appreciated until recently is the absence, while enjoying a radio performance, of the many annoyances of the theater, principally the army of coughers.

Radio listening has spoiled us for the theater. Congratulate yourself, if you will, when you are enjoying an evening with the radio again, that you are isolated from the numerous coughers and wheezers who sit all about you in the theater—the squeaky aisles under the feet of the late comers—the idiots who giggle or honk at the wrong time all through the show—and the bum seats away off on the side where you can see and hear nothing.

A year ago every performance in the exquisite repertoire of the New York Theater Guild at the Studebaker theater was spoiled for us by late comers galumphing down the squeaky aisles. "Boots, boots, boots, boots, tramping over Africa." How we wished it were a radio performance, where we could sit in quietude!

Last week, at "Macbeth," we were sold impossible seats up front, but so far to one side that we could catch neither glimpse nor sound of the proceeding on the stage. Protesting to the box office, we were given a box, and then the fun began. Every time Macbeth, Macduff, or Lady Macbeth uttered one of the old familiar lines, a veritable tornado of coughing rumbled over the vast auditorium. "Out, damned spot"—[cough, cough!]—"Tomorrow, and tomorrow, and tomorrow"—[hacking and coughing and clearing of a thousand throats]—"The labor we delight in physics pain"—[Kerchoo — cough — cough — cough!].

We think the radio audience has never stopped to appreciate the clear and perfect reception that is theirs when they receive performances from a radio studio—words and music with none of the cacophonic irritations that beset them, and the actors, too, in the theater.

THE SLEEPYTOWN EXPRESS.

Just beyond the rainbow's rim a river ripples down
Beneath a bridge, around a bend, and flows through Sleepytown—
Through Sleepytown, where goblins toil to fashion wondrous toys
And make up fascinating games for little girls and boys.
And little autos, just the size for little hands to drive,
Await to whirl you all about as soon as you arrive.
But no one ever is allowed in Sleepytown, unless
He goes to bed in time to take the Sleepytown Express!

I know a foolish little boy who always starts to whine
When he is asked to trot upstairs before it's half-past nine.
And often he will stamp his feet and shake his tousled head,
And make a racket, even then, when he is sent to bed.
Of course, when he has said his prayers it always is too late
To catch the Sleepytown Express—it starts at half-past eight.
And so, in all his long, long life—he's five years old next fall—
That little boy has never been to Sleepytown at all.

But other wiser little boys, and little girls as well,
As soon as 8 o'clock has struck rush right upstairs, pell-mell,
Get off their clothes and say their prayers, just of their own accord,
And, when the train comes rolling in, they're there to climb aboard.
Then through a long, delightful night they wander up and down
And have a most exciting time in queer old Sleepytown;
And not for cake or anything that children could possess
Would any of them ever miss the Sleepytown Express!

WE KNOW that Master Pat Forbes, 6 year old author of Rockford, Ill., will not mind our publishing his story of Dr. Tidd. It is so truly and childishly naïve, so like all stories composed by authors of his age. We had asked the children to use the words, "Dr. Tidd," "hunting," "book," "radio" and "bridge" in original stories. And here is Pat's:

"Doctor Tidd went a-hunting and he took his gun. He packed up. Then he spied a rabbit. Then he had to cross a bridge and he aimed very carefully at him—the rabbit. But the rabbit didn't see him. And he went and shot the rabbit. Then he saw a fox. He aimed at the fox. The fox was so sly that he saw the man aiming at him and he ran as fast as he could. The man shot him and had to run very far across the bridge. He ran into the desert, where the fox was.

"He said, 'My dog, you catch that rabbit.' And the dog caught the rabbit. But he had to run to a bridge and ran across it. When he found the rabbit he saw a tree with a rabbit running around in the tree. And he sneaked up in the tree and you see the rabbit was making so much noise that he couldn't hear the man sneaking up to the hole in the tree. And he shot the rabbit in the hole in the tree. But you see the rabbit was making so much noise with the squirrel as his company that he couldn't hear the gun go bang!

"He went to the tree and caught the rabbit. Then he went home with his gun, his dog, his things that he shot and his wife said, 'You shall have a good dinner with me and we shall eat the things that you shot.' Then he went to work and he worked and he worked and he worked. And when he went home he had his supper. Then he went to bed and slept very well. Then that is the end."

Static.

DID YOU ever see a statue whose clothes fitted him?

One half the world never knows how many holes most men have in their socks.

It takes the average man one-half of his lifetime to afford the better things of life, and the other half to learn to pronounce them.

The government continues to remind us that the piped must pay the piper.

And some departments of the local government remind us that there is no accounting for wastes.

These are hard times for most of us; even February is short this year.

The worst part of being bald is that you can't tell your wife that it's hair tonic she smells on you.

ALL THROUGH her girlhood the little singer's held high hopes for her career on the concert stage. They even gave her a pretty name, Esmeralda Du Pont, so it would look well in electric lights and headlines. Then, when she finished her education, she crashed into international fame—as the "Sycamore Suspender Hour Soprano."

"KOLSTER Radio advertising must never make extravagant claims," was the principle laid down at Kolster's first advertising meeting years ago. ¶ And Kolster has stuck to this principle ever since—but Kolster owners have not. ¶ Their word-of-mouth advertising has been as generous as the quality in the radio. ¶ Ask any Kolster owner and you will get this convincing reply, "Yes, Kolster is a fine set." Then ask your dealer for a demonstration and let your decision rest on merit alone.

Expert Demonstrates Brilliant Play in Radio Auction Bridge Game from W-G-N

The fourteenth of a series of twenty radio auction bridge games will be broadcast from W-G-N, The Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, Tuesday at 8:30 o'clock.

The contestants will be E. E. Dennison of Portland, Me., the outstanding bridge figure of northeastern New England, who is teamed with Mr. Whitehead against John C. Gardner of Brooklyn, one of the youngest of all bridge devotees to attain prominence as a writer on various phases of the game, playing with Mr. Work.

Following are the advance hands for game fourteen:

Mr. Whitehead.
S—K, 4, 3.
H—A, 5.
D—A, 10, 9, 6, 2.
C—9, 7, 3.

Mr. Gardner.
S—7, 2.
H—9, 7, 4, 3.
D—8, 7, 5.
C—K, J, 6, 2.

Mr. Work.
S—Q, J, 10, 9, 6
H—K, J, 8.
D—K, 3.
C—8, 5, 4.

Mr. Denison (dealer).
S—A, 8, 5.
H—Q, 10, 6, 2.
D—Q, J, 4.
C—A, Q, 10.

The foursome for Tuesday's Radio Bridge game, broadcast from station W-G-N, was made up of Mrs. Oscar E. Busby of Dallas, Tex.; Mrs. W. C. Ryan, of San Antonio, Texas, Mr. Work and Mr. Whitehead. Mrs. Busby and Mrs. Ryan are well known throughout their native state, both as players and as teachers of bridge.

These were the hands held:

Mrs. Busby.
S—Q, 6, 3.
H—10, 9, 4.
D—4.
C—K, 9, 8, 4, 3, 2.

Mrs. Ryan.
S—9, 7, 2.
H—K, 2.
D—A, Q, J, 10, 7.
C—Q, 10, 7.

Mr. Work.
S—K, 10, 8, 4.
H—6, 5.
D—9, 8, 3.
C—A, J, 6, 5.

Mr. Whitehead (dealer).
S—A, J, 6.
H—A, Q, J, 7, 6, 2.
D—K, 6, 5, 2.
C—None.

Mr. Whitehead, south, the dealer, opened the auction with one heart; Mrs. Ryan, west, bid two diamonds; and Mrs. Busby, north, passed. Although Mrs. Busby held the normal length of three cards of her partner's suit, which probably would be of use in ruffing diamonds, of which she had only a singleton, her side strength was only a king and a queen—insufficient to warrant an assist from one to two. Mr. Work, east, also passed. His spade suit was not strong enough to warrant a betterment takeout of his partner's diamond bid, for which he held normal support.

Mr. Whitehead, south, went to two hearts. Mrs. Ryan, west, said three diamonds—a bid justified by her four honors and the practical certainty of making her king of hearts. Mrs. Busby, north, bid three hearts, as her partner's rebid without any encouragement from her showed strength additional to that indicated by his initial bid. Mr. Work, east, went to four diamonds, an assist also warranted by his partner's rebid.

Four Hearts Doubled.

Mr. Whitehead, south, reasoned that with four diamonds in his own hand, and both of the adversaries bidding that suit, his own partner must be very short—probably void—of it, and consequently in position to ruff. Therefore, Mr. Whitehead bid four hearts.

Mrs. Ryan, west, doubled. Holding an apparently sure trick in hearts, considerable additional strength, and having a partner with some trick taking values, as shown by his assist, Mrs. Ryan's double was unquestionably correct. All passed, and Mr. Whitehead, south, became declarer with his contract four hearts doubled.

Mrs. Ryan, west, the initial leader, had the choice of three opening plays. Her own suit of diamonds was headed by ace-queen. Her partner assisted diamonds on the second round and might hold the king. If not, then Mr. Whitehead, south, probably held it, with protection. In that case Mrs. Ryan saw that if she led her ace Mr. Whitehead's king would become a winner. To prevent such possible happening, Mrs. Ryan avoided a diamond opening, and selected spades in preference to clubs. She led the 9 of spades. Mrs. Busby, north, spread her hand for dummy, and Mr. Whitehead, declarer, played from it the 3 of spades.

Must Ruff Diamonds.

Mr. Work, east, read Mrs. Ryan's 9 as the top of a short spade suit. It could not be her fourth best, as a 9 is not led as a fourth best card. When a 9 is fourth best of a hand then the three higher cards held must be honors, and a suit with three honors is opened by the lead of one of them. With the queen of spades showing in dummy, Mr. Work, east, marked declarer as holding the ace-jack. As the play of Mr. Work's king would make declarer's ace and jack and dummy's queen all winners, barring their being trumped, Mr. Work held off, playing the 4 of spades. Mr. Whitehead, declarer, won the trick with the jack of spades.

Studying his situation, Mr. Whitehead, declarer, saw he would have to ruff three diamonds in order to make his game contract. If he could do that, he might be able to limit his losses to three tricks—a heart trick [since the king was marked in the west player's hand], a diamond trick, and a spade trick. The lead of a trump would prevent the ruffing of three diamonds in dummy and thus stop game. Should Mr. Work, east, obtain the lead, his obvious lead would be a trump, because of dummy's singleton diamond. If Mrs. Ryan, west, were put in, she might not lead a trump, as it would cost her a trick to do so, if, as was possible, she had only two trumps to the king.

Brilliant Maneuver.

Mr. Whitehead, therefore, made a brilliant maneuver by leading the king of diamonds, quite naturally assuming that Mrs. Ryan, west, held the ace. Thus he planned to keep the lead from Mr. Work, east, while at the same time placing dummy in position to ruff diamonds. Mrs. Ryan, west, played the ace; dummy the 4; Mr. Work the 3.

Mrs. Ryan would have like to lead a trump to reduce dummy's ruffing possibilities, but was prevented by fear of sacrificing her king. She wanted to put her partner in, as she knew he would appreciate the necessities of the situation and would most certainly lead a trump through the declarer. Having figured out the probable spade situation, from her partner's low play to the first trick, Mrs. Ryan decided that her best chance to reach her partner was with a club. Therefore she led her queen of clubs. Dummy played the 2; Mr. Work the 5; and declarer won with the 2 of hearts.

Mr. Whitehead, declarer, then led the 2 of diamonds for a ruff in dummy. Mrs. Ryan played the 7; dummy trumped with the 4 of hearts; Mr. Work played the 8 of diamonds. Dummy returned the 3 of clubs; Mr. Work played the 6; declarer ruffed with the 6 of hearts; Mrs. Ryan played the 7 of clubs. Again declarer led a diamond, the 5 spot; Mrs. Ryan played the 10; dummy trumped with the 9 of hearts; Mr. Work played the 9 of diamonds. Dummy led the 4 of clubs; Mr. Work played the jack; declarer trumped with the 7 of hearts; Mrs. Ryan played the 10 of clubs.

Declarer led his last diamond, the 6 spot; Mrs. Ryan played the jack; dummy ruffed with the 10 of hearts; Mr. Work discarded the 8 spot of spades. Dummy led the 8 of clubs; Mr. Work played the ace; declarer trumped with the jack of hearts; Mrs. Ryan overtrumped with the king.

Mr. Work Praises Play.

Mrs. Ryan then led the queen of diamonds; dummy discarded the 9 of clubs; Mr. Work discarded the 10 of spades; declarer trumped with the queen of hearts. Mr. Whitehead, declarer, then led his ace of hearts, on which Mrs. Ryan played the 3 of hearts, dummy the king of clubs, and Mr. Work the 5 of hearts. Declarer then led the ace of spades, to which all followed, giving declarer his contract and game. Mr. Work, east, still held one trump, the 8 spot, which took the final trick.

Mr. Whitehead, declarer, scored 64 trick points for four hearts doubled; 50 points in the honor score for making his contract, and 40 for honors.

In his comments on the hand, Mr. Work praised highly the lead of the king of diamonds by declarer at trick two—the sort of play that seems obvious when it is made, but which, as a matter of fact, is the sort of play that marks the superexpert.

This same hand would be bid a little differently at contract. South would start by bidding two hearts; the hand is much too strong for a bid of one to furnish sound information to partner. West would doubtless bid three diamonds. North could furnish one raise for an initial two hearts. East would risk four diamonds. South would say four hearts. West would double. The play would be the same as in auction.

MISCHA ELMAN PLAYS TONIGHT IN KENT SERIES

Mischa Elman, considered by many critics to be the greatest violin genius, will broadcast a recital in the Atwater Kent Radio Hour tonight over W-G-N, THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE'S station on the Drake hotel.

This is the first broadcasting to which the Russian violinist has consented since returning from sixteen months in Europe, where he played 160 concerts in fourteen European countries. It is the second radio recital in his long career.

Elman was born at Tolna, Russia, son of Saul Elman, teacher of Hebrew, grandson of a locally famous violinist, and great grandson of a noted Talmudic scholar.

He began with the violin when he was five years old, immediately attracting the attention and assistance of Russian nobility. He was placed in the Odessa Imperial Academy of Music, and when ten years old was heard by the great teacher, Leopole Auer, who foretold Mischa's ensuing success.

U.S. SOON TO HEAR CHAIN PROGRAMS FROM EUROPE

The recent broadcast of a London concert over a country-wide network, including W-G-N, the Chicago Tribune station on the Drake hotel, and 23 other NBC stations is regarded by engineers as successful enough to warrant hope that European programs on coast-to-coast American chains will be a fact before the end of the year.

Dr. Alfred N. Goldsmith, consulting engineer and vice president of the Radio Corporation of America, which assisted in the rebroadcast, said that the experiment "foreshadows regularly scheduled radio broadcasting service across the ocean."

First Chain Rebroadcast.

The test program came unexpectedly on the heels of a prediction that the National Broadcasting company, working with the RCA, would broadcast a special program from England over a chain of stations this spring. While single American stations have rebroadcast the chimes of "Big Ben," in London, this rebroadcast was the first from abroad over a number of stations.

The rebroadcast followed three years of intermittent work by radio engineers and several months of intensive experimenting which had led to a conviction that short waves in the 24 meter band were most likely to be available because of their relative freedom from severe static.

A number of Chicago shortwave experimenters have been tuning in 5SW, a powerful station at Chelmsford, England, operating in that band and transmitting programs that 2LO, London, put on the air for British listeners.

Station 5SW is located 30 miles from London. It is operated, as is 2LO, by the British Broadcasting corporation, which has a radio monopoly in Great Britain and is a quasi-governmental institution.

The concert broadcast was by a symphony orchestra in London.

A wave length of 25.53 meters was used by 5SW. After crossing the Atlantic the radio impulses were picked up by the RCA experimental station at Riverhead, L. I., where a multiple antenna and multiple receiving set were used so as to mitigate the effects of "fading."

"This marks the birth of a real international understanding," declared M. H. Aylesworth, president of the NBC, as the switch opening the network to the British program was thrown. "It presages the end of misunderstandings between nations. It will go far toward promoting good will between America and Europe."

Dr. Goldsmith and O. B. Hanson, manager of the plant operations and engineering for the NBC, agreed that the test rebroadcast was a success.

W-G-N listeners heard most of the concert in London distinctly. There was considerable fading, and the tone was somewhat thin, due to the filtering conditions created in the hastily set up network. But the music came through clearly and distinctly, as did the voice of the London announcer when he said, "This is London calling. That ends this evening's concert." Clearly heard also was the burst of applause in the hall as the concert concluded.

Serious problems remain to be solved before regular trans-Atlantic broadcasts both ways become a fact. The chief difficulty is the great difference in time.

AND MEN INEXPERIENCED.
HARMON PROFITS.

You know us and our work. Briefly, we have developed twelve of the most beautiful home sections in Chicago—Chatham, Fields, Englefield, Southfield, Ravenswood Manor, Beverly Hills and others equally successful. Average yearly profits on these properties have been 17% to 146%. These developments with 244 others in the eastern part of the United States have established a 100% successful record for this organization, making sales assistance at a minimum. Our record will bear a most thorough investigation over a period of 42 years. Our clients have made money and our salesmen are making money now.

HARMON PROPERTIES.

The acquisition of new property which will soon be placed on the market compels us to enlarge our sales organization.

HARMON LEADS.

The men who qualify by convincing us that they are sincere in their desire to make a permanent connection and establish a profitable clientele, who have a record that will bear the closest investigation, and who are thoroughly convinced that Chicago real estate is the best investment in the world, will be given real leads that result in sales. After two weeks if we are convinced of your sincerity, we will be willing to assist you in other ways.

HARMON SUCCESS

is yours. An interview today will convince you. Act now.

STUDEBAKER COMMANDER. Late 5 pass. Big Six sedan. This is a duplicate of the record breaking car that went 25,000 consecutive miles at better than a mile a minute! It's in beautiful condition. The finish glistens like a new dollar. The expensive mohair upholstery appears new, and the tires have little mileage. 4 whl. brakes, snubbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Only $885—but worth twice as much!

PONTIAC LANDAU SEDAN. Finish is a beautiful sky blue. It's a recent model with many valuable extras. This Pontiac is in such fine condition no one could tell it was ever used. Only $595.

CHEVROLET SEDAN. Late model with 5 good tires, bumpers, and other extras. Attractive original paint; upholstery looks new. Motor is A1. Only $285.

MARMON COACH. One of the latest model st. sights. This is one of the snappiest looking cars in Chicago, and it has a world of power and pep. Finish is beautiful. 4 whl. brakes shock absorbers, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Tires are practically brand new. In fact this Marmon was only driven a few months. Now $985.

HUDSON BROUGHAM. This is an outstanding bargain if there ever was one. It's a very recent model that looks and runs as new as though direct from the factory. Has snubbers, bumpers, shutter front, 4 whl. brakes, etc. Beautiful upholstery. The finish is attractive. Can be obtained at a big discount.

STUDEBAKER COUPE. Recent standard 6; has thousands of miles of unused transportation. Extras are spotlight, bumpers, spare tire, etc. Will prove than satisfactory in appearance and performance. Only $545.

HUPMOBILE

Special Selling 8 Cyl. Models

Our record breaking sales of new Hupmobile Century 8s have naturally brought to us many Hupmobile 8s in trade. A number of them have had but slight use, their former owners buying other models more suited to their particular needs or merely fulfilling a desire to drive the very latest model out.

Hupmobiles are built for maximum mileage. In the models we offer the biggest percentage of this mileage is still unused; they have new car appearance in every detail, and mechanically will give new car satisfaction—but the cost to you is only a small part of the original selling price.

These Hupmobiles sold new for approximately $2,500; they still retain the prestige and performance found only in the finer make cars.

Come in—inspect them, and see what wonderful values they really are. We list a few.

Hupmobile 8 sedan, 5 pass. '25. Beautifully refinished in beige, the brown mohair interior is excellent. Has new Goodyear spare, snubbers, heater, stepplates, bumpers, etc. Mechanically A1. Without doubt the best buy in Chicago for $595.

Hupmobile 8 sedan, 5 pass., 1926. Wonderful appearance in new rich, blue duco, the brown mohair interior appears unused. Excellent tires, snubbers, stepplates, bumpers, etc. Mechanically will give new satisfaction. Priced very low at $695.

Hupmobile 8 coupe, 1926. Attractive rumble seat model. New car appearance in original dark grey and black finish, the rich grey mohair interior does not show a mark. Disc wheels with new Goodyears, spare, spotlight, winter front, snubbers, etc. The motor is powerful and speedy and in the very best mechanical condition. $750.

Hupmobile 8 de luxe sedan, 5 pass., 1926. Just from our shops where it was refinished in black, brightened by red striping and wheels. The splendid interior appears new. New Goodyears, spare, snubbers, bumpers, etc. Mechanically like new in every respect. Reduced to only $750.

Hupmobile 8 brougham, 1927. This desirable model has absolute new car appearance in original maroon, the luxurious interior shows little use. New tires, trunk, snubbers, bumpers, etc. You will be more than pleased with its wonderful mechanical condition. Now only $695.
